Are you shaking??

You gotta admit it though --He is the best! And by the way, never take this stuff too seriously because he doesn't. If you get upset he'll tell you you are thin skinned. You never see him get riled or threaten anybody-- right.

He's to cool and just having fun. Now I'm having fun too. He owns the Nazis and I own him! Just talk to someone he does't like and watch him go. He's all for free speech as long as you say what he likes.

Just like on the radio, all he can do is spew out "800 watts of pure sewage".

Have a nice night.

Ok, the stated premise is that the wealth was redistributed. Bill Gates now has assets of somewhere around $100,000,000,000 - who is now doing without that hundred billion?

> His money came from selling products that he was responsible for, as opposed > to other products, such as food, clothing, cars, televisions etc.

Actually, most of his money didn't come =from= anywhere. In fact, most of his wealth isn't money at all, but calculated by his stock holdings.

Consider Marc Andersson (or whichever variant of the name he uses) of Netscape fame:
He goes to bed the night before Netscape's IPO and really doesn't have a lot of money. The next day, trading opens, and his holdings are suddenly worth tens of millions - nobody gave him any money, but his wealth was suddenly created.

The other thing to consider is that every minute of every day our various mints and the treasury are creating more money - wealth created. (Which creates inflation, btw...)

But we digress. This topic should be moved to one of the economic discussion groups.

Whats this I hear? porkbut was also the main problem for the QRMing on the low end of the general portion of the 75 meter band, before the nonexsitant FCC crackdown. Did they find out his true colors? Is that why they tossed him from their assocations? Is that why he has gotton mad, now he calls them all kinds of bad names, and jams them every chance he gets! Did porkbut get caught stealing another radio? did porkbut sell another bad amp to one of the memebers of these orgs.? Did porkbut try to sell another bad radio to one of the memebers? Did they ban porkbut because he sold CB amps to the truckers as they passed though Easly on 85? I have heard all these things. I want hear your side of the story porkbut. Dick's right, and it has nothing to do with inflation, but it requires some background in economics to understand why this is so. Money is fungible, and elastic, each time it changes hands it has an economic effect. I can't give you an economics course in a post, but let me try to give an example which might make things a bit clearer. Lets suppose the government spends 1 million dollars a year in each of two different communities. In one community, it spends the money by giving 500,000 people each $2. In another community it buys 1,000 high tech widgets that cost $1,000 each from a local company. Which will have a bigger impact on the local economy?

You seem to be saying that the two expenditures will have the same effect, but they won't. In the first case, people will buy a hamburger, a pack of smokes, or a bottle of Ripple with their $2 windfall, and that's basically the end of the story. The money is dilute, and goes for basic items with little or no multiplier.

But in the second community the company hires engineers and production staff to make the widgets for the government. Each of those people make good money and buy a house, a car, furniture, a new TV, etc. The contractors building the houses, the car dealers, the furniture makers, etc all hire people to produce and sell these items to them. Those people in turn are able to buy relatively big ticket items too. So the dollars turn over in the economy several times over the course of a year instead of once or twice because the wealth is distributed in larger chunks and can have secondary and tertiary effects in the local economy as it cascades through it during the year.

In high tech high wage areas, the multiplier in the local economy is often seven times or more. You get a "boom town" built up around the high tech industry and the businesses which cater to the workers of that high tech industry. In low tech low wage areas (ie mill towns, farming areas, etc), or with poverty program giveaways, the multiplier is low, generally less than two, so those areas remain depressed compared to the other town, though the same amount of money has been injected into their economies by the government. The difference is that in the former case the money is in large enough lumps to generate job producing secondary and tertiary economic activity while in the latter case it is so dilute that it has little secondary and tertiary impact (or quickly becomes so concentrated in a few hands, ie the mill owner, the company store, etc, that it can't be spent again fast enough in the local economy to have a major impact).

Economists say that money has "velocity", meaning that it moves through the economy at a certain rate. Money in larger chunks retains its velocity better than money that's finely dispersed. It can be said to have an "inertia" proportional to the size of the chunks. This lets it have a bigger impact at each level as it cascades through the economy. There is a size that is so large that it can't easily make it through the porosity of the local economy, however. In other words, a rich man can only watch so many TVs, drive so many cars, or get so many haircuts. So the multiplier again falls when the chunk size passes a certain limit.

There's a size range where the money will retain maximum velocity in the local economy, and have the largest multiplier effect. This can be calculated fairly closely by econometric models. The peak is roughly when the primary wage generated by the injected capital is in the range of $50,000 to $150,000 a year. That's large enough to spur big ticket purchasing activity, but small enough that the money can easily be spent locally. It also happens to be in the range paid by makers of military hardware, which means that the government's buying of big ticket military goods is a spur to the economy.

It then doesn't matter if the hardware gets parked in a desert, or is sent to the scrapyard, or is shot to the Moon. It has already had its economic impact. What we don't want it to do is to have a civilian use. That puts the government in the market in competition with its own people, and acts as a drag on the economy.

(For example, the government could just buy John Deere tractors, that would spur the economy where they are made just the same as if they were buying M1A tanks, but buying tractors would bid up the market price of tractors for farmers and construction companies, ie supply and demand, so it would have a net negative effect on the overall economy. For maximum stimulus effect without undesired side effects, we want the government to buy things that have no civilian use so that they aren't competitors in the marketplace with civilians for those goods.)

That's also why the government destroyed its old ICBM launchers instead of selling them as cut rate satellite launchers. If they had done that, they'd have depressed the market for new launchers and hurt the economies of the areas where they are produced.

This rig dates from about 1977. It is a solid state crystal mixed, VFO tuned mobile rig,AM/SSB with digital readout only. Made by the Palomar Corp, (Escondido Cal.)of linear amp fame, it was probably intended for the CB/Freeband market as it also has 26/27 mhz coverage.(receive only as shipped) I believe they have been out of business for some time now.

Listen up fellow. Last night you wanted a discount on 100 "Mikey Masturbation Tapes" with Volkswagen Judy During on the other end of his directional.I told you I can offer $1 off on each and I pick up shipping. And now you've disappeared. What's with you anyway? If you think you're getting a bigger discount than that, you're nuts. Look at all the work I have to do cleaning white stuff off them, if you get my drift. Keep in mind that that specific tape is in the Ham Perverts Hall of Fame ,so don't trifle with me. By the way, I wonder what ever happened to Two Ton up there in Massachusetts? Someone mentioned that she had a sex change and is now wrestling under the name "Goldberg," but then again she needed no sex change afterall. If I don't hear from you by six P..M. today, I'm putting away my semen stain remover and moving on to another entrepreneurial pursuit like selling 8 x 10s of the Schoenbohm Wing of the St.Croix Penitentiary. Since Rich was NEVER tested under the VE program it is unlikely he will be required to retest. As for the ID thingy, I don't recall a period that long anytime Ive been in qso with him. Not saying it didn't happen, but I dont recall any such incidents. I beleive he got his license in the late 60s or early 70s.

Thank you for getting the NCLA joke site removed from the Angelfire server! Had any of you checked the source code for those pages or scrolled all the way to the bottom to read the disclaimer, you would have found the message of a joke being played on the ham radio community I will not list the Amateurs who believed this to be real. I can't believe you are THAT gullible but I did have 2 join the group! One a no-code tech and one of a higher class license!

The real reason for the site was to show that the subject of code testing CAN NOT be discussed by todays Amateurs with out the discussion turning into a name calling and insult contest! I feel sorry for the Amateur Radio Service if this is the best that we as a group can do! You claim that your better than the CB'rs but you revert to the same low road of action that you condem the CB'rs with!

GOD HELP THE ARS WITH THE LIKES OF US IN IT!

I would like to invite you to http://hfradio.org - my hobby website, where I am gathering radio resources together for the general public. My Amateur / SWL site includes map generation (for instance, create an equidistant azimuth map projection centered on your location), propagational forcasts and up-to-the-minute event information, swap and shop, and more.

Your comments and suggestions go a long way to help me make the site useful. It is my hobby... but I am working hard to make the site worth your repeated visit. So come on by. http://hfradio.org.

(We just did field day as NW7US -- we had a LOT of fun up on a mountain at 3250 feet. Did all HF voice this particular time. And we're still camping out until after the 4th of July. Now, we're a mini-dxpedition! Hear us on the HF bands. We'll be working some 40 meters, but mostly, we'll be on 20, 15, 10 and 6. Hope to hear you!!)

as far as I know, wealth is not created or destroyed, just redistributed. This doesn't feel right, so please explain.
> Question: from whom was Bill Gates' wealth redistributed?
>
> Wealth is most certainly created... ever hear the term "economic growth"?

Wealth is most certainly created, and is the driver of economic growth. One learns this in Economics 101. But wealth is generally not created, only redistributed, by the Government. What you learn in Economics 101 is that the accumulation of wealth is not a "zero sum game", as was (is?) believed by folks of the Socialist and Communist persuasion. Someone getting rich is not necessarily rich because he has taken it from someone else. He may have created the wealth, as has Billy Gates.
Gates has already created as much or more wealth than many of the previous tycoons, such as Vanderbilt, Carnegie, Rockefeller, etc. And, this wealth is far more widely dispributed: Microsoft has created over 1000 millionaires. None of this came from taxes, or as redistributions from Government, but instead it was created in spite of Government redistribution policies.
It amazes me that this elementary economic concept is not understood by even many 'educated' people today.

Just a little puzzle to pass the time.

You have three lights in the attic. These are wired to three switches in the basement hamshack. How can you tell which switch controls each light with only one trip to the attic. First right answer gets the BIG PRIZE.

Hi Ted,

Sadly, this newsgroup has now been taken over by the garbage mouths and trash operators that have been trying to turn amateur radio into another CB band. At least for every minute they spend typing on internet they are not causing QRM on the air.

You might want to re-post your question to rec.radio.amateur.equipment where you would stand a better chance of not getting jumped on by the trash.

Ahh, Nicole. Ability is not limited to females alone. I know of one YM who went from nothing to Tech+ in two weeks, and Advanced a mere four weeks later. Your month or so of light hearted study does seem to beat his six weeks of immersion. However, his perfect scores on all elements speaks well that he might easily have passed with one less week of study.

As for sparing egos, none of it would work without equal cooperation. There isn't a man alive who really wants to move the couch to each of the four corners of the room, several times over. After all, when it's your own labor you're speaking of, haphazard is just as valid a decorating scheme as exquisite balance.

BUT WHAT HE DOESN'T TELL YOU IS THAT HE'S PICKING ON ME. THAT'S RIGHT, PICK PICK PICK. NITPICK. THE GUY BECAME AN INTEGRAL PART OF THE 14.313 WAR AND WANTS TO REMAIN IMMUNE FROM PROSECUTION. IT'S OKAY FOR HIM TO PICK ON ME AND RICH BUT ACCORDING TO HIM,TURNABOUT IS NOT FAIR PLAY. ALL I DID THIS MORNING WAS TO MENTION HIM IN CONTEXT OF BEING ON 14.313 WITH "BOB YOUNGSCAB" and WACKO JACKO FROM TEXAAACO AND HE GOES BANANAS. THREATENS TO RENDER BODILY HARM. I'M GOING TO THE CLIFTON P.D. AND SIGN A COMPLAINT AGAINST HIM AS I DID TO "YOUNGSCAB" AND LET'S SEE HOW HE HANDLES APPEARING IN COURT. THIS IS THE INTERNET AND AS LONG AS ONE DOES NOT LIBEL A PERSON OR DOES NO HARM TO HIS LIVELIHOOD, THEN CRITICISM IS PERFECTLY ACCEPTABLE. MY CRITICISM OF LENNY TODAY WAS PREDICATED SOLELY ON HIS LINKS TO WHAT I DEEM HAM RADIO GARBAGE AND IF HE WANTS TO THINK THAT I LIKEWISE CONSIDER HIM AS THAT, THAT'S OKAY BY ME. HE'LL GET NO ARGUMENT. WHAT I DON'T UNDERSTAND IS THIS: FORGET MOMENTARILY THAT THE GUY'S NO WORDSMITH. SKIP THE FACT THAT HIS GRAMMAR AND SPELLING ARE ATROCIOUS. NONETHELESS LENNY IS A BRILLIANT ENGINEER AND IF YOU DON'T BELIEVE IT, LOG ONTO HIS AVOTEC HOME PAGE AND FOLLOW THE LINKS.HIS RESUME IS STUNNING AND SO IS HIS LIST OF CLIENTS. FOR THOSE I GIVE THE MAN CREDIT AND CONGRATULATIONS. BUT DOES HE HAVE A RIGHT TO GET ON 14.313 AND THIS BOARD AND EXPECT TO BE TREATED AS IF

HE WERE MARY POPPINS? THE POINT IS THIS; EVERYBODY HERE TAKES SOME HITS. SO WHAT? THIS BOARD IS A CHALLENGE AND FUN BUT AT TIMES AGGRAVATING TO ONLY THOSE WHO A.LLOW THEMSELVES TO BECOME AGGRAVATED. I ALWAYS STAY CALM AND COLLECTED BECAUSE I AM A VERY WELL DISCIPLINED PERSON. ON THE OTHER HAND, LENNY FLIES OFF THE HANDLE AT THE MERE MENTTION OF HIS NAME IN LESS THAN GLOWING TERMS. THE MAN CAN TAKE NO CRITICISM THEREFORE MY SUGGESTION IS FOR HIM TO GET OFF 14.313 AND THIS BOARD AND GO LIVE IN A COCOON. Doc,AF2Y***

It's all the difference in the world. Neither Swatch, their massager (watch), their magazine, nor their website have anything to do with amateur radio.

Field Day, and the promotion of activity in it by amateur radio operators has everything to do with amateur radio. It's their raison d'etre. The pins are not "merchandise" as characterized by some, they are mementos and incentives, aimed at many who are not members, and whose cost is being reasonably accounted for.

My apologies for the blank post that appeared above. I now know how it happened, and I now realize why I've seen it other times with other posters. With luck, it won't happen with me again.

Not being a student of economics, I cannot offer a logical argument, but to me it would appear to me that the wealth that Bill Gates has accumulated and redistributed was not actually created.

His money came from selling products that he was responsible for, as opposed to other products, such as food, clothing, cars, televisions etc.

A person has an amount of 'disposable' income and many see fit to spend it in a way that benefits Mr Gates.

On or about July 18th, Riley Hollingsworth and his wife Pat will be making a social call on one of the finest hams to ever hold a ticket, Ruth Hoffman, N4LMC the Manager of Intercon. This lovely grandmother resides in beautiful Clearwater FL and with whom I and my wife have visited several times. Ruth has always been a staunch foe of KV4FZ and his allies becasuse of their incessant but failed attempts to disrupt and destroy this fine public service net and I'm sure Riley knows all about that phase of Schoenbohm poison. Knowing Ruth as I do, her sweet loving nature and skill at painting and her doggedness and determination at keeping Intercon viable and most useful, Mr. and Mrs. Hollingsworth could not have found a better person to visit. I am sure Ruth's hospitality will be, as always, overwhelming and Riley will come away with a better appreciation of this wonderful lady and what she represents to our hobby. Doc,AF2Y

And let again mention that she chairs one of the most civic minded and asture groups of ham radio operators going today: The Maritime Mobile Service Network.

Visit their fine webpage at: http://www.chaos-x.org/mmsn/mmsn.htm

People like N4LMC, K4PT, AA4EE and their MMSN/INTERCON/Seafarer Net associates represent the cream of the crop of ham radio operators. And yes, they have remained afloat and proud, this in spite of kv4fz and his DROSS ilk which now SINKS to the bottom

It is very fitting that Ruth N4LMC should entertain Mr Hollingsworth and his lovely wife at a later date. (and Ruth, please take pictures and put them on the web page!

I never once had interference from other sources on 6m but I can't say the same for 72Mhz :)
Again, I've found very few op's there and if it's airplanes your into there's NEVER a waiting line when your on 6m. I used to live in your neighborhood (2300 Fairview, Pinecreek Apts)

I flew locally behind Estancia (sp?) High School, mostly glider guys but some power planes too.
Damn it Julian, now I've got to get these QRP projects finished I've got the glider building bug again.

I'm always amazed by those who appeal to the "good" hams, as if they can't figure out for themselves who they wish to talk to on the air. If you don't mind I'll just work whomever I please and judge each operator on the content of his or her character. I'm not particularly interested in comming over to any "side" or trying to "put down" anyone. It doesn't effect me at all, I just spin the VFO, you should try it sometime.

Timmy and his "friend" tried posting the same nonsense last April.
It's hard to believe they'd try it again, but here are the facts:

I listened to their .wav files at http://www.angelfire.com/ga/3950Page2/images/Vicjams3.wav

http://www.angelfire.com/ga/3950Page2/images/Vicjams4.wav and they are, shall we say, somewhat less than convincing.

Especially with the obvious audio edits (click!) and the fact that "vicjams4.wav" contains a section cut and pasted directly from the middle of "vicjams3.wav."

Either these two are wildly incompetent forgers or they have total contempt for their audience.

Anyone who was listening to the Liberty Net that night in April can quite easily tell you what happened.

As usual, the Net was prevented from using its normal frequency by the rude morons and jammers purposely occupying 3950 prior to Net time for that express purpose. So the Net began on 3947.5 kHz and continued there for some hours.

The jammers, which included K5BLB, continued tormenting themselves and their listeners on 3950 -- for a while.

Then, for some unknown reason, K5ZU (an almost nightly jammer of 3950) began a very long stream-of-consciousness _amanita muscaria_-induced "rap" on 3950 which included diatribes against K5BLB, Sid.

BLB, never noted for his high degree of self-control or his ratiocinative powers, decided that since ZU was preventing him from holding court in his usual droll manner on 50, the only thing to do was to go down to 47.5 and jam and spew obscenities on top of the Liberty Net. Which he then proceeded to do. Sid's sycophants followed him down and did likewise.

There was no one left on 3950, except ZU and his interminable one-way hallucinatory monologue. W1WCR politely asked if the frequency was in use (on 3950) several times and received no reply.
(BLB et al. were still vomiting sick obscenities down on 3947.5.)

After determining that 3950 wasn't in use (even K5ZU eventually finished or passed out; in any case he ceased transmitting), Vic moved the Net up to 50 to get away from BLB and his band of catamites.

But BLB followed him and continued to jam -- which, by the way, is the only thing these recordings manage to prove.

Happy Internetting,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

You may have more difficulty with this than you might think. Pre WWI callsigns were pretty "unofficial." I don't think systematic callsign assignment by the government and an actual callsign database was started until sometime in the 20s.

Moreover, callsigns weren't like they are today. For some time (pre WWI) they were just the operator's initials or other characters, then later, call areas were used. Call signs such as 9NE or 1AW were the norm. As hams were forced to shorter and shorter wavelengths, the DX nature of the spectrum necessitated "international" designators, and before prefix assignment treaties gave us A, K, N, and W, "U" for U.S. was first used. Thus, your grandfather might have been U5DH at one time, for example.

In any event, go to the Quarter Century Wireless Association's website at:
http://qcwa.org/

There is an e-mail link there to the general manager of QCWA. They do have an extensive collection of old Callbooks. He might be able to point you in the right direction.

Good luck. That would be neat to find.

For those of you who find 14.313 BORING what with the crackdown and such, there's hope. Thanks to an enormous cassette collection by AF2Y and the late SWL Doris Parnofiello who was addressed as Doris Pananafiello by the late ignoramus Mike Galego, those hectic years can now be yours. These tapes are not for BROADCASTING ON HAM RADIO. It is ILLEGAL. They are intended to amuse and enlighten and stimulate PRIVATELY, in the confines of your home, basement, outhouse. Or in your car or at the beach. The tapes will be presented as "BARF Herbie" and the first is dated 9/21/92 presenting the illustrious duo of Herbie and his odorous sidekick KA4MUJ as well as AF2Y. This is a don't miss offer and the price is just $5 per cassette,postage included! You will hear the late Doris on each cassette giving the date and time of each segment. If you are easily offended, do not order. These tapes are not for those who faint easily. Yes, you will relive the days of the BARF in its heyday. Crazy Billy Gasell, WB4GDP is there. Mike, Herbie, Lloyd Montcalm, the Highanus, Massachusetts screwball and others who once were high and mighty and who now are either dead or subdued beyond belief. You will hear for yourself the bigoted rhetoric against persons and the Intercon Net which escalated into full scale radio war. You will hear why KV4FZ does not deserve to be on the air and he won't be much longer. These tapes are sheer acoustic mayhem. The "good old days" are back. Each cassette is labeled and is encased in a clear plastic polybox. Tape number one is called "BARF Herbie,9/21/92." Order today. Send a fin, just five bucks to P.O.Box 1347, Clifton,NJ 07015. Mention the selection by name since, in due time, we will be issuing a hundred or more.No personal checks accepted. You can remit by money order in U.S. funds and made out to "Doc." Mr. Hollingsworth has made it impossible to ever hear what you'll hear on these "BARF Herbie" cassettes. A new disciplined day has come to American ham radio and it's high time it happened. The OLD days are gone but NOT FORGOTTEN and are captured forever by Doris and me. In time we will be coming out with one of the most famous of all cassettes, 'The Mikie Masturbation Tape" starring KA4MUJ and the woman built like a Volkswagen, Judy,KA1SKV. This is one of the most talked about incidents in the history of 14.313..you gotta hear it to believe it. Each tape will be remastered to bring out its sheer beauty, elegance, fidelity and magnificence. The 14.313 RADIO WAR is here again for you to relive. And how about the famous "Mike and Judy" shows? Remember those beauts? Remember the mayhem? We have them too! Remember again-these tapes are for private enjoyment only and are NOT TO BE AIRED. Give them as birthday gifts to perverts. Or graduation gifts to those given diplomas from Oris Dirtyballs's alma mater, IGNORANT STATE. And for just a fin? It's a steal I tell ya. AF2Y,Doc

Very true, DRR. Violation of that rule will constitute copyright infringement and Mr. Graham of WMP will send the Kehoe Brothers and Wacko Juan to kill their dawgs. Survivors will spend life in Tucker Prison.

If the police dared to try that little piece of footwork they would find my extremely litigious friend and lawyer all too happy to hit them with unlawful search and seizure, and perhaps unlawful arrest. I have MARS and CAP certs and as such the units I posses are inherently capable of operation on otherwise unlawful bands. This of course places a great deal of responsibility on my shoulders and I take that very seriously.
They should always check to see if the person has a valid reason for such equipment. I know the laws where I live and they are superceded by ANY federal statute and that includes amateur radio licensing and affiliated certifications. Mere posession of equipment does not warrant such action but rather a questioning of the person and verification of sames assertions to lawful posession. How would these police approach the HF gear which I use for MARS traffic? Not all Pub Service runs on

V/UHF,8/900 trunking, so ALL MARS and CAP mod gear are thereby ulawful to posess if that rational were to be applied. Thankfully there are specific addendums to the law the FCC had the foresight to put in place that removed the local yahoo cops from having free reign over such important matters. Any subsequent rulings would be appealable and almost certain to be dismissed as without merit or overturn in favor of the FEDERAL law having more weight and claim than local.

See the links below for the FEDERAL LAWS regulating these items.

So Glenn, exactly how many years have you held a valid amateurradio license?

A few years ago you admitted you had one of the old Novice licenses when they were issued for only a year & were NOT renewable in the 1970's but never actually operated with your (one year) novice license.
Then MANY years later you got your codeless tech license with the call of KB7PKC, which according to the FCC database was issued to you in August 1992.

Since I have been continously licensed since 1983 with an amateur radio license (16 years). You have been licensed since 1992 (7 years) plus ONE year with NO activity giving you have a total of 8 years in amateur radio.
Please explain HOW you can compare you 8 years to my 16 years & say "I have held a ham license longer than he has!"????????

Glenn, you have been betrayed by your own words.

You are clearly a liar Glenn. I would never have said sucha statement as in the US only a licensed Physician (also Nurse Practioner or Physician Assistant in certain states) may order meds. Even a Paramedic (EMT) has to get doctor approval.

Hello again all,

Yes, there has been loads of activity on the homepage. I have recently added an FM narrow-band RX that is about the size of a cigarette packet and has space to add prototype circuits, such as R/C of models, AF amplifier, data decoders, etc. the set is ideal for HF FSK and will work on any frequency up to 100MHz or more. Naturally there is a PCB layout and component overlay to download and the project is well photographed.

Following many requests I have also added info on building an antenna tuner with a few hints on other methods. Forgive me for not taking this subject so seriously, but all the info is accurate, complete with photograph. Do not be put off by chapter titles such as "ADDING KNOBS" but I feel an ATU/ASTU/ASCTU is a waste of effort on 90% of cases.

The technical message board has seen loads of activity about all aspects, including whether the Reflux still should have the coolant fed to the reflux condenser or the final stage alcohol condenser first. What are your views? I think it is a bit like asking whether the propellor should be mounted at the back of the aeroplane pushing or at the front pulling. Whichever way the still works fine and produced some high-grade alcohol.

The electronic calculator was extended a few weeks ago, thanks to the HTML advice received from another newsgroup. Now that i can handle square-roots I have added frequency and coil-winding calculations to the tables.

I have also received loads of E-mail asking how I draw my circuits and PCB foil patterns. there is a page there with examples that explain everything, right down to the keyboard keys to push. Do not expect any high-tech answers because it is very basic and simple. No software, No code, No preaching about products. you have all the software you need in you basic computer.

Well, there is the latest news, sorry there is not too much of it at the moment. Best regards from Harry

Ok, now that all the fragile minds have left I can tell you the even more astonishing facts. At our test session of Sunday June 27, who should be in attendance but the YL in question who passed her 5 wpm after only studying for 5 days. When I congratulated her for her astounding feat she told me that what I thought was true was a distortion of fact, the type of thing a person might hear on a 2 meter repeater.
She had first listened to her code tapes on Saturday and came in to take her test the following evening!
A support group or suicide watch for CW Crybabies is being considered.

Pay no attention to the ?man? behind the curtain.

Just last night I examined a 12 year old for his novice license.
He passed with flying colors.
I continue to be asked to examine new hams well below 19 years of age.
The people who grouse about the Ham Radio Service are only those who don't get involved in the classes and elmering of new hams.

We all know from your hateful remarks that you refuse to accept Jesus as THE Christ. That is your right. You can hate him with a dogmatic passion as you do, but you must remember that KC3AU has every right to speak to other believing amateurs about his religion if he has the frequency first. My advise for you is to not listen to him and go to another frequency. There is plenty of them for you to operate on to spread your hate..---- Rileygotcha.

Certainly, wealth is created daily... If it were not then the increased billions of population alive today who were not alive four thousand years ago would never see a single dollar in their entire lifetimes, nor would they have even a scrap of cloth to cover their nakedness... Yet, we have the most wealth in circulation today that we have had in 4000 years of recorded history...

Women can do anything! We just don't always show that off out of concern for your egos.

I admit I studied for more like a month before going for my Tech Plus at the next scheduled VE session a few years back, but after I passed the 5 wpm, they suggested I try the 13 wpm, which I also passed. I then sat around all evening taking written exams, going from nothing when I walked in the door to an Advanced class license at the end of the night.

But of course it's not like you guys aren't better at some things. You're

While treadmilling this morning, I listened to .313 and I've had it. Nothing but sorry ass clowns. What happened to the spontaneity? The livliness? The animation? Is that all there is, as Peggy Lee sang? My morning has to begin by hearing KT4TR talk about sandblasting his Stuka dive bomber. And there was K2IVX licking up every morsel of Youngblood's drivel. And finally in came Wacko Jacko from Texaaaco,W1ZZE, who never bothers to identify properly but because of his status in life and his impeccable war record, chooses "1 ZZE" which is in violation of part 97. What pompous asses they are! To be honest, it's more interesting listening to a lying KV4FZ than to those boors. And I heard a rumor that ZZE's been writing to Senators and Congressmen trying to get the great Richard Whiten and me off the air. Stuff it, Jacko or Jacques or whatever the hell your Frog name is. Your days of ordering people around are long gone. Nobody's saluting you anymore and it's driving you nuts. Come down from your pedestal, screwball. Out there in "hamland" are countless WWII veterans who did as much or more than you fighting the Axis and none reminisce like you-all day-every day,on and on and on. You're like a broken record, Jacques. 14.313 has turned into "Boorsville U.S.A," and it's a shame. Doc,AF2Y*******

Guess it depends on how ya look at it! THERE is NO real backing for the earthly things we so covet including "money". The ONLY backing for the paper money we circulate today is our belief that it WILL buy something tommorrow! Period.... How long in our present state of affairs will it last? I can't help but wonder, exactly what do you want me to get involved with? Amateur radio, yes I am very involved let's see I've built 1/2 dz. transceivers, tens of antennas,• ran just about every mode including one called Hellshcrieber. Let's see I've taught code and helped a couple guys get their licenses, Operated as DX, worked the satellites, but only mode A. I guess I've been involved in amateur radio since 78 but was a very avid SWL'er before then. I am very very involved with Amateur Radio, which is why I get on the air, Ohhhhh you mean why am I not involved in the causes that YOU think are important and why am I not taking up sides on these issues that YOU think I should be involved with. Well let me see if I can appropriately respond.

Am I for or against homosexuality? Hmmm yes I can see how my stand on this issue directly effects the future of amateur radio, as well as the sovereignty of our nation. I am neither for it or against it. I do not practice homosexuality but my attitude would be indifferent toward someone who was. According to you I guess one must love them or hate them?

Let's see pro or con neo-naziism, I believe in the freedoms as called out by our constitution, one of these of course is freedom of speech, another is freedom to associate with whomever you choose, I choose not to associate with with the Stumpjumpers, just as some of their members choose not to associate with other groups. Is that so hard for you to understand? I will most certainly stand up for these rights when I feel they are threatened. Again, freedom of speech allows you to reply to my post here on the internet and let your voice be heard, for that freedom there is a price, the price is that others who may not share your opinion also have right to share.

Now let's address Dan's concerns

> Tim reminds me of the pre WW2 attitude of some leaders of the western > world. It didn't bother them until Hitler stormed into Poland. So I > guess Tim wants us to "standby" until the neo Nazi moron's on the ham > bands take over, right?

Let me get this right, your equating operations on amateur radio bands by a a few who choose not to obey the rules with Hitlers invasion of Poland? Ha ha ha now that's funny. Although I'm flattered that you associate my thoughts with some leaders of the western world, it's amusing to watch you make comparisons of a World War to a handfull of bad apples operating radio equipment on amateur radio bands.
Also please explain to me what I am supposed to do, I am not authorized by the FCC to take any action other than to report offenders and law breakers.
At present however it appears to me that Mr. Hollingsworth is taking swift action to remove offending stations from the air, so again please tell me exactly what you expect of me as a law abiding amateur operator? What is it that I need to do for you to consider me being "involved"?

> Tell ya what Tim, if you don't want to get involved then take your > opinions and your attitude on out of here.

Oh I see Dan, my opinions aren't welcome in RRAM since they don't concur with your thoughts on the way the world should turn eh? Do you support freedom of speech Dan? I do. While I strongly disagree with comments made by different groups on the air I have never had a problem finding a clear spot on 75m or 20m to operate so NO, these few bad apples do not affect my operating and enjoying ham radio, and YES they do have a right to voice their opinion. Should they decide to operate illegally then I'll let law enforcement handle it, or do you have some other suggestion?

I get several of the trade journals Blake. What I see is the same companies always looking for people every month. Many of those companies most techs don't want to work for because they are not professional or reputable.

Once again your lack of knowledge shows thru again. The higher licenseis needed for other things than HF. Do I need to explain it to you?

If someone used the call "KA0SSF" and "screamed profanities andraised hell on

A TS-930 I acquired a few months ago (2 mil ser#) seems very deaf below about 3MHz. I've tuned across the 160 meter band on several occasions and have never heard a thing. Also, when tuning across the BCB I cannot even hear a 5KW AM station only 3 miles away, nor a 50KW station just 40 miles away. I know the rig probably has some filtering for BCB rejection, but I think this problem goes beyond that. I've also done some BCB DXing using other rigs in the past so, ideally, I'd like to conditionally bypass any front end rejection filtering to use the 930 on the BCB. I'd assume the BCB filtering is done on the PCB attached to SO-239 connector.

Has anyone had a similar experience?

I have both the service and owner's manuals for the 930 and quite a bit of test equipment; can someone give me a starting point on what I should look for to at least fix the reception on 160 meters?

I couldn't care less whether OTK, or you for that matter, has his license. I hit only when I get hit and you are the only guy I am going after.

OTK is satisfied when he insults my wife or my mother so I sort of ignore him because that's all he is interested in and capable of . Actually OTK is rather harmless and I am sort of entertained by his dissertations on everything and hearing what he had, or will have, to eat.

You on the other hand don't know when to come out of the cold. Your words and promises mean nothing and you just can't leave me alone and keep your big mouth shut. You are both nasty hurtful people but on balance I think you are worse.

The fact is I own you. I am your obsession and you can't deal with it. Look at this message-- of all people to write to you pick me. You are trying to get me to your level and it won't happen.

When you and the anti-Semites are shut up, I will be happy and gloat!!

Michael,
Do the relays click when to go to those bands? If I where you I would check the relays out in the RF unit in the rig. It sounds like that when you go to those bands It is losing the path between the antenna and IF. Do you have the receiver hiss? If you do I would check for cold solder joints in the RF unit. I have a TS 930. It works but the Digital board is starting to fail. I need another one but don't have the 160 bucs to replace the board right now. A fellow ham in Tucker Ga has 2 versions of this board but it is out of my price range right now. One version offers a computer intface he wanted 260 for that board and the other is the stock board and as I said before he wants 160 for the board. The Kenwood 930 is starting to get some age on it so solder joints might be the first thing i would look at the next thing I would look at would be the relays.

I hope I helped you

Same old story Toilet-Boy. Marcinko is nothing like you and doesn't come close to knowing everything that happens on one repeater though he operates many. Four other people heard and verified the incident Toilet-Boy. You saying you wouldn't act like a giant asshole on a repeater is as believable

Still, he was relentless in his pursuit of justice. The 120 day suspension is but a small step for N0VFP. A giant step for mankind. Surely justice will continue to roll down like thunder. 150. HF mobile shootout ?

I just reread the Sept. 1995 article in QST about the HF mobile shootout comparing various HF mobile antennas. I was surprised to find that the BB3 placed 2 and 3 in that limited competition. I'd like to know if anyone has done a "shootout" comparing the BB3 and the High Sierra. The two antennas are very similar and I'd be very interested to know if one has a substantial edge over the other.

Hi Lloyd,

Tnx fer ur response. I was somewhat suprised wen I saw your response.
While the HS certainly seems like a more professionally made product, the consensus thinking seems to be that the BB3 will xmit a stronger signal.
The reason for this is supposed to be because the HS uses stainless steel to make the contact between the wiper and the coil, and the BB3 uses copper.
Because of the fact that HF mobile antennas present a very low impedance at freqs in the 75 meter band the belief is that the copper connection has a much lower resistance than the SS connection.

I'm curious to know what type of comparison you did?

"The MAN" will have a fine old time trying to prove that the control op was deep inside the building in a soundproof room and could not hear anyone pounding on the door or ringing the doorbell because s/he had earphones over both ears.

We loved to hear excuses like that.......

I've done a comparison but not a shoot out. I've owned both. The BB3 is junk.
The H-S is the best made antenna I have ever owned.

Tim what you fail to understand is ,
1, Most hams do just that..
2,The ones that want to cause trouble stay there to qrm,
3.The ones getting interfeared wit fight and argue at that.
4 So the QRMers keep it up and EVERYONE seems to enjoy it.
5, And if true grown men dont mind paying $2000.00 for radios & $4000.00 on amplifiers just to QRM other fellow hams ,
6.Then I guess this will go on indefinately.
7, Seems like a BIG DAMN WASTE OF TIME and MONEY , 8And great EQUIPMENT that could be used for the right purpose.
9 And maybe then HAM RADIO wont be lower then dirt in some peoples eyes.
10, LASTLY EVERY ONE would be able to talk across the road , to england , africa , asia , iran or JUST to FLORIDA < NEW YORK TEXAS <OKLAHOMA get my drift.

ok---I see your irritation. ---- but who decides what is a legit club unless rules are more specific ? what is it now...some 'papers of organization' and from 2 to 4 members ? Maybe the rules should say 'ONE CLUB PER TRUSTEE' ?? Then witch-hunts would be mostly un-necessary I assume. I enjoyed seeing clubs re-activated after all these years and never thought much of whether somebody wanted to run one or more.
Yes...there is the ridiculous as to endless fantasy clubs..30? 40? 20?
uuuumgh...its the callsign shortage... Maybe the rules should limit clubs to the callsign blocks that are limitless. I don't want to be a 169. Thank you, Radio Amateur Callbook!

I have been licensed since 1965 and have purchased but one copy of the "Radio Amateur CallBook" in all that time because I'm just a ragchewer and haven't sent or recievied a QSL card in at least twenty years. Today though, I received a copy of my original Spring 1966 call sign listing in the book, along with a notarized (really!) certificate authenticating the issue in which my novice call sign first appeared.

I actually feel a little bit guilty about receiving this from them. I did because I stopped in at their booth at Dayton this year and spoke with the gentleman there saying that I thought they should offer just such a service, one which I was certainly willing to pay for. He replied that they have been doing it for years at no cost.

Now I have had actually spent time considering whether or not this company can stay in business, with the advent of the Internet and on-line access to addresses. The copy and certificate arrived in a nice cardboard mailer with $1.21 postage attached. So in any event they are either doing "OK" in business or else are really just eager to help out fellow amateurs. I send my kudos to them (and an unsolicited check for $10).

This is the part that troubles me. I've always suspected that my future retirement hinges on everyone buying in (yuck yuck) on this shared fantasy of wealth. So, is it real, or just a figment?

Certainly there's real value in Microsoft's intellectual property, and in the ore mined from the hills. Where and how are these accounted for in whatever counts these things? Is more currency printed to reflect the value of the software I write, or the book I authored? Or does that wait until the mining company uses it in connection with digging up some more dirt?

Michael.

What irritates me is the CLUB thing !!!!!! This an attempt to soak money out of club trustees ? (hire a lawyer) CLUBS were re-established a few years ago and what is the law saying somebody can't have more than 1 club ? The total solution is simple regulations stating the number of clubs that are legal. Abuse of the system ? How the h is there abuse without regulations that are clear ? Joe has 37 websites.Who the h cares ? I do know the ARRL has been violent as to clubs and whether they are ARRL affiliated or not. I personally selected several clubs with total different themes a few years ago with an honest desire to promote amateur radio but considering such seems to be such a high priority problem who the h wants them ? Go back to no club licenses. (except just keep the ARRL approved ones) I dumped my clubs and members and as of 1999 have a rather radical 'give a 's' about amateur radio in itself. I did not enter the hobby in early 1960's to sit around and have to answer legal inquiries for things that are legal. (hire a lawyer) I am tired of amateur radio where the whole crowd is a RETIRED bunch of idiots.(I really mean no offence) Its medical fact that old age shrinks brains and shrunken brains can't accept anything NEW. i.e. clubs...joe has 3 clubs..thats illegal .....this new data communications..QRM....fcc..please help it to cease ???? I spent most of my life in active amateur radio from age 10 but as of 1999 who wants the idiot hobby ? Nothing to do with CW..cw is a more efficient mode than ssb to be quite simple.(if operators understand cw...operators??? computers) I have 7 1999 origin computers that are going obsolete and next I know I will get a notice that I have to account for the 7. (well...sorry...I'm usually away for long stretches international) I TOTALLY AGREE WITH ENFORCEMENT TO GET RID OF OBVIOUS MIS-FITS IN AMATEUR RADIO but when it goes into some political agenda on the ARRL payroll ? Some of you don't understand. CLUB stations were a primary medium for the spread of amateur radio 1950's-60's. I think I still have a brain and reflection /////////// top priority that a trustee had 4 clubs ???? hire a lawyer..are they legit clubs??? What is legit ?? W2NSD/1 personal opinions ? I'd suggest to all..JUST GET OUT OF THE HOBBY !!!!!! IS IT FUN ANY MORE ? I still recall the ARRL incentive licensing petition of 1970 era...it demoted 150,000? generals when everybody at ARRL had advanced licenses that were reactivated and upgraded. (do you know of somebody with advanced license from 1930's that has not been tested since ?) Allot of good amateurs left the hobby for good 1970 era. Some of you have brains despite this newsgroup. again---crack down on screw-ups but a hobby to me is not a police state with an agenda that is quite obscure. yes..I'm an idiot but maybe one less idiot in amateur radio ??????? I'm posting from a webtv unit ? MY GOD. yes...I'm posting as part of microsoft corporation.....

who's bothering you ? I simply can't help by getting fumed at fcc priority to rid club stations when theres no regulations as to duplicates EXCEPT THE ARRL BEGGED THE FCC FOR A YEAR + TO MAKE ALL CLUBS ILLEGAL UNLESS THEY MEET ARRL QUALIFICATIONS. If a jerk gets 557 club calls who really gives a ? unless maybe its wearing out fcc license processing equipment. Whats he going to do with 557 clubs ? All wrongdoings come back to trustee. THIS IS PRIORITY. DO I SEE ANY FCC ACTION IN A DESPERATE ATTEMPT TO SAVE AMATEUR BANDS ? ANY ACTION LEADING TO ENFORCEMENT OF REGS AS TO 'OUT OF BAND' INTERNATIONAL RADIO BROADCASTS? ANYTHING TO PROTECT THE SPECTRUM OF AMATEUR RADIO ? HOW ABOUT FCC HELPING WITH ANTENNAS/ZONING ? Rare that you can buy into a living quarters 1999 without restrictions that forbid acceptable amateur radio operation. I think its best to leave the hobby until if ever some logical sanity exists. What next does the arrl not like ? (despite efforts to make laws failed)

Keep that in mind whenever you hear this excuse for a Jew on amatuer radio. I sometimes wonder why people like him and WB2OTK are even allowed on the Ham Bands. Its the lack of enforcement over the years. AF2Y has been the catalyst for all the noise makings, tapes, digital recordings and such. He even encourages it from time to time. He even calls for the death of people he don't like.

AF2Y has also a communist adgenda to promote on amatuer radio. He is always running down the "Right Wing" and other religous groups that he don't agree with. He pushes for the death of people like Kevin Strom and other people who try to keep this country from falling appart.

Now that Mr. Hollingsworth is keeping the peace, Doc Hate is now on this Newsgroup, promoting his adgendas. He now see that he cannot talk over people and QRM them. Everyone has an equal footing with him, and that is something he don't like.

The basic problem here is that we have a one time hayseed,now a carpetbagger in Alabama, who ranks as a "mega idiot" and who, by virtue of a "giveaway ham ticket,"feels entitled to sit on this esteemed board of illustrious hams while acting as a Godsend to our beloved hobby/service. This dull,sissyish, momma's boy piece of trash, who also ranks as a church-reared well indoctrinated anti-Semite,has no business whatsoever in our affairs. As an avid SWL with a TinyTenna who LISTENS but doesn't SPEAK, he should apply the same standards to this forum, READ but don't COMMENT because(1)you haven't earned the right(2) your comprehension of English is below 6th grade level. I say there is something mentally wrong with any 25 year old man who, on the weekends, prefers to sit and listen to ultra-right wing shortwave hate programs than to be in the company of a young woman.And he has the nerve to state that he dates in church? Obviously the only thing he might get out of church is to peek furtively at the lady with the buzz cut and one eye because religiously speaking, he's a failure. Imagine-a man who talks about church and then promotes <A HREF="http://www.jewwatch.com/index.html">Jew Watch</A>. A man who supposedly is imbued with the spirit of Jesus but in reality it's Hitler and clones of Hitler as found on 3.950 and throughout the shortwave bands in the guise of men of the cloth. Thank God there are persons like me who confront and spit in the eye of bigotry, the kind that N0VFP espouses. Lloyd is the poster boy for impotent young Americans who are unable to get their jollies off normally, so must turn to other outlets, two of which are political and religious radicalism.The creep needs more to be pitied than shamed but I'll take the latter. HEY! TIME TO WAKE UP!

----------------------------------------------------------------

In case you hadn't noticed, those of European descent and/or the Christian faith (the same type of folks who founded this nation) are nowadays villified in the media, discriminated against and even persecuted by "their own" government, losing their jobs to foreigners, slowly having their firearms illegally confiscated, being rapidly displaced by unwelcome immigrants, having the government limit their religious freedom, and are increasingly the victims of racial hate crimes. America is slowly and deliberately being looted and stolen from us as our so-called representatives look the other way.
And ... this is the good part ... we aren't supposed to complain about it, much less do anything about it! Those of us who attempt to reclaim our rightful inheritance to America decreed to us by our Founding Fathers are called "extremist", "hater", "religious nut", or "racist". It makes you wonder just who's party we are crashing!

DO YOU FOR ONE MINUTE THINK THAT THE CURRENT CONDITION
OF OUR PEOPLE AND NATION IS WHAT OUR FOUNDING FATHERS
INTENDED? OF COURSE NOT!

Education is the first step towards regaining control of our nation and our government. You must first understand what has happened to America, why it has happened, and who is responsible. Only then can the problem be fixed.

The controlled news media and government will not provide this knowledge. Indeed, they are scared to death at the prospect of Americans waking up to their patriotic duty, because a good part of the blame lies at their own feet.
Let us make their worst fears come true!

For a huge dose of politically-incorrect, supressed ideas
and information, visit the following websites ... if you dare! Like me, you may not agree with everything you read, but you will be amazed at how much information has been

purposely kept from you!

A 5 word/minute Code test and a Novice written exam with 2 other Examiners.
What don't you understand about the exam I performed?

Although the novice class has dwindled, there are still applicants for that license who are young and un-soiled buy your filth.

Many of you are wondering...."why only four months for PorkButt"??
Riley's no dummy! He KNOWS 14.313 quiets down when Porky isn't around.
The minute he comes back, all hell breaks loose once again.

This four months is just for starters! I guarantee it! For the next four months, 14.313 is going to be quieter than church after the sermon! And when Porky comes back, and the same bullshit starts up all over again, I can guarantee you that Riley will put him back in the corner, until he can behave.

Don't be discouraged, folks!

Lloyd,

One does not need to read up on "history" from a bunch of right wing hate groups. All you need is to PAY ATTENTION. Read the constitution and the bill of rights. Then form your own opinion of what our founding fathers invisioned.

You better be very carefull and don't fall for all this extremist crap you are reading. Extremism in any direction is not "politically correct". Use your own mind and form your own opinions, dont echo what you read or hear.

And you know I am not a liberal. I am a constitutionalist and proud of it.

If by some chance, my dear friend and confidant, Rich Whiten, WB2OTK, has been suspended from HF for 120 days, will you be satisfied? Will you gloat over the dirty work done by you and your lousy compatriots by hurting an innocent wonderful guy who's brought only joy to our hobby/service? Will you gloat over the fact that one of the most important voices against anti-Semitism and racism on amateur radio will be silenced for 4 months? Are you really happy, Lenny,being that you told me you hate his guts? How many phone calls did you make to hurt him? How many intelligent and meaningful letters did you TRY to write before giving up? How often did you call KT4TR to plan underhanded tactics? Did you work in goosestep with Herbie Schoenbohm? Do you really feel that a suspension would help YOUR CAUSE? The problem is that you are filled with hate for this wonderful caring ham from South Carolina and it's consuming you and the reason I'm addressing you specifically is because you have been one of the most vociferous complainers about him which indicates that a conspiratorial troika mainly consisting of KT4TR the weasel and Wacko Jaaacko from Texaco, W1ZZE the weasel and you have successfully pulled off perfidy. However, I still no proof of what is being posted therefore I'm writing hypothetically while hoping it's all StumpJumping poppycock. If not, I declare all out war on this board against W1ZZE, KT4TR and YOU. Doc,AF2Y

Run a random length wire from the bow to the stern. Using the mast as the center support. Hook up radio to one end of wire via a antenna tuner. For a ground throw a wire into the sea. And/or, if you have a metal hull, connect to it.

And don't forget Rich Whiten, WB2OTK, was the first to stand up for the net and against the BARF. Now everyone KNOWS why the BARF and their sister group, the STUMPJUMPERS, hate him so much.

FCC Queries K1MAN on Control Op's Whereabouts

WASHINGTON, DC, July 2, 1999--The FCC wants to know who was the control operator and where was he or she when it visited the station of Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, in Belgrade Lakes, Maine, in mid-May and failed to find Baxter or anyone else on the premises. As FCC Attorney for Enforcement Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, announced at the Dayton Hamvention, FCC engineers from the Commission's Boston office unsuccessfully attempted to inspect Baxter's station while it was on the air May 14 and again the following day. They reported that the station was transmitting, but facilities appeared to be locked and no one was around.
Hollingsworth wrote Baxter June 25 to formally inquire into the circumstances of the May visits. He also asked if K1MAN employed station automation equipment and if the station ever was remotely controlled.
The FCC says that during its first attempt to visit K1MAN, on the morning of May 14, 1999, K1MAN was transmitting on 3.975 MHz. FCC personnel say they were unable to find anyone--either at Baxter's station at the tip of Long Point or at his nearby residence--and, according to Hollingsworth's letter, "there were no vehicles on the premises."
"The radio transmissions continued while the FCC personnel went to your residence at Point Road, but there was no one present there either," Hollingsworth wrote. The next day while K1MAN was on the air, Hollingsworth wrote, "FCC personnel again attempted to inspect your station but there was no one present and there were no vehicles."
In addition to the name, address, and telephone number of the control operator on those two occasions, the FCC also wants to find out where the control operator was and at what times, and on what frequencies, K1MAN transmitted on May 14 and 15, 1999.
Hollingsworth also asked Baxter to list the name, address and telephone number of all control operators of K1MAN during the hours of operation listed on Baxter's Web site and in his daily transmissions. He also inquired if any portions of K1MAN transmissions automated, and, if so, to provide details and a copy of the control circuit.
In addition, Hollingsworth asked Baxter to list the programming schedule for K1MAN for the period of January 1, 1998 through June 1, 1999, "and provide the dates, times and frequencies," as well as the name address, and telephone number of the control operator for each of those transmissions.
The FCC also wants to know if automated tape control devices were utilized at K1MAN during the period January 1, 1998 to June 1, 1999, and, if so, on what dates, times, and frequencies.

Hollingsworth's letter also asks Baxter to list all dates, times and frequencies that K1MAN has transmitted without a control operator being present since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995.
Finally, the FCC said it wants to know if K1MAN has been controlled remotely since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995, and, if so, on what dates, times, frequencies. Hollingsworth's letter also requested a "detailed schematic of the control circuit configuration."
The FCC letter gave Baxter 30 days to provide the requested information.

The FCC's letter to Glenn Baxter, K1MAN

CERTIFIED MAIL-RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED
June 25, 1999
Mr. Glenn A. Baxter
RR 1 Box 776
Belgrade Lakes, ME 04918
Re: Amateur radio station K1MAN
Dear Mr. Baxter:
On May 14, 1999, personnel from the Boston office of the FCC monitored your station on 3.975 MHz at approximately 9:30 a.m. and attempted to inspect your station at the tip of Long Point at Belgrade Lakes. There was no one present at your station and there were no vehicles on the premises. The radio transmissions continued while the FCC personnel went to your residence at Point Road, but there was no one present there either. On May 15 while your station was on the air, FCC personnel again attempted to inspect your station but there was no one present and there were no vehicles.
We note from your web page, and from our own monitoring, that your Amateur Radio station K1MAN makes daily radio transmissions apparently totaling 110 hours per week. We note also that often the starting times are erratic and there is no station identification transmitted at the end of the transmissions.
The Commission's Amateur Radio Service rules require that Amateur stations be under the physical control of a control operator, and that the control operator must ensure the immediate proper operation of the station. The rules further require that station identifications be made at specific periods.
You are requested to provide the following information pursuant to Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 308(b). Under this provision, the Commission is given authority to request information from a licensee or applicant regarding the operation of a radio station.

1(a). List the name, address, and telephone number of the control operator of K1MAN on May 14 and 15, 1999.
(b). During what times, and on what frequencies, was K1MAN transmitting on May 14 and 15, 1999 ?
(c). State the whereabouts of the control operator, if any, of K1MAN during the times of operation on May 14 and 15, 1999.

2. List the name, address and telephone number of all control operators of K1MAN during the hours of operation listed on the web page and in your daily transmissions.
3. Are any portions of K1MAN transmissions automated ? If so, give details and provide a copy of the control circuit configuration.
4. List the programming schedule for K1MAN for the period January 1, 1998 through June 1, 1999, and provide the dates, times and frequencies.
5. For each of the transmissions of K1MAN listed in "4", furnish the name, address and telephone number of the control operator.
6. Were automated tape control devices utilized at K1MAN during the period January 1, 1998 to June 1, 1999 ? If so, state the dates, frequencies and times used.
7. List all dates, times and frequencies that K1MAN has transmitted without a control operator being present, since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995.
8. Since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995, has K1MAN been controlled remotely ? If so, state the dates, times, frequencies and provide a detailed schematic of the control circuit configuration.

You are requested to furnish this information in writing within 30 days from the date of this letter. You are advised that Congress has made a willful misrepresentation in response to a letter of thus type punishable by fine or imprisonment. The information submitted by you will be used to determine what, if any, action to take in this matter.
Sincerely,
W. Riley Hollingsworth
Attorney, Enforcement
Compliance & Information Bureau

If you continue to harass me on the newsgroups and if you start to harass my family, I will be forced to get a PFA against you. And if you would go against the PFA, you would go to jail!!!

Take this notice seriously!!!

Don't know what a PFA is but I do know that you're a little punk who's been on the air carrying on unlicensed for the longest time and I do know that you've been operating illegally from the "Felon's Palace" since you got into his evil clutches and I do know that your family needs psychiatric assistance for permitting you to be influenced by Schoenbohm in person for more than a week and I surmise that when you get home, you'll receive word of a monetary forfeiture for illegal opeartions and if it's big enough, that will preempt your family from paying for the psychiatric counselling they desperately need and if a little sonovabitch like you thinks he can deprive me of writing the truth, you're as dumb as you are illegal. Now put that in your PFA and smoke it. AF2Y,Doc*

I was curious as to Lenny's reaction so I searched the board and found this:

My morning has to begin by hearing KT4TR talk about sandblasting his Stuka dive bomber. And there was K2IVX licking up every morsel of Youngblood's drivel

Can you imagine anyone getting so uptight over eleven words alluding to him?
ELEVEN! Can someone tell me why those 11 words became so meaningful to him.
Quite honestly, I CANNOT. What's wrong with him? He's acting as if the worst libel was tossed his way or serious threats were aimed at him etc. I've tossed dirt here and I was hit with it too and if anyone thinks I'm even remotely injured by it, you're crazy. And some of the stuff tossed at me has been brutal. Come on Lenny-if 11 harmless words can set you off as you now are, YOU DO NOT BELONG HERE. And the same goes for 14.313. I'm astonished by your reaction especially after having reviewed the one sentence that set you off.
And now you gang up on me with an inferior intellect? If you want to battle me with words, you'll have to do a hell of a lot better than your present ally.

THE Christ. That is your right. You can hate him with a dogmatic passion as you do, but you must remember that KC3AU has every right to speak to other believing amateurs about his religion if he has the frequency frequency. There is plenty of them for you to operate on to spread your hate..---- Rileygotcha.

Hello. I'm really into contesting and DXing and have wanted to shorten my call down one letter and give it more zip for fast contest work. So pretty much the only way to do that is through a vanity call. I'm wondering, how much do vanity calls cost, and how long typically is the waiting period to get one? Please let me know if you can answer one or both of these questions. Any help is appreciated. Thanks for reading.

Archive-name: radio/personal-brief-introduction

In an effort help ensure a poster's article reaches the appropriate audience, below is a list of the rec.radio newsgroups. In most cases, a group's name will explain its purpose. Cross-posting should rarely be necessary.

rec.radio.broadcasting (devoted to the broadcast industry; moderated) rec.radio.cb rec.radio.info (periodic informational bulletins; moderated) rec.radio.scanner rec.radio.shortwave rec.radio.swap (for buying, selling, and trading; not a discussion group)

rec.radio.amateur.antenna rec.radio.amateur.boatanchors (tube-type communications equipment) rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc (packet, pactor and other digital modes) rec.radio.amateur.dx (long-distance amateur communications) rec.radio.amateur.equipment (questions, comments regarding commercially-built amateur gear; not for buying/selling) rec.radio.amateur.homebrew (devoted to home-building ham gear) rec.radio.amateur.policy (issues include code, restructuring, local restrictions in conflict with FCC R&R) rec.radio.amateur.space (satellites, meteor scatter, EME) rec.radio.amateur.misc (any topic not covered in the above groups)

(At least two other English language radio hierarchies exist, prefixed with "uk" (United Kingdom), and "aus" (Australia), in place of "rec.")

Again, cross-posting should rarely be necessary. Many times, a long-running thread results from a single cross-posted article, and the contents of such a thread drift further and further away from being "on-topic" in the various NGs that receive each and every followup.

For more detailed information, see "Guide to the Rec.radio Newsgroups" posted on the 15th of each month.

Keep that in mind whenever you hear this excuse for a Jew on amatuer radio. I sometimes wonder why people like him and WB2OTK are even allowed on the Ham Bands. Its the lack of enforcement over the years. AF2Y has been the catalyst for all the noise makings, tapes, digital recordings and such. He even encourages it from time to time. He even calls for the death of people he don't like.

AF2Y has also a communist adgenda to promote on amatuer radio. He is always running down the "Right Wing" and other religous groups that he don't agree with. He pushes for the death of people like Kevin Strom and other people who try to keep this country from falling appart.

Now that Mr. Hollingsworth is keeping the peace, Doc Hate is now on this Newsgroup, promoting his adgendas. He now see that he cannot talk over people and QRM them. Everyone has an equal footing with him, and that is something he don't like.

HEY! TIME TO WAKE UP!

In case you hadn't noticed, those of European descent
and/or the Christian faith (the same type of folks who founded this nation) are nowadays villified in the media, discriminated against and even persecuted by "their own" government, losing their jobs to foreigners, slowly
having their firearms illegally confiscated, being rapidly displaced by unwelcome immigrants, having the government limit their religious freedom, and are increasingly the victims of racial hate crimes. America is slowly and deliberately being looted and stolen from us as our so-called representatives look the other way.
And ... this is the good part ... we aren't supposed to complain about it, much less do anything about it! Those of us who attempt to reclaim our rightful inheritance to America decreed to us by our Founding Fathers are called
"extremist", "hater", "religious nut", or "racist". It makes you wonder just who's party we are crashing!

DO YOU FOR ONE MINUTE THINK THAT THE CURRENT CONDITION
OF OUR PEOPLE AND NATION IS WHAT OUR FOUNDING FATHERS
INTENDED? OF COURSE NOT!

Education is the first step towards regaining control of our nation and our government. You must first understand what has happened to America, why it has happened, and who is responsible. Only then can the problem be fixed.

The controlled news media and government will not provide this knowledge. Indeed, they are scared to death at the prospect of Americans waking up to their patriotic duty, because a good part of the blame lies at their own feet.
Let us make their worst fears come true!

For a huge dose of politically-incorrect, supressed ideas
and information, visit the following websites ... if you dare! Like me, you may not agree with everything you read, but you will be amazed at how much information has been purposely kept from you!

The important point is that the ARRL may advertise anything in any of their publications BUT not by utilizing W1AW on the air. As Hams we are now defined as amateurs and the ham bands may not be used for commercial advertising of any kind. This is why the ARRL could not charge people for Code Proficiency Certificates that were earned by copying W1AW.
W1AW has long provided a good service to Hams...although some of its functions have been replaced by the Internet and e-mail. I don't know where the minds are of the present ARRL leaders. The watch company plans are also something to watch.

A while ago a famous Ham, who advertises on SW asked me to speak on his SW program. I asked him what he expected to pay me. He acted surprised and said that as a Ham he expected me to participate for free. Now when I heard his broadcast he advertised not only Ham equipment but automobiles. I refused to work for him for nothing although I would have been glad to do so if he was broadcasting non-profit. I may be an amateur "Ham" radio operator but I am not an amateur commedy broadcaster. Heck if I can't get paid for making a fool of myself I refuse to make a fool of myself by working for nothing. I respect all of the Hams who share their opinions in this NG (or on the air)for nothing and I'm willing to share mine for whatever they may be worth to others.
Sometimes I hit the wrong key and draw a blank or even a double post. Please forgive me...I too am an AMATEUR typist.

Let me offer some thoughts. Shortening from a 2x3 to a 1x3 or 2x2 will be a help. Don't however get persuaded that a quantum reduction in bit count will necessarily be a particular advantage. When the great callsign lottery of 1996 came out, I selected several call signs on the basis of bit count for optimum CW operation, both DX and contesting, and wound up with N4SI. They don't get much shorter.

In my first contest (phone) I found that effective phonetics for "SI" were difficult to find. Then a friend (a world class contester) and I did a multi-op at my house in ARRL 160. When he was operating he would set the memory to send CQ with N4SI twice, because the call was so short (he said it was the shortest call he had ever used, but I reminded him that the 1x1 he had for WRTC was even shorter, but not by much). I figured what's the point of having a short call if you're going to send it twice.

I had listened to him operate SS CW using his call the month before, which although 1x2 had a "9" and a "Q" in it. It just didn't seem to affect the speed of the QSOs (at 40+ wpm). The lesson I learned was that there were more important things than bit count for callsigns.

I picked his brain some more, and learned about various desirability characteristics of letter combinations for both phone and CW. His extensive experience has netted a huge mental catalog of good callsigns, and probably can't be duplicated. But I learned that letters like "Q" shouldn't be dismissed on bit count because they have other advantages.

Anyway, my first recommendation (and this is not a slam) is to make one more upgrade and get eligible for a 1x2 or at least the entire spectrum of callsigns. The fee is around $14, I think, and the FCC usually gets them out in 2 or 3 weeks.

Have fun looking at the possibilities, and good DX and contesting.

The founders were eminently aware of persons such as Rich.

Thus, for now, FCC has shown itself to be prudent, imposing a civilizing punishment on him, to try to teach him not to sound like an ignoramus and abuse the right of free speech.

Now, had he recently been assaulted by "mulattoes, outlandish saucy boys and jack tars" as that great civil libertarian Adams and precursor to interracial lovefests, Lincoln, wrote, I would fully suport his right to vent; spontaneous tirades are not acceptable, however.

Of course, my reference to Sam Adams and Lincoln loving Africans is hooey.

Well, I went to the website and couldn't really find much. A pretty picture and an impolite dog. What do they do? Did they have a Field Day station? Club picnic? What are some of the public service events that they promote? Is there an Elmer program? When are meetings, and what kind of programs do you have?

Can I make a sked with you on that frequency? After all, if someone is this enthusiastic about an organization, I want to meet him and find out more about it.

Did someone pick that name on purpose? Where I grew up, stumpjumping was not something you bragged about much.

You THINK it has stopped? If you don't know whether it has, then we can't have much confidence in any result that may obtain, right?

What does that mean? Did you take some sort of vote to determine the categories of interest to most people? You just made this up on your own, right?

Why? Is there some sort of CGI limitation? You didn't skew the ballot, right?

You made this up, right?

This is just meaningless pandering and wishful thinking, right? You didn't think the FCC was going to base its enforcement decisions on such nonsense, did you?

Be careful here -- I'm not convinced that the Q-signals were invented prior to wireless. Too many of them wouldn't make sense sent over the wires: QRM, QRN, QRO, QRP, et cetera, and especially your example, QST: "Calling All Radio Amateurs And ARRL Members."

Don't rest it until you tune down to the bottom 25 kHz of 80, 40, 20 and 15 meters where those Extras are using the code.

Those dorks causing problems are a very small percentage of all
HF licensed operators, but as vocal as they are, they sucked you

Yes, the relays seem to be clicking as I tune across the bands. I looked at the schematic in the service manual, but it doesn't seem to have a relay marked for anything below 1.5MHz. The LPF schematic shows the relays marked as:

RL-1, RL-2 6.0-10.5MHz
RL-3, RL-4 22-30MHz
RL-5, RL-6 4.0-6.0MHz
RL-7, RL-8 1.5-2.5MHz
RL-9, RL-10 10.5-15.5MHz
RL-11, RL-12 2.5-4.0MHz
RL-13, RL-14 15.5-22MHz

If this is true, there doesn't seem to be a signal path below 1.5MHz.

Our warmest commendations to N0VFP. Project PORK BUTT !!!!!!!! has been a smashing success so far. He has taken a lot of abuse and accusations from certain "contributors" to this board. Still, he was relentless in his pursuit of justice. The 120 day suspension is but a small step for N0VFP. A giant step for mankind. Surely justice will continue to roll down like thunder. The $10,500.00 NAL. The re-examination. The permanent cancellation. To that end, let us lift our voices together in this magnificient chorus.

Yep porkbut is gone! The main problem of HF is gone! 120 days. That will teach him for not IDing and not treating his radio friends with candor.
THANK YOU FCC A.K.A. Riley Hollingsworth, maybe we can all become one

Well, for one thing, these guys are depleting the pool of available callsigns. Here in Hawaii, we have exactly 204 Extra Class calls (AH6_, KH6_, NH6_, WH6_, AH7_, KH7_, NH7_, WH7_) and all 204 are gone, with about 10% belonging to clubs not in Hawaii. I've collected the data from those bogus clubs and have forwaded the info to the FCC.

It probably takes a minimum wage employee 5 minutes to look up the data, and one with a forearm like Popeye to do the notary thing. I don't imagine it costs more than $2 or 3 to do this, including the postage.

I imagine they're probably doing okay. I know that a good many of the logging programs have an interface to CD-ROMs with callsign information, and RAC sells CDs and updates. I think they quit publishing the big paper book, however.

A few more things.

KT4TR continues to be an honest, loyal and valued friend and I hope he will always be a friend. You can scream and yell about Bob but remember this: I was there when you started up with him simply because he spoke to Herb. He has never said or implied anything anti-semitic and, in fact, has been helpful to me in dealing with that problem on 20 meters.

I got to know W1ZZE when I called him with regard to some things he said that I considered offensive. The difference between a class guy like him and you though is that he put my feelings and concerns above his need to respond to you.

With regard to OTK-- Yes I called you about him. I told you that "you had better get that guy to shut his mouth about Riley because all he was doing was digging a hole for himself". You agreed but said "he (OTK) was out of control".

By the way as I write this he is again talking about Riley and the 120 day suspension. Why not try again to get your friend to understand the need to start brain before engaging mouth.

I also did talk to Riley about OTK. What I said was that "The FCC was loosing credability by OTK's constant inferences that he and Riley were buddies".

Lastly, as I recall, the only guy I ever sent in a complaint about was you!

Have a nice day.

My goodness, you sure seem to have a short fuse. I was merely pointing out that the program to provide the information requested probably isn't a large drain on the company's resources. The original poster expressed concern about that given the proliferation of databases on the internet. I also pointed out that RAC has moved with the times and provides software support of the same product line, thus, we hope, ensuring their survival.

I, too, am concerned about the well being of many small companies, amateur radio and otherwise, and thinking out the rents involved for one like RAC can help assure us that they are alive and well. I'm sorry if it didn't come across that way.

On the other hand, anyone who comments "Certainly a far BETTER HOBBY," as you did the other day in denigrating ham radio, and who has in his tagline, " Bacteria-the only culture hams have," doesn't have much room to talk about the population of amateur radio. Perhaps you should organize your perspectives before you attack other people trying to help.

Once again may I preface this posting by stating that N0VFP has BLOCKED me from his mailbox. I have not reciprocated nor will I concerning him or anyone else.My E-mail address is radiosigs@aol.com and I WELCOME all communications be they pro or con. The Internet is far too valuable to exercise CENSORSHIP which, especially in the case of the U.S.A., is UNACCEPTABLE. Here is the post from this Jew-hating carpetbagging s.o.b from Alabama who probably was run out of Iowa anyway. This is the post from a Code Free Tech Plus idiot who brags about his proficiency as SWLing.. what a joke! He's 25 and where do you think he'll be TONIGHT, Saturday night? Out with a woman like all normal men his age? Hell no..he'll be in bed listening to his favorite bigots on eith 3.950 or to the preachings of the so-called Gospel from the ministers of radio hate who occupy valuable space on the spectrum. Or then again, he may once again be thrilled by his right-wing militia screwballs who are on this "Communist takeover of the world" kick while in truth, communism crumbled and died along with the Soviet Union in 1989-1990. AND THEY KNOW IT but feast on creating fear and dissension among us. Here's the bigoted jackass's post. AF2Y,Doc

This is the Internet, Not Amatuer Radio. You don't have to go through a CW "hazing" test to get on the Internet. (Thank God) God gives us our rights, not some Anti-God, Anti-American Communist Jew like yourself. And Government takes them away.

Greetings, colleagues:

I have a little project on whicy you may be able to help me.

I'd like to contact someone in the Richmond-El Sobrante-El Cerrito area to see if they'd be willing to give a short, basic presentation about HAM radio use in disasters. This would be for a community emergency response/neighborhood watch group in El Sobrante. 30 minutes. Very basic, to let lay persons get a glimpse of the subject. Sometime in August.

Do you have a contacts in the East Bay? Any help would be appreciated.

Rising Temperature, Population Increase Threat Aid Falls As Need Increases; Poor Hit Hard Underscoring Threat: Floods Ravage E. Europe

GENEVA Thursday, June 24,1999 - 10:00 AM ET

>From the Associated Press: Following a year of the most damaging natural disasters on record, the Red Cross on Thursday warned that a new class of weather and population growth-driven "super-disasters" is likely to wreak unprecedented havoc on the planet over the coming months. The World Disasters Report said 1998 was the grimmest year on record, with Hurricane Mitch killing 10,000 people in Central America, Indonesia parched by the worst drought in 50 years, and floods affecting 180 million people in China. Fires, droughts and floods from last year's freak El Nino weather pattern claimed 21,000 lives and contributed to an overall natural disaster bill of more than $90 billion, it said. Natural disasters created more refugees than conflict did, the report said. Declining soil fertility, drought, flooding and deforestation drove 25 million "environmental refugees" from their land into urban squatter communities. The report warned of a new era of "super-disasters." "Everyone is aware of the environmental problems of global warming and deforestation on the one hand and the social problems of increasing poverty and growing shanty towns on the other," said Astrid Heiberg, president of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies. "But when these two factors collide you have a new scale of catastrophe," she said. "And this is just the beginning," the report said. With rising temperatures and melting ice sheets expected to increase sea levels by 17 inches in the next 80 years, there will likely be a tenfold rise in the number of people at risk of floods. Half the world's population lives in coastal zones, the report said. Coastal cities especially at risk include some of the world's largest -- Tokyo, Shanghai China, Lagos and Jakarta, it said. The cost of the necessary protective walls will be astronomical. But as the number of disasters increases, aid for poor countries falls. Over the past five years, emergency aid has been slashed by 40 percent, the report said. Insurance coverage is also shrinking as the industry tries to protect itself against the costs of climate change. After suffering a number of "billion dollar" storms, many insurance companies now refuse to insure the hurricane-prone Caribbean. In the case of Hurricane Mitch, which devastated much of Honduras and Nicaragua, only 2 percent of the total $ 7 billion in losses was covered, it said. In a grim reminder of mother nature's potential for destruction, floods were ravaging parts of Eastern Europe Thursday, forcing hundreds of people from their homes in Hungary. In flood-prone Bangladesh, thousands were still homeless Thursday in the wake of floods that killed three people.

FEMA Issues Consumer Guide to Reducing Flood Risks Washington June 28, 1999 - The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) today issued a guide to preparing for floods. The publication, Surviving the Storm: A Guide to Flood Preparedness, outlines measures individuals and business owners can take to protect their families, property and communities in the event of flooding.

"Being prepared is key to dealing with any potential disaster," FEMA Director James Lee Witt said. "We can build disaster-resistant communities, but it requires action by each of us. In this publication is information that tells what each one of us can do to protect ourselves from flood damage."

Disaster preparedness is the focus of FEMA's Project Impact, a nationwide program to help individuals, businesses and communities take steps to reduce the effects of future disasters.

Among topics included in Surviving the Storm: A Guide to Flood Preparedness are steps to take before, during and after a flood, low-cost measures to protecting homes, tips for developing a family action plans and cleaning and making repairs to personal property.

The six-page newsletter also provides information about flood insurance, one of the most effective ways to protect against financial devastation from flood damage. Flood insurance backed by the federal government is available to homeowners, businesses and renters in communities that participate in FEMA's National Flood Insurance Program.

Copies of the newsletter are available at no cost by calling FEMA at 1-800-420-2520. Copies of the entire Surviving the Storm series are available at WWW.FEMA.GOV/LIBRARY/SRVSTRM.HTM

Radio Meteor Alert -- The earth may be headed into two meteoroid swarms that could produce shooting stars for the next week. The meteors might be difficult to see visually (some are expected during the daytime) but HAM radio operators will be able to monitor these showers using radio reflection techniques. Safe Room Construction Plans Now Available Online

Washington June 28, 1999 - The files containing plans and specifications for building a safe room inside your house are now available online. The direct URL for downloading the files is WWW.FEMA.GOV/MIT/SHPLANS

Developed in collaboration with the Wind Engineering Research Center of Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas," Taking Shelter from the Storm, Building a Safe Room Inside Your House" and the construction plans draw on 25 years of field research by the Texas Tech researchers. Their work has included studies of the performance of buildings following dozens of tornadoes throughout the United States and laboratory testing on the performance of building materials and systems when impacted by airborne debris.

The National Association of Homebuilders Research Center evaluated the designs for construction methods, materials and costs. The shelters are designed with saving lives as the primary consideration.

The safe room designs provided in "Taking Shelter from the Storm" have been developed to protect individuals from missiles, falling debris and will remain standing if the house is severely damaged. In addition, building materials and combinations of building materials are recommended that will resist penetration of flying objects in extreme winds.

EMC190 Intro to Trunking 3/3

To: Emergency Management Agencies via Internet and Radio
By: Auxiliary Communications Service (ACS) of the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services

EMC190 Intro to Trunking 3/3 For release 6/29/99

"Large users, such as public-safety agencies, may need more than 16 subfleets. Multiple independent systems can be installed and programmed into user radios. In this case, the system number appended to the subfleet (1-A, 4-B) is used to indicate the group.

SmartNet, or Type II, systems operate similar to the Privacy Plus systems with regards to ISW/OSW and high and low speed handshaking. In addition, a SmartNet radio affiliates with the system on power on and before processing data from the control channel. This is similar to cellular/PCS phones that require an automated "logon". Affiliation also occurs whenever a user changes talkgroups. De-affiliation occurs when the radio is powered off. System administrators can disable individual radios as needed by setting the controller to refuse affiliation. A non-affiliated radio can not process information from the controller, and will not transmit or receive.

A Type II system can have up to 4,000 talkgroups, and the controller must manage all of the talkgroups to avoid overloading the system. Because each discrete talkgroup will occupy a system repeater, talkgroups only become active when two or more radios have affiliated with it. A single radio on a talkgroup will be unable to transmit. This keeps the system load down, especially during multi-select (a transmission over several talkgroups, such as a general broadcast by a dispatcher). The controller transmits to those groups that have radios affiliated, leaving several system repeaters open.

A Type IIi system is a hybrid of a SmartNet with some Privacy Plus components. This type of system is commonly used while a department is migrating from Privacy Plus to a SmartNet system and must maintain compatibility with older radios. In the unlikely event of central controller failure, the system will go into Fail Soft mode. Fail Soft conditions are similar to conventional repeaters in that all trunking functions are lost. A faint single beep is heard every 10 seconds to alert users of the condition. Radios are preprogrammed using the system repeaters in a conventional format, and all users share the system's repeaters until the system is back on-line. The controller sends the Fail Soft message in its data stream.

As communicators, it is important that we become familiar with the equipment used by the agencies we support. Knowing the basic operating principles of trunking may prove valuable in the future when you may be asked to operate on a trunking system.

Motorola and all references to their trunking formats are registered trademarks of Motorola."

I have been a ham since 1992. I currently have a technicians class license. I am a RACES member and am the District Four Coordinator for Hub Shelter Communicators. We work in cooperation with Red Cross and provide communicators for the various Hub Shel ters in our area. We are currently the only district on the island that has all our hub shelters manned with communicators. We conduct simplex tests and have been very successful in it. We are currently practicing formal message handling as this would probably be our primary duty at a shelter.

This week's EMCOMM Bulletin:

EMC191 Type Accepted? 1/2
To: Emergency Communications Units - Information Bulletin
To: Emergency Management Agencies via Internet and Radio
By: Auxiliary Communications Service (ACS) of the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services

EMC184 Type Accepted? 1/2 For release 7/5/99

Query: Please explain "type-accepted" equipment for use in EMCOMM Units. I keep hearing this term but it isn't clear what it signifies.

Response: This is an interesting and relevant question.
Most often this term comes up relative to modification of the Amateur radios as to use on agency PUBIC SAFETY frequencies.
However, it can come up in agencies that operate on BOTH the Amateur and Public Safety channels. Sometimes it is easier to just switch a frequency in a unit that to go to another radio.

Radio equipment for use on PUBLIC SAFETY EMCOMM (non-amateur) frequencies must be type accepted by the Federal Communications Commission. It must have been found to be acceptable for transmitting a "clean" and stable signal. For example, all spurious radiations must be kept below a limit prescribed by the FCC. Type-accepted radios are labeled as such, typically on the rear or bottom panel.

Further, modified Amateur radios are not necessarily "clean" or frequency stable to FCC type-accepted standards. If operated outside the Amateur Service bands it could cause spurious radiations (and resulting interference). As a result, some agencies have issued specific prohibitions against the use of "modified" Amateur radio equipment by their units as a precaution to avoid inadvertent use on government frequencies, and hence, embarrassment to the agency.

Mike Krueger, N6MIK, Orange County RACES Assistant Radio Officer and Training Officer, explains the situation clearly. "Expanding the frequency of your amateur rig is legal, but using that rig to transmit on Public-Safety frequencies IS NOT legal. Amateur radios are not FCC certified for operation outside the amateur bands."

Currency is just one counter used as an exchange medium for trading wealth.
The "money supply" at any given time is the sum of the current deposits in banks (just numbers in a computer), available lines of credit (again just numbers in a computer), other liquid assets (ie readily convertible T-bills etc), and currency.
The latter is the smallest, representing less than 10% of the current money supply at any given moment.

Money, at least US paper currency, is just a form of promissory note. Its real value is less than 1 cent per bill. But as a counter, it serves in place of barter to let us trade among ourselves items of value, as do checks, credit cards, etc. The items of value are the goods and services which we wish to obtain or have performed, or which we produce or are willing to perform.

Is wealth real? Well yes, it is as real as anything can be in human terms. It is as real as love, hate, want, envy, and desire. But every price is flexible. The free market sets what we agree to be the value of a good or service at any given moment. Nothing has an absolute value for all time. Goods and services don't, and the counter we use in their stead (money) doesn't either.

Fashions in what is desirable change, circumstances change, the value we assign to things goes up and down. When I'm hungry, a hamburger has more value than when I'm sated. I may value an hour of my time more or less than you do today. Etc. The market averages these things out, but even the average value doesn't stay the same over time. 40 years ago, hoola hoops, coonskin caps, and tailfins had a lot of value. Today they are a drag on the market.

Some things retain a constant value better than others, of course. But even gold and silver swing wildly in value. For many years, I had Coffman's rule of meat. That said that a US made car cost the same, pound for pound, as hamburger. It did from the 1920s through the 1960s, but then government interference in the market drove the price of autos up (CAFE, emissions standards, 5 MPH bumpers, airbags, ie things the average consumer wouldn't choose in a free market), so now autos cost the same as filet mignon, pound for pound. Does that represent a real increase in wealth? I don't think so. Only the free unfettered and uncoerced market can determine true wealth.

Ben I used the PC exclusively to learn CW right up to 20wpm. Morse Tutor Gold was the software I finally settled on after trying 2 or 3 of the shareware morse programs. As I recall purchased Morse Tutor Gold from HRO in Phx ,AZ. I was a no-code tech in May of 1995 and had my extra in Nov of 1995 so it can be a fast thing if you apply yourself.

I think both you and Jeff misread his query. I don't think he wants to

Seems like yesterday, in fact it was yesterday and a bit this morning too,that all I saw on this board was a celebration by the usual pseudonymic scumbags, the cowards who fear giving their names or calls,nothing but remarks about the ham radio death of my dear friend and college chum, the remarkable Richard Whiten from Easley,S.C. Seems that, according to them, he had gotten a letter stating that he's banned from the HF spectrum for 120 days. And it was an immediate ban too. So the hatemongering Herbiesucking trash were elated, jumping up and down screaming, "We won..we won." Who knows-it may come to pass? Rich may be suspended for those 120 days but I'll bet that KV4FZ is suspended for 120 years! Well I felt badly for Rich and thought that he might as well sell his stuff and clear out now. Afterall, he was DONE, wasn't he? But a funny thing happened on the way to the forum. Whom did I hear on 20m this morning? WB2OTK! He wasn't gone! In fact, as I sat at my desk doing paperwork, it seemed that he was more charming, dynamic, enlightening and forceful than ever. Once again, there was the guy whom, according to the Schoenbummers, was DEAD IN AMATEUR RADIO. WHAT HAPPENED, you lowly heathens? SHOW ME THE DOCUMENT STATING THAT RICHARD WHITEN,WB2OTK, IS TO LEAVE HF IMMEDIATELY FOR 120 DAYS!!! It appears that Riley Hollingsworth RECOMMENDED to the C.I.B. of the W.T.B. of the F.C.C. that Rich be suspended.Now it's up to Mr.Hollingsworth's employers to make the final decision. Do you birdbrains understand that? This is a democracy, remember?. And here's something else to consider. In the event that the C.I.B. decides to act on Riley's recommendation, as well they might, then Richard has the right of appeal. I don't know what course Rich will take; maybe he'll forego it and simply move up to 6 meters for the hiatus; a band on which his style and grace have been and will be remarkably received. In the meantime, the clock is ticking, the bells are tolling for the mental invalid from Saint Croix. Let's see now-I think someone mentioned that Hap Holly's report(or is it Holley) said something about a suspension until Sept.25th. Why that's just 23 days before Herbie Scumbum's lawyer renders oral arguments in Wash.D.C. Appellate Court, trying to overturn the FCC's decision to rid us hams of KV4FZ, period.Hmmm. let's see now, whom do you think is in the deepest doo doo with the FCC? KV4FZ or WB2OTK? That's right-you got it-the scab from Saint Croix! Good for you, thinkers out there-I'm proud of you. For a minute I thought you all were as moronic as Lloyd Davies and Lavoris Dirtyballs whose I.Q.s together would not reach 14.313. I guess that's it for now so take care and everybody have a great 4th of July. Unlike the 3.950 crowd and these shortwave militia and preacher government haters, that date means something to me. That date tells me I'm free. I can write the truth on this board without being censored. Sure, sometimes what I say is biting and incisive but so what? Furthermore, because I'm an American who loves this country and recognizes the importance of free expression, I leave my mailbox open to anyone at anytime. I will shut no one out whether or not you like or dislike me.Disbelieve it? E-mail me at radiosigs@aol.com.And I can say what I want about my government and what I say is highly complimentary. Even with all the problems having surrounded my President, he's done and is still doing a great job.And wasn't it something the way he took apart that Hitlerite Serbian bastard Milosevic who rubbed his hands in glee over being able to slaughter innocent men, women and children because of their religion? I believe that happened to the tune of six million in Europe just 55-60 years ago, right? That's right; my President in cooperation with our NATO allies told old Slobbo in Belgrade, "We'll bomb your cities, destroy your capacity for making war and genocide and kill your supporters in those raids until you stop the murder," and by God, HE STOPPED. Now they ought to take that murderous s.o.b, give him a fair trial at the Hague and then hang him. Yup, July 4th is precious to me because I hate hate and love being American and I know that my pal, Rich Whiten, feels the same way. I wonder if the FCC really stopped to consider who are the REAL radio hatemongers,the ones who should be either suspended or terminated? Doc,AF2Y

97.1 Basis and purpose.
(d) Expansion of the existing reservoir within the amateur radio SERVICE of trained operators, technicians, and electronics experts.

Hold on a minute. He's GONE? Now? Tomorrow? By the way you hate him,you're saying that 120 days is a lifetime,right? That's strange because I thought somewhere I read that his suspension ends Sept.25th. If that date signifies 120 days, that'd mean Rich would have had to have gotten a C & D on MAY 25th, right? But today is July 4th, and 120 days from now will be Nov.4th but the thing said SEPTEMBER 25th. Oris, it seems you're going nuts needlessly or in your case, regularly. Now I'll ask you this: in your mind WB2OTK is sort of like the anti-Christ if you want to believe such a childish thing. Or if you prefer another type of comparison, unreligious in nature, in your mind he could be like..hmmmmm...Timothy McVeigh who should have been executed by now. So now I ask in light of your hatred, do you really feel satisfied over 120 days which really aren't? If not, what are you going to do about it besides moan and bitch and whine and write stupid postings? On the other hand, we have old Herbie at the END of his rope and this I'll say: if he doesn't get booted for 120 years, then I'm going to whine and moan and bitch and E-mail and call until I'm older and grayer. And Oris, what are you going to do if Rich appeals the suspension? Perhaps the FCC will act on it immediately but then again, maybe not? Suppose it takes months for them to act? Are you still going to jump up and down and scream, "He's Gone..thank the Lord he's gone!!!" And you really think that Riley levied the punishment because of a jerk like you who's yelling,"That will teach him for not IDing and not treating his radio friends with candor?" If so, you're nuttier than I thought. A guy like you with no gray matter doesn't concern Riley and the same goes for Dumbo Ears George "Polly"Ashley, that sanctimonious piece of vestment-wearing , anti-Semitic Southern Methodist garbage from Whiteanus, Tennessee or from KV4FZ the felon or from WA2EXQ, the Jolly Green Nazi from Highanus, Massachusetts and from KT4TR, the citrus carpetbagger and Chester Nimitz Vroom, W1ZZE a Texas carpetbagger from Maine. Each of them is guiltier than Rich could ever be and all are stinking hypocrites beyond belief. No Oris, it may be far from over, much to your dismay. Or perhaps Rich may simply forego an appeal and back off until Sept.25th?I don't think for the fellow nor do I speak for him either. But this I'll tell you-I am confidant he'll come out of this just fine while KV4FZ begins 120 years of SWLing. Mark my words. And come to think of it, once Schoenbohm is off for good, he may go into selling hot TinyTennas since he specializes in that type of activity. Watch events unfold, Oris, You might be in for a Gigiantic surprise.

Since I've been hanging around this newsgroup I've gotten a feel for what AF2Y is like. There are few like him in other newsgroups. I simply place them in my filter list and the newsgroup is a lot better.

Thanks for the ARRL suggestion. I had gone to their site but did not find anything on old callsigns. I guess sending them an e-mail might result in something.

Thanks. The search continues.

I want to know where this great net is now. they're main watchdog is down for 120 days! Where are they? Are they helping old porkbut out? I want to know. See guys nothing is worth risking your ticket for. These intercon fools have said or done nothing to help old porkbut. Whats that tell you about them. A bunch of chickens. I just wonder where are all of porkbuts friends now? Or did he ripoff so many people and so many where so afraid of the radio bully that they are glad to see the slime off the air too! Maybe he was the lose cannon that needed to put a lid on.
I just find it funny how the porkster found it nessacary to jam cuss and run over power as well as not ID every 10 mins all in the name of the intercon net. Maybe his actions where of good intent. But you know boys and girls the road to hatties is paved with good intentions. I think his good intentions with regard to the intercon net is probly the reason why old porkbut DIDN'T LOSE HIS TICKET but his actions caused him to suffer the gag order for 120 days. Where is intercon now have they given any thanks to porkbut? I have yety to hear any or see any in this news group.
I hope the FCC is investagating porkbut further. I think his 6-meter and 2-meter operation needs further investagation. I want to know if his station meets the RF safty act standards.

Actually, our current socialist democracy

Timmy
I'm for all that better amateur radio. I'm sorry that I left the imperssion that I'm for any net. The Liberty net provides the amateur radio community a place where Ideas can be experssed and opinions can be veiwed. My question about the so called intercon net was where is their loyalty to porkbut? They have none! I find that there is no loyalty in amateur radio today.
It seems that amateur radio operators care only about themselves.
With the cost of equipment going up and with operators becoming more and more appliance operators (glorified CBers) amateur radio operators have care for no more then themselves. Look at porkbut for instantace he is one of the first to sceam at a weak signal "If you can't afford the hobbie then get out!" there are alot more stations like that now days.
In the early days of amateur radio a weak signal had just as much right to the frequency as a strong signal.
Well this goes back to the intercon net having no loyalty for those who stick there neck out. porkbut did stick his neck out for intercon.
Whats that say about the loyalty in amateur radio.
I'm just saying there are allot more hams out here that don't care about anyone but themselves. porkbut did steal that TS 733 2-meter allmode from me and he is supposed to be worth a little bit of money.
There seems to be alot more of that going around today, by other hams.
What does that say about the honesty of amateur radio operators today.
Timmy that is what I'm talking about it dosen't matter weather or not I'm for any net today. I'm talking about how the loyalty and honesty of the amateur radio community has fallin' to the level or even below the level of CBers. I think this is part of the problem and I see it and I hope that other hams see it to so we can find a solution to the whole problem.

There are trade-offs each way. If you choose an external 12vdc supply the rig will be lighter, and a certain amount of heat will be generated outside the transceiver. This is a good thing.
On the other hand, many of us already have 12vdc supplies for other equipment, so you can save some money by not duplicating the ps.
Unquestionably, however, it is more convient, and takes up less additional space to have the rig complete w/ps. Its one less box, and one less switch to throw. In my case it was the reason to buy the latest hf rig with ps built-in; I already have 2 astron supplies, and didn't care to add another(or swap them out for an even larger supply).

I did in fact run his comment through the (K0HB) Troll-O-Meter but it registered a troll value of zero. Now, regardless of fact that NCI has officially classified me as a Pro-Code Radical (TM), with one of their more out-spoken members referring to me as a pro-code nazi, I want to assure you that my troll measurements are fair and unbiased.
The Troll-O-Meter is calibrated frequently with WWVH (just NW of my QTH) against the NIST troll standard via telephone.

I'm happy to report that his comment is troll-free.

Not worth it Howard. They are fully-embedded software driven and tuned.
(..meaning they operate from code pre-written into their microprocessors for the cellular system industry standards) I have seen some articles in Nuts and Volts concerning scavenging for parts, but used to re-make into homebrew amateur gear in the 900 mHz band. As I see your in 3-land your best bet may be to get in contact with the Mt Airy (Pa.) VHF Society better known as the Pack Rats. Their club is 100% devoted to VHF and above and if anyone could help you, they can. They also have a very good hamfest up there in Pa each fall.

One white un-educated, long hair, non-bathing ham for sale or trade for working radio.
Ham enjoys living in out building, but does not like water or soap. Does need to have nazi cross tatooed on his forehead in order to identify if run over, micro chip don't work.

Oris says the "So Called" net provides the amateur radio community with a place to discuss and view opinions. LOL. Oris, the government that the libertynet rails against night in and night out has provided the PLACE. The FCC allows it to continue. The libertynet provides nothing to the amateur radio community. Now if you would have said that they are an outlet for neo-nazi, racist, white supremasict propaganda, using 3950 as a shortwave broadcast frequency I would have went along with you.

ANNUAL FRACAP 1999 CONVENTION
San Jose, Costa Rica, 12/13/14 November

Radio Club of Costa Rica, and the entire FRACAP team, invites all radio amateurs to participate in the annual 1999 FRACAP Convention, which will be taking place on November 12, 13 and 14 in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Highlights of the convention include an entire morning of conferences, which will cover diverse subjects such as expeditions, DX, satellite communications, among others, a trip to several of Costa Rica's tourist attractions for those not wishing to participate in the conferences (a good reason to bring the family along! :), and the discussion forum "The Electromagnetic Spectrum vs. Globalization", which will feature representatives of the IARU, the costarrican chamber of commerce, the costarrican radio authority (TI0RC) and the Costarrican Institute of Electricity.

And of course, the conference will culminate on the 14th of November with the much awaited International Field Day.

News of the convention can be obtained through the FRACAP99 mailing list, to which you may subscribe by sending a blank message to fracap99-subscribe@topica.com.

FRACAP is the Central American Federation of Radio Amateurs, a union which harbors Central America's main Radio Clubs. For further information on FRACAP, please contact the General Secretary at ti2tgp@usa.net

Those are pretty hateful things to say about someone. Even if you know them. It also seems you paint with a pretty wide brush, since you included me in your excoriations the other day. I've given you the opportunity to address that but I think I'm getting the idea that courtesy isn't one of the clubs in your bag. All I ask is for you to tell me how I so offended you that you felt it necessary to attack me.

378. Ham Radio & Y2K Question

Hi folks,
N2NJK here, name is Ray. I have a question, probably simplistic so go easy on me, OK?
I have been doing a lot of research on this potential Y2K situation. As we all know, the scenarios range from minor inconveniences all the way to the end of the world as we know it.

I have the no code tech license. I got it way back in '93 I think. Then got sick, then our son got sicker than me and is awaiting a heart transplant. Ham took a backseat until recently. I have always found the ham community to be a very concerned and well wishing group, So you all know, I am still sick, but doing pretty good and our son is doing well enough that he may just be removed from the transplant list if he keeps doing as well as he has been doing. So, thanks in advance for all the well wishes I know are being thought at this moment. God has been pretty good to us, all things considered.
Anyhow, (I do tend to ramble don't I?) in the event of the loss of the national power grid (or portions of it) during the Y2K potential problem, what would any of you more experienced, higher class license holders think would be where the voice communications occur? I would like to think that I'll still be able to communicate with others out there. Being no-code, I have the limitations and have been having a lot of fun on both 2MTR and 70CM meeting new people and so forth. I joined a club this past January as well. So, even if I am not able to talk, it would be nice to know where to look on the other bands for communications so I can listen to the "pulse" of what is going on elsewhere from reasl people, not the news media if they are even running.

Any ideas appreciated, and you all have a safe, healthy and enjoyable holiday weekend.

I am a professional software engineer and a long time short wave listener.

I have developed a Windows program that allows you to filter audio in real time.

Connect the "Line Out" on your short wave radio to the "Line In" on your PC's sound card.

Use the Windows "Volume Control" program to assign inputs and outputs and set levels.

The program takes the digitized audio, filters it and plays it out through your PC's speakers!

No special hardware or modifications needed.

It does require a fast PC - 200 Mhz or better.

For more information and a free Shareware copy of the program visit my web site:

http://www.winternet.com/~swezeyt/dsp.htm

I hope you will consider purchasing it.

Thanks a lot,
Tom Swezey

Hi Ben,
Try all the opinions you'll get from your question. The program Supermorse is great, the MFJ pocket morse tutor too. Copy CW from 40 and 80 meters (the novice portions) is great practice too. Lots of slow code down there.

Take your time learning it, spend only 15 minutes at a time and take breaks or you'll just get frustrated. Practice sending code too, it helps to re-enforce the characters into your head.

Tom

the average ham will ever use, including:

Easy to use logging
Radio control
DX cluster access (Telnet or TNC)
One click grabbing of cluster spots
Easy Awards tracking (DXCC, WAS, WAZ, IOTA)
Graphical display of Grayline Database for managing Skeds
Handy conversion calculator (F to C, etc)
GOLIST QSL database interface Support for current ham CD ROMS Graphical Satellite tracking display your database. And no worrying about being 'stuck' with one logging program - LOGGER supports full ADIF imports AND exports, so you can easily transport your log data to and from any other program that is ADIF

Those are pretty hateful things to say about someone. Even if you know them. It also seems you paint with a pretty wide brush, since you included me in your excoriations the other day. I've given you the opportunity to address that but I think I'm getting the idea that courtesy isn't one of the clubs in your bag. All I ask is for you to tell me how I so offended you that you felt it necessary to attack me.

Hi all,

This is to let you all know that I have cerated a moderated list for those who want to take positive action to promote the hobby of Amateur Radio.

If you are looking for ideas on how to publicise your club activities, gain new members, or just let the world at large know about Amateur Radio, this is the list for you. If you've had even the smallest success in promoting the hobby, this is also the place to let others know how you did it.

This is not the place to complain about the Morse test requirement for HF, nor to proclaim that "the [ARRL / WIA / RSGB / etc] ought to..." - feel free to start your own list for that purpose! :-) This list is for Amateurs who want to take an active role in ensuring the continued viability of Amateur Radio.

To join the list, send an email message to AmateurRadioPR-subscribe@onelist.com.

Messages for distribution on the list should be sent to

THIS WEEK'S HONORARY UNSUBSCRIBE goes to Aubrey Keel. Believed to be the last living Associated Press telegrapher, Keel spent his working day manually sending news down the AP wire by Morse Code. Telegraphers along the wire would decode the stories for printing in local newspapers. About 1500 telegraphers worked for the service over an 80 year span. They were replaced by teletypes in 1928, but Keel stayed on with the AP, serving as the communications chief for several bureaus. Keel died July 2 at age 97.

Shooting Spree Suspect Kills Self

By JAMES PRICHARD
.c The Associated Press

SALEM, Ill. (July 5) - A white supremacist who targeted minorities during a deadly Fourth of July weekend shooting spree is dead, according to the FBI.

Benjamin Nathaniel Smith, 21, shot himself as he fled from police during a high speed chase Sunday after carjacking a van in rural Marion County, Ill., said Doug Garrison, an FBI spokesman in Indianapolis.

Authorities believe Smith began his drive-by killing spree in Chicago on Friday, when a black former college basketball coach was fatally shot and six Orthodox Jews were wounded.

The shooter also fired at Asians and blacks in two Illinois cities on Saturday and fatally shot a Korean man Sunday outside a church in Bloomington, Ind., police said.

Chicago police spokesman Pat Camden told WMAQ radio in Chicago that Smith shot himself in the chin as he tried to outrace police, sending the van crashing onto the side of the road. He died a short time later at Salem Public Hospital.

``It looks like our guy,'' Garrison said, adding that the FBI must double-check the fingerprints of the body with those of Smith's to make sure. An autopsy is planned today in Centralia, Ill.

Two guns found with Smith were consistent with the shootings and the body had a tattoo on the chest that said ``Sabbath Breaker'' - which Smith was said to have sported, according Bloomington Police Chief Jim Kennedy said.

Marion County, Ill., Sheriff's Department Dispatcher Jason Smith said the suspect abandoned his blue Taurus and carjacked a minivan about 9:30 p.m. Sunday at a truck stop in Ina, a town about 33 miles south of Salem.

A short time later, a sheriff's deputy spotted the minivan and followed it to Salem, the dispatcher said. Illinois State Police Master Sgt. John Lewis said he didn't know what happened to the owner of the minivan or if anyone was in the vehicle when it was carjacked.

Smith was a member of the World Church of the Creator, a white supremacist organization, and distributed anti-minority and anti-Semitic literature while a student at Indiana University.

The church, based in East Peoria, Ill., is led by Matt Hale, who said Smith was a member from June 1998 until May 1999 and never showed any predilection for violence.

``When I spoke to him he never gave any inkling of being able to do this,'' Hale said before Smith apparently took his life.

However, Harlan Loeb, Midwest counsel for the Anti-Defamation League, said his organization has had Smith ``on our radar screen for quite some time, which is particularly tragic for someone so young.''

The gunman struck outside a synagogue in Chicago on Friday, the Jewish Sabbath. The same shooter is believed to have killed Ricky Byrdsong, the black former basketball coach at Northwestern University, as he walked with his children in nearby Skokie, and fired at an Asian-American couple in the suburb of Northbrook.

Then on Saturday the same blue Taurus was seen at shootings in Springfield and Champaign-Urbana. In the first attack, the gunman fired on two black men, but no one was hit, Chicago Police Cmdr. William Hayes said.

About 12 hours later, six men of Asian descent were standing on a corner near the University of Illinois when three or four shots were fired, Hayes said. A 22-year-old graduate student was hit in the leg and was in serious condition Sunday, Urbana police spokesman Michael Metzler said.

In Sunday's attack, Won-Joon Yoon was hit twice in the back and killed outside Korean United Methodist Church in Bloomington. Witnesses told police that after firing into the crowd, the shooter sped off, running several lights.

``He was apparently parked at the corner and waited for these people to come out of church and then fired,'' Kennedy said.

Authorities said .380-caliber shell casings - the same kind found in some of the Chicago shootings - were also found at the scene of the Indiana church attack.

Last year on the Fourth of July, Smith tucked white supremacist fliers under windshields around Bloomington. Asked whether the shootings this weekend were related to Independence Day, Bloomington Police Capt. William Parker said, ``It raises questions in our minds.''

Smith also passed out similar hate literature when enrolled at the University of Illinois. The Daily Illini reported that Smith attended the school from 1996 through 1998 before being expelled. Urbana police said he had been in trouble with campus police for drug possession.

Smith attended Indiana University from the summer of 1998 through the spring of 1999, and he is believed to have moved to the Chicago area in May.

``The towns he's hit, he's either lived there or been enrolled in college at each of the towns,'' Parker said.

With so many outlets of Doppler weather radar, do we really need Skywarn anymore? In addition, I know several ARIES members who openly state that they wont turn on their radio during a lightning storm for fear that they will damage their expensive equipment. Ive also heard others tell the net controller not to call them after 10:00pm........

What the point?.....Why are these people allowed to be members and attend meetings when they are not willing to do what it takes when the going gets tough? In this day and age, there is Doppler radar viewing capability in just about every household.

Yes we still need Skywarn. Doppler does not show what's going on under a storm. It doesn't show LOCAL conditions. It doesn't show flooding, lightning strikes on buildings,trees,people,etc.

Skywarn is VERY valuable to the NWS.

Hello Ray:

I dont think you have anything to worry about. The Dept of Energy both in the US and Canada, verified 2 years ago that power distribution capabilities will NOT be affected by Y2K. A total of 7% of the embedded chips used worldwide in various devices are date sensitive and the majority of those will not inconvenience your lifestyle after January 1, 2000.

Y2K is a great issue for both religious ramblers and people who have nothing else to worry about. After midnight next Dec 31, they'll be right back on the Nostradamus kick.

I hope is is well with your son.

I agree Tom, however, the information is only as valuable as the people who are willing to actually place themselves in the adverse weather. These guys, up around my neck of the woods, are more worried about their Yaesu FT-847's than reporting conditions.....god forbid that they might have to learn enough theory to actually build a radio.

Everyone, (except his suckboys) is looking forward to the 120 days that WB2OTK will have to put the mike down as far as talking on the HF bands.

This will be a time for every one to make the decision to clean their act up, and return to the ham radio that we used to know. Clean operating practice, brotherhood in the hobby, helping new hams etc.

I know all caring amateurs are rejoicing and congratulating Mr Riley Hollingsworth on doing the right thing.

Yesterday, we suprised to hear Al Burton KA4URC back on the air, on 14.313!! For you who don't know he left ham radio a few years ago. He was so upset at making a complete moron of hisself on 3.853 and 3.865 that one day he went and CHOPPED UP all his ham radio gear with a fire axe (confirmed!) in the front yard of his Tennessee tobacco and jimson weed plantation. Swore he'd never get on the air again.
Well, heeeeeees back! Most notable in the past was his consumption of mass quantities of Colt45 & cool beers on the air while cussing out blue streaks of exceptionally creative verbage dealing with varied sexual activity(s). His exceptional choice of words would almost eclipse that other 75 meter drunk, James R Vining on the 3.853 late show.
So let's all clap and welcome back the ole Coon A-- back to ham radio!

any of his Yagemeister German Marching Toons on 3.950 LSB lately? I Tell U folks SWLing the ham SSB bands is sometimes almost as good as watching television.

You mean if the amateur radio service had never been established no one would have ever aquired the knowledge or skill to develope television, radar, cellular telephone, ect., ect.? Give me a break. You need a reality check. And the main thing the amateur skills gave to WWII was operators. The technological advances were being made by engineers, many of whom were never hams.

Some time ago I inherited a piece of equipment that someone has suggested to me might be a ham radio. I contacted a friend of mine who is a ham and posted pictures and descriptions of the unit to the following web address:

http://apollo-pc.polarcom.com/rg/fs/radio.html

I thought I'd solicit the opinions of the fine members of this forum to help me out. Thanks for having a look.

I posted in here just a couple days ago and recommended Morse Tutor Gold. I bought my copy from HRO as I recall. It took me right up to 20wpm to pass my extra. I tried some of the freeware and shareware morse apps as well but Morse Tutor Gold has many more features and in my humble opinion is well worth the money. Once I was done with it I passed my copy along to help others. It is really the Cadillac of all the Morse software. (again my opinion) 73/DX

Conversation is two-way. It might have been the case that you didn't contribute anything to the QSO, so they went on to work someone else. You could have posed such questions as the other op's career, what military branch did he serve in, other hobbies, any patents or inventions -- the list is endless. The first thing I ask is whether the other op wants to play an on-the-air chess game. That can last hours, with many other ops listening in.

Questions regarding radio history should be part of the amateur written exams. In 1959 the FCC asked hams, via a Notice of Inquiry, what incentives could be tacked on to the Extra Class license. It was the FCC, not the ARRL, which begin the concept of incentive licensing. (See below.)

>The number of hams didn't start to decline until the ARRL-proposed incentive >licensing scheme was adopted by the FCC.

Backwards.

IL goes back to 1923 in which the band from 200-220 meters was open only to the new Extra First Class amateur license. (That class was open only to those hams who had been licensed for at least two years, had taken a test similar to the commercial first class of the day, were able to copy 20wpm, and had a clean record.)

The HF radios I've built worked the first time they were powered up, but I've never had much success with home-built VHF gear (except for a Heath Two'er I built). What radios have you built? Do you have a web site in which we could view them? Are you operating any of them on-the-air right now?

457. RFI from computer monitor - how to resolve?

I get some RFI on 10,15,17M (in certain spots on the band) from my computer monitor which is about 4-5ft from my TS450. If I turn the monitor off it completely clears up these bands so I know it is the monitor. Has anyone found any good ways to suppress this computer monitor RFI? I would much prefer to leave the monitor on while operating HF.

Thanks - 73/DX

Hi everyone,

I have little to no ham experience, but am interested in a super light SW transceiver (for backpacking in remote areas). I read an article recently about a 2-AA model from Philips. It would be for emergency usage, and I would obviously get licensing if required. I had thought about an Iridium phone, but have no confidence they'll be around in a few years.

What model might the article have been refereing to?

Are there any others that might be in the same class?

What is the latest and greatest about licensing?

Is there a cool web site with info on super portable SW stuff?

Thanks!

George

YES LEAVE the monitor off , while operating.
OR buy a rfi filter , put between the radio and antenna , BUY anew monitor .
OR ground your radio good with a copper pipe, and 10 gage wire.and lastly , Move your monitor farther away from your radio....
So Follow all of the above or do any of the above.
OR do nothing and keep the interference.
THATS MY OPINION AND I'M STICKING TO IT......>>>>>>>

Dont let the license class fool you hotshot. My brother and I were building 2 meter radios from 20 year old Command set radio parts (pre-WW II) probably before you knew what a rectifier was..... and I dont need a web page to show anyone the proof.

What do any of your questions have to do with the topic I posted? The amateur hobby is supposed to be one of building and experimentation (at least it used to be), not one of buying multi thousand dollar radios of which the majority of amateur license holders dont know how they work. And to top it off, these same people join ARES (I really do know how to spell it), and then they're afraid to fire up their 4 figure hardware during a thunder storm.....its pathetic. You guys have alot more than the elimination of Farnsworth code to worry about.

If its not a BAD modem, its probably a COM PORT conflict. If you are running Win 95 or 98 go into the CONTROL PANEL and then SYSTEM. Click on the DEVICE MANGER and double click on MODEMS. The Compaq modem should appear under the MODEM folder. Highlight the Compaq modem and REMOVE the modem from your system. Reboot the computer and let Windows add the drivers for the modem. If Windows cannot add the drivers, go back into the CONTROL PANEL and click on ADD/REMOVE HARDWARE, then follow the instructions. At this point you'll need either the correct drivers on a floppy downloaded from the Compaq website or your WIN 95 or 98 disk in the CD ROM drive.

The real question is why did you spend a good part of the afternoon listening to it? No other interests to occupy your time?
Or do you just find his transmissions so fascinating that you must tune in?

Skywarn is getting rather outdated with the advancements that have been made in weather technology over the past few decades. I know a lot of these Skywarn nerds here where I live that get a boner ever time they see a flash of lightning, hoping they can "bring up the net." Skywarn , much like C.B. radio, is a product of days gone by. I don't see any real purpose for it anymore. Just a way for people who will never get above a Tech class liscense to make themselves feel useful in the ham radio hobby.

Does anyone know whatever happened to the old AN/TRC 75 or AN/PRC 47 radios that were the backbone of military HFcommunications in the 60's ? I humped the PRC 47 further then I care to recall and it always performed. The TRC 75 was mounted in the jeeps and could punch through almost anything with 1KW CW and it had a neat mechanical tuner. I've never seen one offered for sale.

Hi Neil,

If I'm correct, this is a standard "round" nut with two notches in it... you can use a variety of tools to get it off... A small flat blade screwdriver and just work one side... go to a auto parts store... they have tools that might work that remove "eye" ring clamps... use your imagination... hey a good pair of needle nose pliers would probably do the trick.

The Treaty that stipulates code testing for the amteur service was brought upon by maritime incidents like the Titanic. Now that GMDSS is being used on all ships of 300 plus tonnage, this code testing just lost a majority on what it was meant to serve.

Hmm didn't know using Webtv was an indicator of intellegence one way or the other. While I'm sure that Skywarn does provide some good data related to storms, the poster does make a valid point. While travelling one day in a storm in Ohio I dialed up a repeater that I knew my friend was on, I listened, nothing, I kerchunked and listened again then made my call. I was FLAMBASTED by the net controller for interrupting his "Skywarn" net. A simple comment that the net was active would have been welcome, instead I was raked over the coals, if he talked to me in person the way he did over the air I would have head butted him right into next Tuesday. It was as if he was declaring martial law and I was required to obey. Of course now, with my interest peaked, I listened to the net and it was not much more than stations checking in one after another to report heavy rain, when asked questions by net control for indications of wall clouds and other related information 50% didn't have a clue what they were talking about. I was not impressed with the way the net was handled or the traffic passed. I won't however make any judgements on Skywarn in general based on this one experience, but I understand exactly what the poster was talking about.

I too am getting a "Not Found" when trying to link to Ham Radio Outlet (www.hro.com).
(11:15pmET 7/6).

I have a question though. What do you mean "....national dealer of the two"?
I can name a lot more than two "national" dealers. Maybe it depends on how you define "national".
But maybe, you need to broaden your horizon. Let me suggest you go to Icom, Yeasu, Kenwood, ADT, or Alinco's web sites and checkout their list of dealers as a starting point. I personally like the folks a Universal the best, though I had a good time chating with the folks at AES in LV. Then there's Texas Tower and Jun's. HRO is local to me and I'd like to keep them in business so I have a place to go play with the new equipment. Grove carries some things, though he's more into scanners. Lentini, Austin AR Supply, Radio City, and I'm sure there's many I've overlooked.

Hi, have an HT1000 rapid charger and 2 slim (dished sides) hi-cap batteries for sale. Charger was with a 'd' series radio so should be about '97 model and batteries are '96 date code, both with belt clips and both hold a charge well. (one was on the analyzer about a month ago at 1340mAH) Charger also includes that little 'spacer' to make a perfect fit for batteries only or remove it to charge on radio.
Priced at $60 plus shipping CONUS.
please email if you have any questions!
thanks,
Randy

The 1999 Morons of the Year, KD6GDB and WH6CSG, who originally put up a Real Audio feed of the Los Angeles notorious 147.435 Mhz. repeater (2 meter.) have now taken it down... When it was up, which was sporadic at best..their bandwidth supported only 10 to 15 listeners at a time over the entire Internet of millions..!!!

This does without a doubt get them first place in the MORONS OF THE YEAR AWARDS OF HAM RADIO.!!

537. Pioneering EE Patents: The Costas Loop (for PSK)

Pioneering EE Patent, featured July 1-14
"Means for Obtaining Character Time in a Radio Communication System Receiver"
Issued 1962 to General Electric for the Costas Loop. Get a free abridged copy of this historic patent (or just view a summary) at http://eepatents.com/feature?m07d01/

Until the advent of PSK (phase shift keying) modulation in the late fifties, digital information was modulated on a carrier using FSK frequency shift keying) modulation. PSK provided higher information content than FSK, permitting information to be conveyed at a spectral efficiency further up Shannon's theoretical curve of Bits/Hz versus Eb/No.

Demodulation of PSK and its successors (e.g., QPSK, QAM) presented a new problem, however. Synchronization would now be needed with the modulated carrier (nanosecond timing), not just the underlying digital signal (micro/millisecond timing). The solution to this problem was the Costas loop, which used a control-feedback loop to begin the era of synchronous demodulation.

Upcoming features will include the original patents for interrupt-driven processing and Direct Digital Synthesis (DDS). For the last half of June, the featured patent was "Radio Sending System," issued 1927, for Networked Broadcasting. It's archived at

Also some were down around 40Mhz. The normal VHF could be converted to 2 meters, however that would be expensive. Not to mention the channel limitations. Could maybe be used in a repeator or packet setup.

Hi, there

Am I right in believing that full commercial radiotelegraph licences are still being issued in the US?
I qualified as a Ships radio officer nearly 10 years ago and served 7 years at sea but I know that they discontinued these exams in europe 2 or 3 years ago at the latest. Globe wireless in San Francisco are closing down the W/T service for all their stations next monday evening and really they only kept it open for a handful of russian and other ships who hadn't met the GMDSS deadline. 4 years ago morse was still in plenty of use at sea and my own personal opinion is that it was discontinued too early but it seems strange that the FCC stills holds CW tests for these licences since most ships don't carry any sort of dedicated radio operator anymore. Can anyone clarify this?

Thanks

This looks to be an ex-Government (YTG or Feds) radio ...

It is a GE Master II mobile radio with the following specs:

40 Watts Output Power
30 KHz Channel Spacing
8 Channels
150.8 - 174 MHz
Crystal Stability +or- 5 PPM
It needs a "remote head" (the controls) for correct operation.

This radio is used for VHF mobile radiotelephone or MDMRS (YTG) and CAN be modified to operate in the ham bands ... I would recommend this be converted a fixed station packet (data) radio as the remote head is not needed for that type of operation.

K1MAN was heard on 14.275 MHz Monday evening June 5 around 8 pm CT, although I couldn't get clear copy because of a weak signal and a strong QSO on 14.274. So K1MAN isn't quite gone, yet.

If the FCC really wanted to shut down K1MAN, all they have to do is change the rules to have bulletin stations operated by licensed club stations (such as W1AW) only. (That would also eliminate WA0RCR or whoever on 1860 Saturday evenings.) They could also put a time limit on the number of transmissions that can be made in a day.

Doc keeps claiming that he is going to make history with recordings from the stars. He has been making these claims for well over a month now and yet we still don't see this world changing news event.

Now I don't know Doc, but he has always been polite (or fairly so) to me. So I gave him the benifit of the doubt. Now, however, I am starting to get concerned! Is he really a fraud? Has he been hitting the bong just a little too much? I'm so confused!

Well, boys. I've asked each of you questions very politely, in some cases, far more politely than you might have deserved. I have been nothing but gentlemanly about this, but I don't understand your failure to respond.

Is there something about me that frightens you? They are such simple questions. There is really nothing to be afraid of.

All of you seem so eager to respond to other people it strikes me as odd that you can't answer my questions. Fear is the only logical reason.

If this is the 'round' nut that is smooth with two opposing groves, that's a pretty standard nut. However, the tool is fairly expensive. But even still, $46 sounds pretty steep.

Make your own if you can.

You might be able to use a set of 'circlip' pliers, but only if the nut isn't on their exceedingly tight. (These are pliers they sell that have replaceable
'tips' use to hook the little rings on the end of internal and external 'circlips'.
If you break it, the tips are replaceable.)

You MIGHT be able to get it off with good set of needle nose, but be careful or you will booger up the nut.

If it's really as tight as you say, it may have been put on when the plastic and any paint wasn't 'cured', in which case, you'll need the real tool, or something quite durable, to get it off.

How did you try to make a tool? You can't use that soft a pipe, it's gotta be fairly hard.

If you turn that around, the answer is no.

Not all operators of amateur radio equipment are licensed. There is nothing physically impairing one to not use an amateur radio without a license. And it is done. Not legally, mind you, but it is done.

Also some people consider CB radios to be Ham radios. They are not. CB radios are not licensed any more.

Hey rileygotcha, plaintruth, realdeal, or whatever your alias of the day is, is there any truth to the rumor that W4FQF is also on Riley's short list of radio misfits about to be taken off the air? After all, he is a well known QRMer, and I understand that tapes of him in action have been sent to Riley for his listening pleasure. Apparently, in one of the tapes, he admitted that he was, and would continue QRMing as long as Porky was on the air! Not too bright of ol' W4FQF, to admit to such an illegal activity when it's widely known that several people are recording 14313 and 3901!!
So, whatcha think? Is he one of the next to fall?

In the sense that "amateur" is the complement of "professional", no.
There are a great many amateurs using homebuilt radios down on the 1750 meter (CFR Part 15) band. Many do not have (nor do they need) a license to operate there.

Now, why did you send your question to the firefighters and EMS NGs, Burt?

<<<<Well folks, K1MAN had a nice run. How long did he thumb his nose at the FCC? IF THEY WANT YOU, THEY'LL GET YOU. Case closed. AF2Y
The FCC's letter to Glenn Baxter, K1MAN

June 25, 1999
Mr. Glenn A. Baxter
RR 1 Box 776
Belgrade Lakes, ME 04918
Re: Amateur radio station K1MAN
Dear Mr. Baxter:
On May 14, 1999, personnel from the Boston office of the FCC monitored your station on 3.975 MHz at approximately 9:30 a.m. and attempted to inspect your station at the tip of Long Point at Belgrade Lakes. There was no one present at your station and there were no vehicles on the premises. The radio transmissions continued while the FCC personnel went to your residence at Point Road, but there was no one present there either. On May 15 while your station was on the air, FCC personnel again attempted to inspect your station but there was no one present and there were no vehicles.
We note from your web page, and from our own monitoring, that your Amateur Radio station K1MAN makes daily radio transmissions apparently totaling 110 hours per week. We note also that often the starting times are erratic and there is no station identification transmitted at the end of the transmissions.

The Commission's Amateur Radio Service rules require that Amateur stations be under the physical control of a control operator, and that the control operator must ensure the immediate proper operation of the station. The rules further require that station identifications be made at specific periods.
You are requested to provide the following information pursuant to Section 308(b) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, 47 U.S.C. Section 308(b). Under this provision, the Commission is given authority to request information from a licensee or applicant regarding the operation of a radio station.

1(a). List the name, address, and telephone number of the control operator of K1MAN on May 14 and 15, 1999.
(b). During what times, and on what frequencies, was K1MAN transmitting on May 14 and 15, 1999 ?
(c). State the whereabouts of the control operator, if any, of K1MAN during the times of operation on May 14 and 15, 1999.
2. List the name, address and telephone number of all control operators of K1MAN during the hours of operation listed on the web page and in your daily transmissions.
3. Are any portions of K1MAN transmissions automated ? If so, give details and provide a copy of the control circuit configuration.
4. List the programming schedule for K1MAN for the period January 1, 1998 through June 1, 1999, and provide the dates, times and frequencies.

5. For each of the transmissions of K1MAN listed in "4", furnish the name, address and telephone number of the control operator.
6. Were automated tape control devices utilized at K1MAN during the period January 1, 1998 to June 1, 1999 ? If so, state the dates, frequencies and times used.
7. List all dates, times and frequencies that K1MAN has transmitted without a control operator being present, since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995.
8. Since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995, has K1MAN been controlled remotely ? If so, state the dates, times, frequencies and provide a detailed schematic of the control circuit configuration.

You are requested to furnish this information in writing within 30 days from the date of this letter. You are advised that Congress has made a willful misrepresentation in response to a letter of thus type punishable by fine or imprisonment. The information submitted by you will be used to determine what, if any, action to take in this matter.
Sincerely,
W. Riley Hollingsworth

But the KEY POINT (according to FEMA's consultant) is that the re-radiated energy builds up IN PHASE because the point at which new radiation is being generated is advancing just as fast as the newly-generated wavefront is propagating, i.e. at the speed of light. This is what gives the EMP its very sharp wavefront and wide bandwidth, which in turn is what makes bypassing and shielding tricky.

Did for awhile now I am getting my -12 volts in the computer dropping to -9 every once in awhile. If I remove the line out to the 940 it doesnt do it. I am trying to find out if my sound card is getting bad. Any help would be appreciated. Thanks.

Yawn...I was waiting for someone to chime in with that. Being at a higher frequency than 30 MHz, 6 meters is not in the designated HF spectrum so "NO HF" is correct. Yes, I have operated 6 meters at a club station. Unfortunately the NO SKIP/NO DX indicated above was applicable at all times that I tried it. True, there are times when sky wave propagation is active on 6 meters, it just never occurred when I was near a 6 meter radio. If you're into waiting for nature to do its thing time, for e-skip, meteor shower or top of the solar cycle for intermittent f skip, then yes, 6 meters may be OK for you.

But waiting for openings is about as much fun as watching grass grow.

Then again, if one is NCI with no abilities to receive and transmit international Morse code, then there is no other choice...'obviously'...

HEY OUT THERE!
LEARN MORSE IF YOU REALLY WANT TO GET ON TWENTY METERS. THE 5 WPM RELAXATION WILL TAKE YEARS TO BE IMPLEMENTED IF IT IS EVER IMPLEMENTED AT ALL.

ANYWAY, TAKING THE TROUBLE TO LEARN 5 WPM WITHOUT UPGRADING TO 10 OR 13 WPM
IS USELESS. 5 WPM CANNOT BE CONSIDERED A SERIOUS COMMUNICATIONS MODE. 5 WPM IS SO SLOW THAT IT IS WORSE THAN NO CODE BECAUSE IT CLUTTERS THE BRAIN WITH A USELESS

TALENT.

AND YOU CAN AND SHOULD HAVE FUN LEARNING 13 WPM, TOO. CODE IS A PART OF HAM RADIO THAT MAKES US UNIQUE COMMUNICATORS. DO NOT TRY TO ENFORCE YOUR NEW WAVE LIBERAL ANYTHING-GOES NO CODE VIEWPOINTS ON OTHERS IN THE EXISTING COMMUNITY OF HAMS, IN A HOBBY THAT HAS THRIVED AND DONE QUITE WELL WITHOUT THE CONSTANT WHINING AND PRODDING OF THE NEW BAND ON NO CODE FREAKS.

HAM RADIO AND CODE IS SUPPOSED TO BE FUN SO HAVE FUN, DAMMIT.

Coincidence or not, the Titanic incident and amateur radio licensing began in the same year.
So morse code was part of ham radio (and many other places too), but to save lives at sea. Then the use of morse code turned recreational as these other users of morse code stopped using code on a regular basis.

The question was posed when N0VFP posted a message entitled "Taking July 4th Seriously." I merely asked him if it was his work or someone else's. He has yet to clarify the issue.

Neil, you can remove it with a small pair of needle nose pliers. In my own experience, I relocated the battery with leads into a more accessible area using a battery intended for lap tops which came leads, heat shrink, and Velcro.
Good luck,

Hello all, and thanks for your kind responses to my plea. Actually there IS a fairly happy conclusion to my plight. I was able to, as so many suggested, use a pair of needle nosed pliers to do the job. The only proviso is that I had to firmly clamp the pliers with a "c"clamp and a couple of large fender washers to make the plier's joint more rigid.

But, was that nut TIGHT! So tight, that I had to bear down and use my entire strength to break it free. It was a little disconcerting, I don't like pushing that hard on such a small area, but it did finally "click" and start to turn.

I did then do what one other person thoughtfully suggested, I put in a battery holder somewhere else in the radio (easy to reach) and ran a couple of wires to the old, now-empty, battery position.

But, my frustration with Kenwood remains. It would have been an easy matter for their engineers to make this easier to access, user-repairable, rather than the white-knuckle affair that it is. I'm not afraid of working on electronics, but when there is such a real risk of doing physical harm, my nerve begins to fade.

So, thanks again all, and this will definitely affect my future shopping behaviour. I have redoubled my determination to ask where all of the "consumable" items are located (bulbs, batteries and the like) and to think twice before I buy any product that requires a trip to a high-priced service center to replace them.

Best regards and 73's to all who responded.

Neil, N1DMA NeilR@innermedia.com

P.S By the way, this was a more educational experience than I expected. In the process of researching this, I spoke with a variety of Kenwood-authorized service centers, and heard some pretty wild things. Like "this is no longer the age of Elmering and helping each other...I have to make a living, and if I have to charge you for a full hour's work to spend 1 minute loosening that nut, that's what I'm going to do...". And, "no, it's not Kenwood's job to make these rigs easy to service, they're too complicated anyway for the ordinary ham".

Really an eye-opener.

I don't care what the liberty net is all about. I don't agree with their QRM practice, but I will go to bat for anybody who has to "jusify their use of amateur frequencies" No one has to justify use for a net! Maybe they have to justify the reason for the QRM but not the net. Anyone can have a net if they so choose, and it can be about any topic they want. If you don't like the content, then change the freq.

On the other hand, they should follow the guidelines for obscene language. If they want to spread their hate opinions via the radio they are welcome as long as they keep it clean, and avoid QRMing(and this is really the issue). This is America and people have died for everyone's right to have an opinion no matter how sad and unintelligent it is.

I dont know, I guess they think they are serving their country or something. I am looking to purchase my first HF Rig. I have very limited funds. I have been looking at the MFJ-94XX (XX = 20m, 40m, 75m). The catalog has them listed at $239.95. Are their any other SSB Single band HF radios at this price or lower available?

Any personal experience with the above models? Comments and suggestions will be appreciated.

Well....I had a similar problem with a Kenwood TH-205AT....I really like this HT, however it forgot all 3 Memories....every time it turned off. And unlike your situation, I did not have the luxury of remoting the battery......Kenwood wanted $15 for the $2 CR2025.....a common wal-mart avalible item......All I had to do is carefully repackage the battery....and ever so carefully solder on new tabs...manuver it into it's small home, with all kinds of nifty devices around it.Yes, quite an ordeal. But at the time before eeprom and other less forgetful technology....I guess it is the best they could do. Remember, they are of course, Engineers. (No offense to any out there) Could they have made it easier? Sure......But ALL hams like a good challenge, Right?
All is well with my little HT for 5 years.....I just have to keep telling myself that......

Maybe if you'd try to keep your goat hidden just the least little bit, it wouldn't be so easy to get.

Maybe a ham license will help you. If you want some help, I'm sure there

I don't think you'd be very satisfied with a single band HF radio, especially from that particular manufacturer.

Rather than a new radio, have you considered used equipment. There are a lot of pretty darn good HF rigs which show up in the price range you're considering. Granted, they come without warranty, but looking at your v-card, my guess is that you're pretty technically competent and could handle most electronic problems.

Check into rec.radio.amateur.swap on usenet, or subscribe to ForSale-Swap@qth.net and shop around. Something very nice like a Drake TR-4 or TR-7 might well be available which would be in your budget range.

After what I've been hearing all day on my Kenwood R1000 receiver with a hank of wire on the floor as my aerial(I'd buy a TinyTenna if that horse's ass N0VFP wasn't tied into it),I can't understand why the FCC would remotely consider taking WB2OTK off HF for one hour, let alone until Sept.25th. Is the FCC against education and enlightenment? Does it want us to remain ignorant as did the Vatican to the Europeans before the Reformation opened up intellectual vistas? That Whiten fellow is positively a storehouse of information and what he lectured on today, the sciences of herpetology and pharmacology,was better than college courses. First off, let's not mistake herpetology with "Herpietology." The former is the study of reptiles with a possible emphasis on snakes while the latter is the science of exploring the demented evil bigoted mind and lying tongue of a Saint Croix felon, who in reality, is a gigantic pain in the asp anyway. This morning while doing my book and paperwork, I listened to the magnificent WB2OTK discuss the snake he caught in his yard with Astley on Jamaica,6Y5GR,who was either told by a voodo man or by some lamebrained preacher that snakes were put here by God to punish man. Can you imagine a grown man believing such crap? My best guess, and I may be wrong, is that the snake, like the lizard and bird,is a remnant from the age of dinosaurs.Who the hell cares anyway? And so Rich went into this long discussion with the fellow from Jamaica about the various genuses or genae or geni or I DREAM OF JEANNIE of the world of snakes and I was mesmerized.Too bad Rich wasn't with me in the late '80s when I visited the Sonora Desert Museum off Speedwell in Tucson,AZ. His presentation would have been a hell of a lot clearer then the guide's who had just four recognizable teeth and a lisp to boot. As we approached each glass enclosure to look at the living specimen, while he speaking he accidentally spat on the glass and between that and his ugly puss, the snake slithered under rocks in its herpeterial sanctuary. Although I saw many reptiles, I had to be satisfied by just reading about them on small plaques alongside each enclosure. God, they must have had the entire BARF and StumpJumper groups on display. Rich continued explaining the world of snakes to Astley whose main response to all this intellectualism was, "And God made the birds and I go out every morning to listen to them chirp and belch because the Lord rules and the rain is a signal from the Lord and the birds crapping on my head is a gift of the Almighty etc..." How nauseating! Now had I been giving the man a lecture, I would have had no patience with all his religious mysticism and left, but Rich, being the true gentleman he is, and especially a man who respects all colors and religions, did not depart hastily but instead stuck it out to ther bitter end. I'm not sure what Astley gained from that QSO since he seemed occupied with cleaning the bird droppings out of his dreadlocks but I sure gained an enormous amount of knowledge, as I always do, when lectured by the great WB2OTK. I then put away my notebook and Bic thinking that today's lecture was over but I was mistaken. This afternoon, once again he was on discussing the pharmacodyamics of coffee, barbiturates and Ritalin. His knowledge is startling and to think that illiterates have been successfully lobbying for his suspension is most disconcerting.My appeal to you readers is this:if you are gaining as much knowledege as I thanks to Rich's on-the-air lectures, let the FCC know about it. Remember that suppression of intellectualism is, as Herpie would say,"WRONG,WRONG,WRONG." Eagerly I look forward to another possible lecture by Rich on another subject in which I'm weak-like electronics.When you hear him on the air,instead of whining and moaning about his greatness that you're losing sight of amid the maelstrom of contoversy, try whipping it out..oops...I mean your Bics and notebooks and start writing. Why be satisfied to remain ignorant? AF2Y,Doc

October Court Date Set in KV4FZ Renewal Case
WASHINGTON, DC, July 7, 1999--Herbert L. Schoenbohm, KV4FZ, will get his day in court this fall in his fight to retain his Amateur Radio license. Last fall, the FCC denied Schoenbohm's petition for reconsideration in the case which has slogged through the administrative process since 1995. Last summer, the FCC upheld the supplemental initial decision of an administrative law judge denying Schoenbohm's application to renew his Amateur Radio license. The FCC affirmed that finding October 6.

The next step is oral arguments, set for October 18 in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. That court hears all appeals from federal agencies on adjudicatory matters.

ALJ Edward Luton had found that Schoenbohm, of Kingshill, Virgin Islands, had "engaged in misrepresentation and lacked candor" in testifying about his 1992 felony telephone toll fraud conviction and his solicitation of ex parte presentations. Schoenbohm, now 59, was convicted in federal court in 1992 of fraudulently using a counterfeit access device to obtain long-distance telephone service. He served two months confinement plus two years of probation. The FCC also said he solicited others, using Amateur Radio, to make ex parte presentations on his behalf, in violation of FCC rules. The FCC said his behavior, in combination with his fraud conviction, justified nonrenewal of his ham ticket.

Schoenbohm has been trying to renew his ham ticket for the past four years. He maintains that the FCC should renew his license because his conviction was several years ago, his sentence light, and he's had a spotless record and been fully rehabilitated. The FCC disagrees, however, saying that Schoenbohm "has not demonstrated that he possesses the basic character traits of truthfulness and reliability that are essential to licenseeship."

A brief filed May 10 on Schoenbohm's behalf by his attorney Lauren A. Colby contends that the Commission's actions to deny Schoenbohm's license renewal were "arbitrary and capricious and inconsistent with well-established precedents." Among other things, Colby argues in his pleading that Schoenbohm's criminal conviction does not merit denial of his license renewal and that the FCC has "previously renewed the licenses of convicted murders and marijuana distributors," that Schoenbohm did not violate FCC ex parte rules, and that he did not lie to the Commission. Colby asks the court to remand the case to the FCC with instructions to grant the renewal.

The FCC is expected to file its brief in the case July 15.

Schoenbohm's license expired in 1995, and his call sign no longer appears in the FCC database. However, he has been allowed to continue operating as KV4FZ until his administrative and judicial appeals are exhausted.

Actually looks like an old GE MASTR Exec II. Use to work on those beast many years ago st a radio shop in VA. The ER-89 is also a good clue it is an MASTR Exec II rather than an MASTR II, in addition the case on the MASTR II was a lot longer.

I find it ironic that old Herbie used to jam the HF nets and accuse those who ran phone patches of violating the rules by by-passing the phone company long distance charges and then he gets convicted of using a conterfiet access device to obtain long-distance telephone service for free. Poetic justice.

The Central States VHF Society is obviously feeling threatened by people who know how to utilize a mode of communication much more proficiently than themselves. Who died and gave them the exclusive right to determine what mode of communication can or cannot be used? This is so typical, "If I cant have my way, Ill kick all of you off the block".

Heres a suggestion for them: Hows about actually going out and learning how APRS works instead of running from it by trying to kill it dead.

Two hours and 51 minutes. Close but no cigar. I win. You lose. As predicted. But the outcome was never really in doubt. You had no clue.
Now you can just wait for the next challenge, which you will fail.

Tick, tick, tick.

Sounds as though Herb isn't doing too well already with this case. When you have the court and other agencies saying things like:

it gives you an indication of what's to come. Although none of us really know how the judge will rule - this doesn't sound good, or then again maybe it does.

I find it ironic that old Herbie used to jam the HF nets and accuse those who ran phone patches of violating the rules by by-passing the phone company long distance charges and then he gets convicted of using a conterfiet access device to obtain long-distance telephone service for free. Poetic justice.

Sure there is a purpose for the "Liberty Net"! They provide a place for all the wierdos and malcontents to gravitate to, and leave the rest of the spectrum in a state of intellegent bliss. Just like flies drawn to a pile of fresh cow flops, 3950

This is the mindset of ham radio in a nutshell. A bunch of retrograde hacks who have let the world pass them by. Now they look around and feel lost. Instead of learning to co-exist, or heaven forbid, educating themselves on new radio techniques, they want to dumb down the state of the amateur radio art. How passionate they get when their precious obsolete cw is threatened!

Without a place for experimentalists to push the state of the art, without a place to provide efficient and timely emergency communications, the amateur bands are a waste of spectrum space. The code fetishists and the rag-chewers are welcome to come along for the ride, but they are not going to run the show if I can help it.

Selah.

That's sort of an edgy response, isn't it. If you never had a discussion with me, you couldn't know whether you have a problem with me or not. To give you the easy answer to the rest, I am no one's "suck boy," whatever that is. In any event, I noticed that hasn't kept you from posting messages to them.

I was under the impression that newsgroups in general and this one in particular were for the purpose of an exchange of ideas. Frankly, none of these ideas are anyone's business. But we share them anyway. Furthermore, I have seen the occassion where you would ask questions that weren't your business by anyone's standard and weren't satisfied with any response that didn't include the answer to those questions.

Yes, the C74MSY is crystal controlled. I do have elements for this repeater ... None in the ham band, but they can be sent to ICM to be recrystalled for the ham bands. I've mantained these old MOTRAC UHF repeaters for years. It uses an 8072 (4657 also??) tube in the final PA.
I do have manuals for this beast.

BARRE, VT: The FCC has requested that Advanced class licensee David J. Tolassi, KC1ZQ, retake the Advanced class examination elements under the supervision of an ARRL-VEC VE team by August 30, 1999, or his license will be cancelled.

I have neither heard the goofball on the air nor read his tripe on this board, so I guess he must be boning up to take it THEIR way, this time around. Rich Whiten and I took ALL the tests THEIR way. Ever hear of "Finky" who used to be in the NYC office on Varick Street? His real name was Finkelstein but the guy was so brash,impatient and mean, he could have been Frankenstein.You'd hand him your paper; he'd scan it and either say, "You pass," or "SEE ya in 30 days." And when you tried to make a statement, he'd ignore you and say,"Next!" For those of you who never took a test before an FCC examiner, you missed one of the enchanting moments in your lives. Good heavens...what PRESSURE. But something good came out of it upon passing-a realization that you did it THEIR way and mastered it and overcame the odds. But I am rather ticked off about having taken and passed my Extra in April '78. That's why I have the unique call of AF2Y which stands for Always Friendly 2 You. Immediately the FCC recognized my charm, warmth, tenderness and caring nature which certainly have been manifested on ham radio for 30 years.I'm aggravated at how poor band conditions are on 20 meters. Whom can I work? Hardly anyone even with my superior equipment and Cloudwarmer. When I passed that Extra, I was told that I'd be able to work the world non-stop because bad conditions did not apply to such a high grade of license. They LIED and I sent them a bill for my time and expense. That morning it cost me $3 to get through the Lincoln Tunnel; $5 to park and $3 for breakfast consisting of orange juice, scrambled eggs, toast and coffee. I also think I had to pay $4 to take the test but I'll have to research my cancelled checks fron '78. If so, then I'll send an amended bill since I omitted the fee the first time around. They either pay me or open up 20 meters and I told Riley so. Well, getting back to the easy way to nowadays pass tests, my suggestion is to do away with the VEC program entirely as well as tossing out this Code Free license. Actually I was of a different mindset regarding the latter for quite a while by reasoning that the electronics brains of tomorrow just might be able to get into our hobby/service easier than before and by doing so, this nation would establish an even deeper brain bank. But what did we get instead? A moron like N0VFP. This is exactly what we do not need! And how about that punk kid from "McQueeniesport" PA, Frankie Todd Jr? Has anyone ever run across a bigger loser than that waste of humanity? The protege of MARTIN (he used to be just plain Marty but got fancy in his old age). I mean that BARFmeister Chittum who has had more calls than birds have feathers and a brain to match. The protege of "Grandpa Al Abernethy", K4OKA, the drunk who went one year to dental school and passed lunch. The protege of "Queenie" Mort, K3QAM, the hyena sounding HEH..HEH...HEH...HEH..HEH.. clown from PITTSBOIG but the truth is that he never would be allowed to live in such a great city. He's in McKeesport, a blue collar dingy grimy place at which Pittsburghians thumb their noses. No, I changed my mind about letting scum into ham radio just to inflate our numbers to buy more QSTs and to look at more ads and to buy more equipment to make the ARRL richer and so on and so forth. Hey, don't get me wrong..I'm an ARRL member but let's be honest...it's ALL ABOUT MONEY,isn't it? Having passed my exams the hard way gives me a greater appreciation of the sense of accomplishment especially after hearing "Finky" say, "You're going to become one of the greatest hams in the history of the United States," and he was perfectly right. My license is in a solid 24K gold frame and set on the family room mandelbaum..oops..I mean mantlepiece with an 8 x 10 glossy photo over it showing me sitting at the rig and bearing the inscription,"To the most outstanding ham in America. Love, Doc." I mean you got to see it guys. IT'S ME FROM TOP TO BOTTOM! AF2Y, Doc

Well, boys. I've asked each of you questions very politely, in some cases, far more politely than you might have deserved. I have been nothing but gentlemanly about this, but I don't understand your failure

Is there something about me that frightens you? They are such simple questions. There is really nothing to be afraid of.

All of you seem so eager to respond to other people it strikes me as odd that you can't answer my questions. Fear is the only logical reason.

Oh LRod... Oh Dearie, LRod!

You are correct in that deduction. Sane and rational people are obviously afraid that you might want to befriend them. It's quite apparent to me that you don't want to befriend them. So I see no "logical reason" for them to be afraid of you. But not everyone has the education and skills necessary to deal with your overtures. Lamebrain questions can be very frightening to laypersons.

In a gentlemanly way, would you mind explaining how your brain was damaged? Did you suffer a fall from your mother's arms? Perhaps it was the result of a childhood disease? There is no reason to fear an open discussion of your "condition". How many whole fingers do you have on both hands? Missing a few joints here and there?

You see, we can all get along just fine as long as we conduct ourselves as ladies and gentlemen. My goodness, I haven't felt this proper since the U.S. Congress ordered me to be a gentleman and kill commies. Oh... why was I born so disobedient?

FCC'S HOLLINGSWORTH QUESTIONS LIBERTY NET

The FCC has asked a net control station of the Liberty Net on 3950 kHz to justify the net's use of Amateur Radio frequencies. Via Certified Mail May 7 to Extra class licensee Victor A. Misek, W1WCR, FCC Legal Adviser Riley Hollingsworth said monitoring on May 1 indicated that Misek's station and members of the group for which he was acting as net control "began transmitting on top of existing Amateur communications that were already in progress." Hollingsworth said that such operation "is considered deliberate interference and cannot be tolerated on the Amateur frequencies."

Hollingsworth also pointed out that Congress has authorized the FCC to seek information to enable it to determine the qualifications of a licensee or applicant. "We are so far unable to determine how the transmissions of this group meet the standards of, or contribute to the purposes of, the allocation of frequencies for the Amateur Radio Service," Hollingsworth wrote.

Hollingsworth alluded to The Liberty Net in comments during an FCC forum at the Dayton Hamvention, openly questioning the behavior of net participants. "I don't get the connection yet" between what Liberty Net participants do on the air and the basis and purpose of Amateur Radio, he said.

In his letter to Misek, Hollingsworth suggested The Liberty Net explore operation on the Internet or seek a low-power FM broadcast grant if that service is authorized. Hollingsworth reminded Misek that Part 97 "prohibits communications on the Amateur frequencies that, on a regular basis, 'could reasonably be furnished alternatively through other services.'" He also pointed out that Part 97 prohibits broadcasting. Hollingsworth invited Misek to contact him to discuss the matter.

I am looking for a cavity notch filter or plans for building a notch filter. I am not sure if a single notch filter would be tight enough. I am trying to notch out a undesired signal in band. I run a UHF repeater and I have a bad desense problem. I use a good bandpass notch duplexer and have added a DCI bandpass filter (the repeater is in a very high RF environment). I just found the source of my problems, in band. A near by amateur UHF packet station. I need to notch out this frequency that is only about 1.8 MHz away.

Any ideas???

Okay, let's review; from your original post:

> Are you one of those NO CODE=NO HAM people?
> If so your (sic) a CB'r!

And from your response to me:

> The main point is all the nasty remarks made by the Pro Code group

Given that historically ALL hams abhor being identified with CB, your syllogism that Pro Coders are CBers certainly qualifies at least as a nasty remark. That renders your argument untenable.

You further state:

> Don't believe it! Come visit us here... > and find out what the NOCODERS think of you!!!!

And when one does that, we find ONE nocoder's opinion. And the example against which he (you, I assume) rails is a singular opinion as well. You can't paint with that wide a brush and have anyone take your arguments seriously.

> Just because someone does not know code does not mean that they are 1 > stupid 2 lazy 3 inbred 4 knuckle-dragger !

I couldn't agree more. At least two of those descriptions are unique to this NG, and they are an indicator of misanthropy, not cogent reasoning, and certainly not civil debate.

> The main point is all the nasty remarks made by the Pro Code group on > the NG is not the way to make the nocode techs want to learn code!

I agree. Learning code is something that has to come from within. That is the point missed by virtually everyone in the "lower the standards" side of the issue. The purpose of the code test is not to filter out idiots. As has been aptly pointed out, the bands are full of FCC certified coded idiots. The purpose of the writtens is not to filter out idiots.

The purpose of such rigorous exams is so the applicant can demonstrate that they are willing to make an effort at earning access to a valuable resource. By exercising the discipline to make that demonstration, the applicant makes a concomitant demonstration that suggests that a modicum of good sense and social responsibility will be shown with the privileges for which they worked so hard.

It does not guarantee that, as witnessed by some of the activities we hear. But I'm not willing to concede it is a threshhold below which we can depend on the respect and restraint of most that the privileges deserve.

> The reason to learn code is to get HF access.

Absolutely.

> And who is on HF to talk to? The Procoders!

There you go with that wide brush, again. Since apparently you don't have HF access, it is disingenuous to purport some sort of valid demography with regard to the people and their conversational skills that you would meet there.

> And why would I want to go to the pain of learning code just to talk > to the ones who think I am lazy, stupid, inbred, ect (sic). and keep > on saying so in here!

If you're foolish enough to make the effort to learn code and then seek out those you describe, assuming you're not now painting with that wide brush you use, then you should examine your motives for pursuing this exercise in the first place.

> If I'm calling you names would you want to talk to me? I doubt it!

Well, you called me a CBer, and here I am.

> Go to the web site and find out for yourself! Unless your (sic) afraid > nocode is contagious and you might become a knuckle-dragger for being > there!

I did go there. I'll stand on my original assessment that it is lame. The logic fails in every respect.

What you don't know is that I spent 12 years as a Terminal Tech, thinking I couldn't get past 10 or so wpm. I didn't whine about it or complain that "the unfair system was violating my rights" or any other such twaddle. I accepted that the standard was 13 wpm, and eventually, when I was sufficiently motivated, I worked at it and passed it.

I would have taken an oath in those TT years that I couldn't pass 13, and that 20 was an impossible, superhuman obstacle. Later when I not only passed 20 but found (through DXing and contesting) that I was copying 25, then 30, then 35, I forever dismissed any claims of people that they "can't learn the code." That is utter, patent nonsense.

Little old ladies can do it. The deaf can do it. The blind can do it. Children can do it. Even stupid people can do it. The only people that don't seem to be able to do it are the "something for nothing" people.

Is that stupid? Inbred? Knuckledragging? You didn't hear me say so.

I mentioned somewhere else one time; there are a zillion hobbies in existance. Only one has a Morse code requirement. Why would you beat your head against the wall in that one instead of picking any of a zillion others?

May I also suggest that leading your code associated discussions with your chin does not serve your position well?

Who is/was "BATHROOM MAN"

'BATHROOM MAN' IS DONALD LEHTO, WA7WOC of Carefree, AZ. While in Arizona last year, I saw that area and his home and the boy's got a lot of moolah. He owns a very large bathroom supply company which was his father's until the old man was shot by Donald, or so the story goes. Then Mrs.Lehto intervened on the side of Donald and the case was closed. I do not know all the facts but it did come from a reliable source in Lehto's area. The FCC knows whom he is since he was tracked down by the Phoenix A.R.C. Randy Best, WA7CPA,can fill you in on all details. Word has it that Lehto did receive a warning letter from the FCC but he's back on the air again, unidentified and jamming. AF2Y,Doc

I have long ago proposed the new name for this hobby if it continues to go in the direction that it is going in and is being directed in by ARRL and other Ham leaders. My "new" name for Ham Radio is: - CITIZENS' MULTI-BAND [CMB]
IMHO that will be the end of the matter.
PLEASE keep thinking,
I never met a Ham I didn't like,
Hams need MORE license classes,

I am looking for a cavity notch filter or plans for building a notch filter. I am not sure if a single notch filter would be tight enough. I am trying to notch out a undesired signal in band. I run a UHF repeater and I have a bad desense problem. I use a good bandpass notch duplexer and have added a DCI bandpass filter (the repeater is in a very high RF environment). I just found the source of my problems, in band. A near by amateur UHF packet station. I need to notch out this frequency that is only about 1.8 MHz away.

Any ideas???

Mike

The unidentified weasel,"Rileygotcha" is celebrating over Rich being kicked out? Kicked out of where, the StumpJumper windbag racist group? That would be a mechiah (Blessing in Gallic). I don't get it. This afternoon, due to thiousands of requests by phone and e-mail, I got on 20m and had a wonderful conversation with Mr.Whiten, the finest ham to ever hold a ticket. Was I talking to an impersonator? Doubtful. A ghost? Even more doubtful. I'm sure I was talking to that same guy who, according to the cowardly pseudonymic "Rileygotcha", was KICKED OUT. Seems to me that the freak sure likes to argue on this board and he thinks he's good at it. Why I'll bet he considers himself a master debater. For someone supposedly not there, Rich definitely held up his end of the QSO in superb style, with the grace and eloquence that he alone emanates. His speech, choice of words, put Shakespeare to shame and I ain't talking about Chaim Shakespeare, owner of the 4th Avenue deli in New York City. If you want the best hot pastrami on rye, oy what he can do for YOU! By the way his real name was Shakestein but he changed it for business reasons. To continue-what's all this goodbye WB2OTK stuff, anyway? I'm not even sure if he got a letter telling him to take off his suspenders until Sept.25th. And if he did, then can't he stay on during an appeal process if indeed he will appeal? "Rileygotcha," you unidentified brown stain-you're celebrating needlessly and just perhaps unnecessarily too.
To paraphrase the song, "Rich's suspension..it ain't necessarily so." My feeling is that you should concentrate on the MAJOR MAJOR problem having befallen the cur from St.Croix who is now written up in the ARRL Web Extra. How would you feel knowing that you were so mentally ill to actually believe in denial and lies to such an extent as to go bankrupt convincing lawyers that you weren't mentally ill in the first place? All Schoenbohm had to do was to be candid before Judge Luton, apologize for rotten achievements in ham radio and that would have been it. APOLOGY ACCEPTED-RELICENSURE GRANTED! And you concern yourself with a minor problem between WB2OTK and the FCC? "RICH IS GONE..RICH IS GONE." Your ass he is! AF2Y.Doc nor do I. That is why I suggest to them that they clean up their operating practice. Didn't you read that part of my post?

>It sounds like you believe that everyone should have free rein over "the Use"

I believe if they are licensed and follow the rules, then they should have free reign. Are you suggesting that we censor certian people because we don't agree with their view points?

>of the amateur bands. Lets not forget that it (the amateur service) was put in >place for a worthwhile reason.

Yes it was. but remember that the first hams were not motivated by traffic nets, or emergency operations. If that were all we used the bands for then they would be very quite, especially today with cell phones and the such. The exchange of opinions, no matter how bad or unintelligent is a heck of a lot better than "QSL OM UR 599 es the qth is..."

Are you suggesting that apparent "broadcasting" >repetitious monologues, playing of commercial broadcasts tapes should be >allowed or not have to be justified.

Once again I said that I belive that the issue is the broadcasting and the qrming in my post. Did you not read all of it?

LOL
>Ps.do you think "obscene" language comes only in 4 letter words??

Yes, Just because you don't agree that Jews are bad and black people are a problem doesn't make it obscene. Now the use of certian adjectives to explain those opinions might be, but the idea itself cannot be anymore than the debate of CW free licensing. By the way, if you are reading all of this message, which I doubt because you seem to have a tendancy not to read posts completely, I DO NOT AGREE WITH THE LIBERT NET'S OPINIONS.

If people like you had their way, we would be burning books!

I suggest you focus on the obvious issues with the net which are illegal operating practices and not illegal ideas.

Since Amateur Radio is the only "hobby" that utilizes the Radio spectrum. In my opinion, CB andFRS are not hobbies, their radio services that are meant for personal/business use. Not to say that many people do consider these two services as great ways to get on the air.

Let me see if I get this right. You belong to an amateur radio club and when volunteers are asked for you take two steps back. The volunteers go out and do a bang up (great) job. Then since you believe running away from things by not talking about them doesn't do anyone any good you bitch and moan about the job the volunteers did because you would have done it differently and better.

In my almost 20 years in ham radio,and as a past officer of several clubs, I have seen your type all over the country. You sit in the back of meeting complaining but you do nothing to help out. You want all the benefits without the contribution. You think reporting the facts in a negative light is a contribution?

Maybe you are stuck in your area and have never been to other areas of the country where well put together SKYWARN teams are very much appreciated by their communities and the National Weather Service. Instead of putting something down, why don't you get involved?

You kind of remind me of my brother. He doesn't vote but then he bitches about those who got elected...hmmm...well I guess there are those of us who do vote and end up doing the same thing...but I think our voices count a heck of a lot more than his and people like him.

If you want to report the facts by just observing them...why don't you become a member of the Nielson family?

Respectfully submitted,

Strange. Just the other night I was thinking that it might be better if KJI were back. I was concerned that the Liberty Net fellas might start to fight and argue among themselves, and actually divide the group.

But Riley has done them a favor! The enemy is back! The group will now have a common bond, a goal, a reason to carry on!

Riley, you blew this one! Your ADL orders were to put KJI back on the air to "fight the Nazi's". The Nazi's might have self-destructed on their own, had you left them alone. But now they're one cohesive unit once again!

Jeff,

I did not say that the government was motivated by trafic nets. I said that the first hams were not motivated.

Also, if the use of radio were still the best or primary way of handling traffic then it would still be used on ships today. Unfortunantly I was not able to make a career as a ship's operator because they found a better way.

Don't get me wrong, I love amateur radio. I've been hamming since I was 10 years old and still enjoy it today. I believe that we should spend our energies recruiting new, young, hams and let the idiots do themselves in!

I am a 24 year old female high school physics teacher in Colorado. I've had the idea in the back of my head for some time to get involved with ham radio. I've done a little CB-ing and SW-ing, but not much. I don't know anyone who does amateur radio and I get the impression it is quite an expensive hobby.

I was wondering if some of you could tell me:
1) What do you do in amateur radio?
2) How do you learn it and do you have to buy an expensive radio to get started?
3) Are there many women or youth involved these days?
4) What potentials do you see for ham radio and the high school science classroom?
5) If you were going to advise someone NOT to get involved in amateur radio, what would be your reasons?

Thanks very much for your input.

Hi there

I am looking for the Icom CI-V interface programming manual. I have a Icom IC746 and IC820. I wanted to buy the RS746 software from Icom but it will apparently only work with my IC746. I need to control 2 rigs from my CI-V controller which is actually capable of controling 4 but I cannot find a good program on the net that can give me full remote functionaly for both rigs.

I now want to write my own interface but am battling a bit. I have the necessary codes but cannot get the interface to recognize or reply to anything I send to it.

Can someone help or send me a copy of the manual. I believe Icom does not sell it anymore! If you have an Icom dealer near you that sells it I will pay all costs.

I would like to write the program as Freeware and would appreciate any help I can get.

Sorry about answerin this one... but my shoes are already worn from draggin my feet :)

Flick one of the switches, leave it on for about a minute. Turn it off.
Flick another one of the switches. Leave it on and go up to the attic.

See which bulb is on. You have switch #1.
See which bulb is warm. You have switch #2 (the one you left on for a minute)
See which bulb is off and cold. Switch #3

Here's another one, this one took me quite a few days to figure out:

You have 10 stacks of coins, first stack has 1 coin, second stack has 2 coins, third one has 3, and so on. There's one stack in which the coins are of a different material and weigh double what the others weigh. You have a scale which is connected to a stick of dynamite sitting on top of your rig. When the scale senses weight on top of for the first time, it turns on. When it senses the weight it removed it unlocks the firing mechanism. When it senses weight on it a second time, it fires and your rig is now in a million pieces all over the shack. In other words, you can only put the coins on and take 'em off once before your rig blows.

If you manage to find which stack of coins is different, you place them in a slot and the firing mechanism is deactivated.

So... how do you find which coins are different?

Oh, and I remembered another one :)

This ham goes to Dayton and finds an old friend. They're both engineers and haven't seen each other in quite a while. So after the hellos and hugs part, one asks the other how his 3 daughters are. The other one replies fine. So the first one asks what their ages are.

"Well", replies his friend, "I'll put it this way: if you take their ages and add them up, the sum is 36. If you multiply the ages, the product is the number of the house in which we live".

So the guy gets to thinking, and eventually tells the other he can't solve it 'cause he's missing one detail.

"Oh yeah", replies his friend, "the oldest one has blue eyes".

In a few minutes, his friend tells him the ages of his daughters.

Question is, how'd he do it?

A few weeks ago I finally managed to get my linux box to receive newsgroups. And so I spent a good half hour downloading the hundreds of messages I had backed up on this newsgroup.

About 2 days ago I finally found a public server which will allow me to post to USENET, and when I posted to the newsgroup I received an autoreply back from the moderator with some "suggestions" as to the proper use of rec.radio.amateur.misc.

Got me wondering why anyone would take the time to set up an autoresponder and send messages to all new posters... I guess now I understand why. You people are incredible! I've spent the last 15 minutes reading threads, and all I've seen are flame wars, senseless junk mail, senseless comments on a Mr. Porkbutt who got his license killed... this darn group is worse than CB at 1 PM... no wonder they mail out a document on the proper use of rec.radio.amateur.misc.

Seriously, you people need to get a hold on yourselves. This group, I would think, is to exchange ideas on amateur radio like the radio amateurs that we are. I suppose all that stuff US hams learn while studying up for their license tests expires as soon as they get off the air...

Hi,

I had an 8100. I think you are seeing the beginning of a problem caused by the squelch/volume controls. As I understand it what happens with use is that these controls come loose from the printed circuit board to witch they are attached, both mechanically at first then electrically.

I sent mine to RT system in Huntsville, AL. They repaired the problem and for a relatively small charge.

Raymond,

It is extremely improbable that ordinary telephone service and broadcast TV and radio will simply collapse all over starting 1/1/2000 for any length of time. Some sporadic, locallized outages are sure to occur. You may not be able to get your email for a day here, get "all circuits busy" messages on LD phone calls to certain cities there, and so on. Don't worry so much about it, you are already way ahead of 99% of the population in readiness in that you have a ham ticket and a dual band radio. Most repeaters are either solar operated, or have a stout solar/battery back-up at least. Enough to get through the ocassional power or phone outage.

Tens of thousands of US hams have HF SSB stations that can run 100W out for hours a day on solar-charged gell cell battery systems. Many AM, FM, and SW broadcasters have generators to continue operation at reduced power in the event of blackouts. The world will not come to an end, it'll just slow down a bit for a short while (what a welcome relief!).

The best advice to a man who wants to stay connected is to upgrade to General Class or higher. Start studying today, and you can have HF access by Labor Day. Not only will you have another emergency communications tool, but you'll have a lot of fun when the power comes back on, and the phone rings again! Get an ARRL General Class study guide and download a shareware morse code training program like SuperMorse, or Morse Academy, and have at it!

I still dont understand what the heck you are talking about! What does using homebrew equipment have to do with my Skywarn critisizms??? Jeff, I dont have a problem with you but why are you dodging the bullet?

> But coming on here and slamming Skywarn isn't the

Thanks for the tip Jeff, however, unlike some people who use this medium as a sounding board to persuade, Im NOT attempting to convert anyone's mindset; And Im very glad to hear that your majority of your equipment is homebrew. I think every amateur should build at least one radio in their lifetime.

What I posted about Skywarn in my area is fact, not fiction. So, what you are saying is that I should pretend the facts dont exist and I should flavor those facts in a positive direction?? I didnt create the system, I observe it. These facts are indeed facts and running away from them by not talking about them doesn't do anyone any good. As in my profession, there are those who do not like candor and forthrightness or the seemingly abrasive way I project matters however Ive found that the best way to address an issue is to tell it like it IS, without the fluff.

Just a friendly reminder, that if you're interested, or know someone who is interested in getting their novice/tech ham license, "Ham Radio 101" is a program that airs on shortwave station WGTG. We provide both theory and morse code tutoring.

Programs #7 and #8 were produced last evening and will go out via Priority Mail. They should go into rotation either this weekend, or early next week.

For more info regarding time and frequency, please visit our website at: http://www.erols.com/imageinn/dwm and click on "Ham Radio 101".

Around here we call "Y2K," "Lie-2K."

There's another one going around:

"Why are mosquitoes and Y2K scammers alike?
They both know they only have a short time to suck blood before they're gone."

Seriously-
These Y2K hucksters and chicken-littles amaze me.
Does anyone seriously think the the general manager of their local power company is going to wake up on 1 Jan 2000 and say: "The grid's down?
Oh well. Everyone just go home to their families and we'll all starve together."
Nonsense. Total hogwash.

Some folks tend to forget the most powerful computer in the world -the Human Brain-is 150% "Y2K compliant." If there's a problem, they'll fix it- quickly. They don't want their kids to freeze or starve either.

Disruptions in the States will be minor or nonexistent. Disruptions in Asia and Africa might cause a few economic ripples, but the economy of the U.S. is so strong it would take a nuclear war or plague to seriously damage it.

Take a middle course. Stock a modest amount of extra food and batteries. This is a good idea for ANY time, not just "Lie-2K." More importantly, get a double fill on any prescriptions you must have to live.
Then sit back and relax.
Watch the egg run down the face of all those pundits and the disappointment when Jesus doesn't come at midnight.

I'm sorry that Art Bell is going to take a beating when "Lie-2K" busts-Before he jumped on the bandwagon he should have seen it was loaded with dung.

The Fact that Richard Whiten is off the air is one of the best thing that has happened to ham radio. Has anyone tuned accross the 75-meter band? Its quite. I think that the FCC struck a hit with the suspension of this guy. I also think that making it a highly public affair let the rest of the Amateur radio public know that they mean business. I wonder if its going to be the same crap when he gets back on the air in November. What a loser! I find it very funny that all these other people that he downed and called names are still on the air. I think that we all know what kind of guy this one is. I'm glad Rich Whiten is off the air with his trash talk and violent threats. I think that the service is better without this guy running his sewer hole he calls a mouth.

You're right. You do ramble. The only problem with Y2K will come from all the people living in ignorance and thinking something bad is about to happen. All services will continue to operate normally. You might find a shortage of beer on December 31, but then you probably would anyway. Bowl games will be played on time. Relax and get a life.

Exactly.

And that's why the assertion that the discussions on the weekly Liberty Net could take place on another radio service is completely and obviously false.

In addition, many amateurs, particularly older folks, are not and will not be connected to the 'Net -- which isn't a radio service anyway. And the 'Net is subject to delays, outages (intended and unintended), and other vagaries which don't apply to amateur radio.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Two things that I have found are the most important things to do:

1. Learn the code at speed.

2. Learn a substantial code vocabulary at speed.

Regarding the former, don't waste your time learning code slowly.
Learn it as fast as your mental faculties will permit. If you want to get to 20wpm, start learning at 25 wpm. The reason for doing that is to get you past learning dits and dahs, then learning letters, to learning words and phrases, at the speed usable for conversation.
Learning at a reasonable rate of speed, will prevent you having the 10 then 18 wpm hurdles, many folks have. The brain and ear combo should be able to process at 50wpm or faster, for most folks. 25wpm is a liesurely stroll.

Regarding the latter, you must learn approximately a 200 word vocabulary of morse words, minimally. By that, I mean you must learn the sound of the whole word rather than the stream of letters. Write down a vocabulary list of about 200 words commonly used for ham radio communication, plus the necessary prosigns and Q signals. Sort by word length, and learn the prosigns first, then the Q signals, then the sorted word list.
Learn the sound of the whole word, at speed. For example, learn ANT not as A N T, but as ANT, at speed. Start with the two, then three, then four, then 5 letter words. Then, drill random letters by five letter groups. Then drill random numbers by five letter groups. Additionally, it will help to learn a few of the most common Phillips code abbreviations.

That should get you well on your way.

A few are seen in surplus, now and again. If you can get to the really big hamfests like Dayton or Shelby, you can usually turn up a PRC-47 now and then. The TRC-75 is not all that often found complete. Bill Slep had some, years ago, but he is not around, anymore. Places like Fair Radio may have some or components thereof.
Finding complete sets will be the problem. Look on the boatanchors lists on the Inet, and something may surface. There is a tiny little AN/TRC-77 cw pack set that I have been looking for, for years, but they never seem to surface for me..... someday.....

Good Luck.

Edgar,

That aircraft frequency is almost certainly AM (not FM). At least here in the USA it is AM, and I assume also in your country.

All honest Americans should rejoice about the penalty that has been given fat PORKBUTT, WB2OTK for his Racist remarks on Ham radio. He is so dumb to do that act after he had been warned by Mr R. to clean up his act. Little did he know that a group of upstanding amateurs who were sick of his radio criminal operation turned him in. Thank god for recording devices, His racist remarks did not go unnoticed and tapes were sent to the right people. Gotcha Porkbutt!! Your big wind bag mouth got deflated and now you are off the air. Enjoy your time out. Oh , Yes Riley is getting on six meters, so do not pull that bully crap up there. You are a person who would call the greatest golfer in our time, Tiger Wood A N. Good by Porkie. Herb is still

No it's not just lame spam! I am sick and tired of the ProCode group with their name calling. Just because someone does not know code does not mean that they are 1 stupid 2 lazy 3inbred 4 knuckle-dragger !

The main point is all the nasty remarks made by the Pro Code group on the NG is not the way to make the nocode techs want to learn code! The reason to learn code is to get HF access. And who is on HF to talk to? The Procoders! And why would I want to go to the pain of learning code just to talk to the ones who think I am lazy,stupid,inbred,ect. and keep on saying so in here! If I'm calling you names would you want to talk to me? I doubt it!

That is why the posting is here. Go to the web site and find out for yourself! Unless your afraid nocode is contagious and you might become a knuckle-dragger for being there!

That was actually the defense those loons on the Grizzly Peak (K7IJ)

When the jammers and unlicensed SWLs are on here acting up, they're not Didn't work there, either.

need some education, and the very nature of your net indicates that you are not educated.

In other words, I support your right to be

Not true. Doppler radar can do a lot, but it can't replace an eyeball,

Is your issue with Skywarn or with some of the people who do it? At least they rather sit around and kvetch.

That's you. On the other hand, the National Weather service in northwest Ohio sees enough purpose in it that they have a VHF rig set up in their local office to handle Skywarn traffic directly. Who should we believe? Them or you?

Hi,

Welcome to the HF bands. If yu are willing to pay $239.95 for a single band, I would recommend you go for a simple TS120S Used, you can find many on the swap nets for about $275, for an extra 30-40 bucks you get a 80-10m SSB/CW/AM rig !!

Good luck ! & 73's

You have it backwards. You're tarring the Liberty Net participants with the actions of those who maliciously interfere with them. It is possible that creating such a misperception was one of the main purposes of the jamming.

The Liberty Net, the participants of which have obeyed the regulations and comported themselves as gentlemen almost without exception, has been in existence for some three decades. It operated in much the same manner as today from the very beginning. Its operation and operators are not the cause of the 3950 controversy.

There was never a significant problem with jamming or with improper operation of any kind on the frequency until 1992, when WA9KJI began jamming 3950 in earnest, and proceeded to recruit other jammers, notably a number of 14313 lawbreakers who have adorned this newsgroup of late, whose sewer-mouths and flagrant disregard of the amateur rules and the standards of civilized behavior are infamous. He lured them with lurid tales of the horrible "nazis" there who, like Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln, were so incredibly "evil" as to actually wish their race to survive.

For seven continuous years, WA9KJI and his followers and sympathizers jammed 3950 (and other frequencies where the legitimate stations moved to avoid the malicious interference) on an almost daily basis with endless tape loops, noise-making devices, recordings of other QSOs, obscenities, white noise, insane monologues, one-way transmissions containing malicious defamatory lies, chanting, music, and even the open call for the murder of one legitimate participant's little children. This literally took place for hours on end almost every day.

Some of this behavior is documented with recordings in the amateur radio section of my web site (url below). I urge anyone who wishes to know the facts to listen to these recordings. And, please, also peruse the sites of those who defend the jammers (they're usually posted dozens of times weekly in these newsgroups, underneath misspelled drivel, along with a pathetic leftist's "hate directory" url), and decide for yourself who is telling the truth about 3950.

In closing, I will note that since the vile WA9KJI has been removed from the bands, things are far more peaceful on 3950 and the Liberty Net. Though K5ZU, W9ART, and a few unidentified jammers still engage in malicious interference, many of the other radio outlaws such as K5BLB and gang appear to have been somewhat chastened by the fall of their leprous colleague.

Honor bright,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Well first thing skip - I don't see any resemblence of the "So Called" libertynet to any other legitimate amateur radio net.
It sounds like you believe that everyone should have free rein over "the Use"

repetitious monologues, playing of commercial broadcasts tapes should be

The NWS Central Pacific Forecast Office, located on the University of Hawaii campus, has 2m phone and packet sitting in a dedicated Skywarn workspace. They hold quarterly SW training sessions for Oahu's hams.

(Relocating NWS offices onto university campuses seems to be the latest trend -- it apparently gives the meteorology departments' students hands-on experience, and also provides added theoretical training for the NWS forecasters.)

Snail and email do not provide for real-time comms such as radio can

No coincidence. The government had to get a handle on the interference hams were causing to maritime comms (after realizing the necessity of having wireless aboard ships).

Hams didn't really play any direct role in safety of life at sea.

That didn't begin until the early 90s. In the 80-years in between, code was used almost exclusively for all high-seas communications. It was a great system -- simple and dependable. If a ship so much as send a single "dit" on 500 kHz, it wouldn't have gone unheard.

W9XN has a point. Once hams were "banished" to 200m, the "herd" was causing such great QRM to each other that some began to create better techniques in order to move to the shorter "unknown" wavelengths. There were no other services having such a great number of operators as within the amateur ranks, and the other services were content operating on the longer wavelengths (utilizing simple equipment) now that the hams were pushed aside. So those amateur-invented techniques only came about due to the entire ham population being forced onto shorter wavelengths. The other services had no need for such techniques.

Remember, the other services thought of the "shortwaves" as being useless -- they hoped that relocating hams "down" there would eventually cause them to lose interest and vanish from the airwaves completely. Only forcing such a huge number of amateurs onto the shorter waves brought about the technology which would revolutionize communications. (Early vacuum tube manufacturers targeted and only had hams as their customers.)

If that happened again and again, my guess is that you were at fault.
Posing question to the other operator such as his military experiences, career, inventions/patents, other hobbies, et cetera, surely would have captured his interest. You need to show the other op that you're interested in what he has to say. One of the first questions I ask is if the other op wants to play or learn chess. And I'm always blasted with questions about life in Hawaii (which I can talk about for hours). The QSO is 2-way -- don't wait for the other fellow to ask.

I gain my understanding of history by consulting published books written by authors referencing dozens and dozens of other published works written during the period in question. Having those references at hand allows me to verify the authors' statements. Referring to references written during the period one is studying is the only way to be assured the history being presented is accurate. The memories of the events haven't faded nor been distorted by time. A web site recommended by 73 Magazine might be your favorite source of history, but I have what I believe are better collections.

As I said before, incentive licensing was first created by the FRC in 1923. It was a government, not an ARRL, creation.

>"1970--The amateur population is 250,000 but stagnant. The license fees and >Incentive Licensing are blamed."

Opinion only. The 1923 version of IL had absolutely no effect on the reduction of licensed hams. The 220 meter back was taken away from the general amateur population and awarded to just the Extra First Class licensees. The result was an immediate increase in hams testing for Extra.

I believe you need to continue your studies back to earlier decades than to just to the 50s and 60s in order to gain a better understanding of the entire picture.

It began much much earlier than the 60s.

Did you take a poll? If so, I don't recall being asked. You shouldn't make such sweeping statements without either preceding them an "IMO" or by providing references.

Only about 5% of the hams I know were/are CBers. That's a far cry from your 75% figure.

Yes, and just try to check in on a Skywarn 2m net today with one of those converted AM Command sets. I suppose you could use slope-detection on your Gonset "Gooney Bird" to listen to the FM repeaters, too.

Look, pal, I'm on your side. I believe that drawing circuit diagrams, building, and trouble-shooting should be part of the testing process in order to get licensed. (a) Recognition and enhancement of the value of the amateur service to the public as a voluntary noncommercial communication service, particularly with respect to providing emergency communications.
(b) Continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art.
(c) Encouragement and improvement of the amateur service through rules which provide for advancing skills in both the communications and technical phases of the art.
(d) Expansion of the existing reservoir within the amateur radio service of trained operators, technicians, and electronics experts.

That pretty much covers everything now that we have the Internet. Heck we can all talk about anything on the internet. So wouldn't that reasonably be furnised alternatively through other services. Heck CB radio covers anything localy moblie. So what now? It looks to me Amateur radio is soon to be a thing of the past. That rule above now makes most communications on ham radio illeagal.
I think that the people of this great nation of ours are making a big mistake relying on the introstructure of this contry of ours to much. Whats going to happen when the bottom breaks loose. 1 missle can make a mess of things. Trust me when I say that the people in the coastlands are living in a false hope. What does Russia have to lose starting a fight with us. NOTHING they are starving over there. So with the making of the internet and the less people become interested in amateur radio the more we rely on the introstructure the more chance the Russains have in destrying our way of life. Not to say dope terroists

What is happening here is what used to happen on 75-meters during the night and 20-meters during the day. Most of the trash in here are from those two groups from those two bands. They are all scared of Uncle Charlie (FCC) so now they flame here instead of 14.313 and 3.901 3.8945 all though the 3.950 group you don't really see in here to much. All though there are a few fools on these bands the QRMing isn't as bad as it was before the so called FCC crackdown (yea right). The king screwball on 3.901 got suspended and a few of the little fish on 3.8945 got caught in the act but nothing was done to them. I really couldn't tell you what happen to the king screwball on 3.8945 and the FCC is still investagating the clan on 3.950. I think the FCC is doing a good thing BUT what is going on in this newsgroup is a result of that so called good scare the FCC is running.
Jimmy Obrien said he would never QRM HF again so the FCC let that scum go. So we all know what kind of chicken crap he is so now he attacks people in here. The same goes with AF2Y he is afraid of getting his ticket yanked so he is in here quite regular with his hate and porkbut AKA Rich Whiten radio theif trash mouth king screwball well we all know what has happened to that peice of pond scum. So with all that in mind you can see why there is so much crap in this newsgroup. These guys are all afraid of the radio.
I still don't understand this, they caught Jimmy Obrainless the idoit convicted felon in the act of jamming and let the little slime go but they nailed Rich Whiten with a 120 day suspension for doing the same thing. Heck they should of yanked Jimmy Obrien's ticket too! All the jamming and cussing that guy has done and still does shoot his ticket should of been pulled that very same day. There was a guy that jammed the heck out of 3.950 for years they caught him, then they suspended him for 2 years, then after a couple of months they let him back on the air so you tell me what is going on here.
Now that I have gave you a little bit of the history you decide for yourself weather on not you want to hang around here or not.

DXPEDITION TO ST PETER & ST PAUL ROCKS, PY0S, Brazil

Since the cancellation of the dxpedition to the St. Peter & St. Paul Rocks, PYOS, Brazil, which would have been held in January/1999, the NATAL DX GROUP has received many requests for a new Dxpedition, to serve the radio-amateur community worldwide.

We are happy to announce that contacts with the Brazilian Navy, through the Sea Resources Secretariat Comission were made, and two radio operators will be allowed to remain in the rocks for the duration of the ship's stay.

The Brazilian Navy visits the rocks for maintenance their equipment once every six months. There has small wood house. The house is used by geological, biological purposes on that area. The Brazilian Navy stay on the area to control fishing.

During our recent meetings with the Brazilian Navy, NATAL DX GROUP designed two operators for the dxpedition: Karl Leite PS7KM and Pergentino Andrade PT7AA.

It is estimated that the dxpedition will begin between the end of September and the beginning of October. Further information will be given on middle of September.

We will be on the air for 10 consecutive days, 24 hours a day, on 6/10/12/15/17/20/40 and 80 meters band on CW and SSB. Special emphasis will be given to the 40 and 80 meters band. We regret to inform you that there's not sufficient space to erect a 160 meter antenna. By the way, if we will find schematic for a short dipole we will try to built one.

We will use the following callsigns: for SSB, ZX0SK. QSL info: PS7KM. For CW, ZW0SP. QSL info: PT7AA. Both via callbook. Please note that where insufficient postage or no SAE was provided these QSL cards will go via the bureau. As for normal bureau cards these will be processed as time permits. FYI, brazilian bureau is working very bad and slowly under delays.

And everyone in here says that the no code technician will kill Amateur radio but we won't get a chance with (3 ALARM JERKS) like you Bert

What you need to do is this;
1 tell this school teacher that your sorry for sticking your fat foot in your mouth and,
2 change your signature file.
Please let me suggest this:

810. Kenwood interface IF-10C ??

Please:

Is there some kind soul out there that owns a Kenwood IF10C interface module and is willing to share some information ?

I have been unable to locate an IF10C module (the part of the computer interface that fits inside the TS140S) and have come to the conclusion, after many hours of research, that finding one will be next to impossible.

At this point the best option appears to be the construction of a "replacement" module for the IF10C. To facilitate construction of a replacement module the following information is necessary:

Schematic of the IF10C.
Source Code for the Eprom.
Pictures or direct scans of the Kenwood printed circuit board.

I plan to use cad and photoresist to duplicate the "daughter" board giving me the ability to help others once a successful replacement has been verified.

Any information that you can supply would be greatly appreciated.

Thank you and 73

for direct information

There is much to be said about amateur radio's place in learning, in the classroom or otherwise. I wonder if I can add anything to the many replies you've already received.

Ham radio is a very large hobby. Activities range from chatting with old and new friends, to experimenting with electronics, and trying your hand at satellite communications. The hobby is boundless because it is precisely about learning. It stops where your mind stops: apparently boundless for some, and somewhat limited for others. The station license only warrants that you know the bare minimum to operate safely and responsibly. It grants you access to a large playground to explore your potential and new ideas, or to simply confirm for yourself what you've heard and studied.

The hobby is not for everyone. While communicating is a large part of its history and capability, the hobby decidedly is not about conversation. There are other, better, channels for that. It is about electromagnetic propagation: it's capabilities, limitations, and uses.

Here is a short, I'm certain incomplete, list of topics relevant to high school physics.

* Basic electricity.
* Electromagnetic propagation.
* Electrical and mechanical resonance.
* Periodicity, wave motion, and harmonics.
* Electromagnetic spectrum, including visible light.
* Ionosphere composition and effects on propagation.
* Solar effects.
* Orbital physics.
* Polarization.
* Great circle paths.
* Atmospheric absorption of electromagnetic energy.
* Reflection and refraction.
* Path loss.
* Solid state theory and devices.
* Electrons, holes, and chemistry.
* Lightning.
* Antenna supports and structural integrity.
* Transmission lines and antennas.

My list is short because my knowledge is small. Radio is not a science in itself, but an application of all sciences.

Where do women and youth fit in? I don't know... how do they differ from old, crotchety menfolk?

As for getting started, the traditional route is to buy something known to work well. Once you're familiar and comfortable that it works, you can build your own. Learning the minimum that can get a signal out and back is perhaps more instructive than understanding the latest breakthroughs. The cost can be as low as you want, or you can sink as much money into it as you wish. The average station probably cost $2000 to get on the air.

Life itself is a learning experience. A good hobby, in my opinion, reflects life, and allows room for growth and channels for exploration. Amateur radio succeeds at this far better than many other options.

Michael.

That link has some very interesting reading especially how Morse Code is NOT the best weak signal mode. I am convinced now..the weak signal myth has been destroyed. It's about 2/3 of the way down the article.

Thanks for that link which has all the supporting references any reasonable person would need to make up their mind.

I'm guessing you don't teach English.

The only thing you can teach is negativity. It's in your attitude, it's in your demeanor, it's in your presentation, it's in your webpage, it's in all of your posts, and it's clearly demonstrated by your offspring's remarks.

Why are you in ham radio anyway? Even stupid people are smart enough to stop hitting their thumb with the hammer once they figure out it hurts.

That's not what it said. It refers to efficiency. Perhaps if efficiency is the measure, the argument could be made.

Here's a test that even the "something for nothing" agitators can make: Pick any band above 50 MHz. Run a VHF Sweepstakes or other contest with CW. Use all propagation modes; E, aurora, MS. Run another one with Pactor (one of the "error-correcting digital modes" mentioned in the referred text). It may keep up with Es, it might handle aurora, but MS will end the discussion.

Here's another test. This one even debunks the efficiency argument. Examine the logs of any DXpedition that takes RTTY equipment along. Compare QSO count between CW and RTTY for any like period and band. There will be nowhere near the RTTY Qs compared to the CW Qs. Especially do the comparison on a DXpedition conducted during the sunspot nadir.

Hello, I am a junior in highschool and I am also a female that has her amatuer radio license. I think it would be great to incorporate ham radio into a classroom, as it would be neat to have more hams under the age of 30 and it would be a good learning experience. I bet a local ham club would consider donating some money for the project, as they are always interested in getting more people into the hobby. I think you should try it because it would be worth your time!

Morse certainly is the best weak signal mode among all the modes hams normally have available to them, in terms of what the average ham has the ability to build himself. And we should be building:

97.1 Basis and purpose.
The rules and regulations in this Part are designed to provide an amateur radio service having a fundamental purpose as expressed in the following principles:
(a) Recognition and enhancement of the value of the amateur service to the public as a voluntary noncommercial communication service, particularly with respect to providing emergency communications.
(b) Continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art.
(c) Encouragement and improvement of the amateur service through rules which provide for advancing skills in both the communications and technical phases of the art.
(d) Expansion of the existing reservoir within the amateur radio service of trained operators, technicians, and electronics experts.
(e) Continuation and extension of the amateur's unique ability to enhance international goodwill.

Some broadcast pirate who wants to do so on the 11 meter band, I'd guess. Seems like a dumb band to do pirate broadcasting, but I guess the FCC would be more likely to leave you alone so long as you had a clean signal.

I have this strange tube that looks like something from Dr. Frankinstiens laborortory. It is heavy and made of steel it's about two pounds. The markings on it say V-45 Varian Associates it has a six pin oct. base. In the mid-section of one side there is what looks like a cable would connect to it, and on the other side is a one inch square black plastic snap cover and when it's removed you can see inside through a lens into the tube chamber. Above the base are two seperate quarter inch thick four inch circular steel plates the same demension as the base, the plates are seperated by two two inch adjustable screws also there is what looks like heat sink in the very top. I looked in "Tube Lore" but they show V-45 as a 45 and I know that is not what we have here. Any ideas anyone???? Your help is very much appreciated

Are hams prohibited from putting new modes on the amateur radio bands without prior approval?
I would guess not, but expansion and contribution are two goals that hams are allowed tinker with

I have always thought that experimentation and breakthroughs were the hallmarks of hams. Certainly history bears that out. There is nothing keeping hams from trying new modes. The problem arises in participation so that you have someone else to communicate with via the new mode.

When NASA sends a deep space probe out into the galaxies do they rely on Morse Code for communications? Of course not. There are much better weak signal modes then Morse. The die-hards CW 'grandfathers' just have their heads in the sand. It is an antiquated mode and a ridiculous testing requirement. It would be just as crazy to force packet digital mode expertise as a licensing requirement. The CW era is gone baby gone.....

Not really. It can be rather expensive, or it can be rather inexpensive, depending upon what you do and how you do it.

> I was wondering if some of you could tell me:

> 1) What do you do in amateur radio?

There are three main areas of amateur radio that folks tend to settle into, 1) the fraternal aspect, where you meet folks and talk with them about radio, electronics, or anything from soup to nuts, anywhere on the planet (and sometimes in space, too), 2) the operating aspect, where you develop skills necessary to operate and maintain radio equipment of all kinds, under all conditions, and for all kinds of purposes, and 3) the technical aspect, where you design, build, test, and operate all kinds of radio related equipment ranging from very simple to very complex.

Scattered across these three basic aspects, are areas of learning, areas of regulations, areas of hands-on experience, and areas of teaching. The learning is a ``life-long'' thing, that one can take and run with, as far as the stars. The regulations are the details of how we operate as amateur radio, and the constraints within which we are placed to operate. The hands-on experience covers the application of the things we learn, in a practical sense.

The regulations, Title 47 CFR 97-97.1, stipulate that the amateur radio service has ``the following principles:

a) Recognition and enhancement of the value of the amateur service to the public as a voluntary noncommercial communication service, particularly with respect to providing emergency communications.

b) Continuation and extension of the amateur's proven ability to contribute to the advancement of the radio art.

c) Encouragement and improvement of the amateur service through rules which provide for advancing skills in both the communication and the technical phases of the art.

d) Expansion of the existing reservoir withing the amateur radio service of trained operators, technicians, and electronics experts.

e) Continuation and extension of the amateur's unique ability to enhance international goodwill.''

Note that a) covers emergency communications, which is one aspect of the training, operating, and skill development that is very important to the service.

The fraternal aspect is demonstrated in e) and in c) and d).

The training aspect is demonstrated in a), c) and d).

The operating aspect is demonstrated in a), c), d) and e).

The technical aspect is demonstrated in b), c) and d).

> 2) How do you learn it and do you have to buy an expensive radio to get > started?

You learn usually by self teaching, plus mentoring by the existing amateur radio community through classes, or hands-on sessions, etc. The basics are well covered in many introductory books, and some even have sample exams that you can take for practice.

If you can find an amateur radio club, in your area, they may provide classes, as a public service.

There are some things available on the internet here and there.

You do not have to buy a radio at all, to get started.

You do not have to buy an expensive radio to get started. I have never paid more than 125 bucks for a radio, and have always had fine equipment to work with. It may not have all the latest bells and whistles, but it works for me.

You do not have to have the newest, latest, whizzbang radio to get started. Even the simplest radios made from scraps of this and that will work (http://www.mindspring.com/~johnmb/na4g1.htm). All it takes is a little knowledge and some persistence. That is where the training part of the service is important.

> 3) Are there many women or youth involved these days?

Yes, and Yes.

Our club president last year was a fine lady that all respected. We have a fairly big club at around 250-500 members, depending upon the year. Lots of women aboard, and lots of good activities in radio for them.

Probably 1/3 of our club are women, and 1/3 are kids. That may not hold for all clubs or across the entire amateur radio fraternity, but, a significant number of women and younger folks are always welcome, and do participate in all aspects of the service.

> 4) What potentials do you see for ham radio and the high school science > classroom?

That is an interesting question. It has no exact answer.

But, it will depend upon what you can do as a teacher, and what your classes can do as students.

With the advent of the internet, and computers, many students do not seem to have that much interest in radio, per se, as it used to be.
That is because the internet and computers have more immediate glitz and flash, in many respects, that students like. What you, as a teacher, need to do is to perhaps use amateur radio from the aspect of space telecommunications, and how that is done and relates to modern global life, for example. That could tie in space communications, digital communications, VHF/UHF, FM, SSB, satelites, and the like, and you could even start it with something like the historical development of radio, say, due to the influence of the Titanic disaster, and how it has changed and progressed into the telecommunications of today.
That would paint a nice picture, draw from history and current times, and provide an outlet for physics, via say, a demonstration of Herzian waves, then different modulation methods, then digital methods, etc. I would expect that could be woven into several lectures that would be of interest to students in physics classes.
There are exotic modes of operation such as moonbounce (bouncing radio signals off the moon), or talking with the space shuttle, or satelite communications, that should catch students fancy.

> 5) If you were going to advise someone NOT to get involved in amateur radio, > what would be your reasons?

I would not advise anyone to get involved in amateur radio if they were after a fast fix of high-tech. Remember, it is a service, and not a hobby or a consumer buzzthing like the internet.
There is high-tech and low-tech, and everything in between.
Remember, the FCC calls amateur radio an ``art'', thus, it tends to be rather technical and will require training and study.
But, that does not mean it is all high-tech and glitz.

It is a lifelong learning experience, and not something to be crammed in a short while. Some folks can't handle that, practically, and leave amateur radio with mixed emotions because their starting expectations were that is was something else, or they did not learn enough practically, to apply in reality.

But, many folks do like the service, and for those folks, it becomes that lifelong experience, with all of the fine aspects mentioned earlier.

This is true of most USENET groups-
The overwhelming majority of us welcome you.

masoomab wrote:
>I get the impression it is quite an expensive hobby.
It need not be expensive.
If a person insists on purchasing newly manufactured equipment, it can soon be prohibitively expensive. However, a good station with some versatility can still be gotten for between $200-$300 total. After the main expense of a good transceiver, you can add functions a piece at a time, making it less expensive to do.
For example:
Used Heathkit SB-102 or similar transceiver, about $180.
Mic, coax, wire, watt meter, books and misc. About $60.
Total: $240
Capable of Single Sideband voice, Morse Code and PSK31 digital modes on the most popular bands (you already own the computer) .

Later, you can add functionality-
A used PK-232MBX- $50 to $100.
Adds digital modes Radio Teletype, PACTOR, AMTOR, ASCII, others.

Then perhaps an outboard 2 meter transmitter and antenna to work the RS-series satellites. $40-$50 if you use a surplus transmitter strip or old FM rig.

You can piece-together a lot of functionality for a little money this way.

> 1) What do you do in amateur radio?
There are many specialties. Everything from idle chit-chat to providing emergency communications to substantive experimentation in the various electromagnetic radiation related fields to spacecraft construction and operation-The frequency allocations are vast and varied. Your work in the hobby is limited only by your competence, time and personal initiative.

> 2) How do you learn it ...?
Although not perfect, the various publications of the American Radio Relay League are good places to start and you will find helpful people there.

Check out their web site at http://www.arrl.org

> 3) Are there many women or youth involved these days?
Women in amateur radio have always been a minority, though a valued one. But then, women are also in the minority in physics. Their contributions-especially in emergency communications-are varied and valued.

There are fewer youth involved in the hobby then in the past, for several reasons. Foremost is the lack of a unified and positive strategy for presenting the various "high-tech," "romantic" or otherwise interesting facets of the hobby to young people.
Other issues, such as the internet, the current culture of "instant gratification," and the fact that radio is misperceived as "old news" by most people contribute.

However-- (and with notable exceptions as in any group) ham radio has always been a place where "the cream" floated to the top.
It appeals to a minority, but that minority is composed of the "one-percenters-" those people whose intelligence and/or personal initiative are superior to the common herd. Many, many activities in our society (Chess, physics, miniatures table gaming, advanced mathematics, etc.) are increasingly becoming the domain of the exceptional, leaving the common herd to watch MTV and play video games.
It is this "one percent" that carries civilization into the future. If you consider the set of people working in science, engineering and technology over the past 100 years as a whole, a remarkable percentage have held an amateur radio license or have at least dabbled in the radio hobbies as a stepping stone to their life of achievement. A large percentage of people in those fields today are included in that set.

>4) What potentials do you see for ham radio and the high school science classroom?
Those aspects dealing with communication with and construction of space vehicles comes first to mind. Digital modes between to classroom demonstrators, then between the classroom and a distant point might be done. A demonstration of action at a distance with EMF fields-- I'm sure there are many many others.

>5) If you were going to advise someone NOT to get involved in amateur radio, what would be your reasons?
a. It can be time consuming.

b. If you don't take the time to find that facet of the hobby that is your "hot button" (LF and WW-II electronics are mine), then the idle chit-chat and empty contacts don't maintain interest.
c. You have to put up with the occasional nut-case-but then you could say the same about tennis or shuffle board, right ;-)?

Hey! Johnny boy!!!

Tony is correct, you have offered little in the way of technical dissertation on the subject of ham radio (or scanners for that matter).

All you do is moan, groan, whine and complain till the cows come home!

Your so-called "credentials" as an Official Observer, Volunteer Examiner in the Amateur Radio Auxiliary, as well as any other "certificates" don't count for a hole lot when you can't even carry on a halfway decent "Professional" conversation.

One last point and I'll leave you to make a fool of yourself once more (trying to flame me or accuse me of something or other like you usually do),
You are incredibly easy to bait and as such, you are extremely predictable.
Just thought I'd let you know this out of "professional" courtesy.

I don't like OTK's hateful mouth one bit.

But I like even less this howling, gibbering bunch of people, slinging snot and spittle in their masturbatory gyrations at having hung Whiten to the enforcement tree.

While I have some serious reservations about some aspects of the FCC's enforcement action, in the end Rich was hung with actual rules violations and for that I commend Mr. Hollingsworth.
Reily has bent over backwards to give people every chance to "fly right" before he lowers the boom and has handed-out enforcment actions that leave the door open for "redemption" and I think that very enlightened of him.

My concern is that now the mindless lynch mob is going to need another "sinner" to take to the tree.
Some people are dragging-up old grudges, getting others to go along and "turning-in" their targets. The Herbie - Intercon thing is a good example. People on both sides are keeping the lines hot with cooked-up or ancient charges and counter-charges, rumors and gossip like a bunch of old maids jealous over someone's new hat.
Once the accusations are made,
the mob will begin its "ME TOO LET'S HANG'EM!"
dance all over again.

This promotion and sanction of snitches and sneeks, scuttling in the shadows and ratting each other out reminds me of occupied Europe during WW-II.
It's disgusting.

I have gone to a ham who lives near me who's done some clowning on HF. I've talked to him as a peer and reminded him that he can't hide-- he needs to fly right. I haven't heard him do it since and I didn't need to "rat-out" anybody. I'd bet money that would work with most people if someone just had the backbone and common decency to do it.
If he won't behave after intervention by a few of his peers, then and only then do the feds need to be called.

No-- it's so much more fun to be part of the lynch party and see some poor slob twist in the wind. Better watch your back, though-Mobs have a way of turning on their own.

Rich is getting his medicine-- we'll see if he does right from here on out.
Now let it go and go do something constructive.

Want to bet? Ever wonder why our national organization representing amateur radio is called the "American Radio RELAY League" (conceived 6 April 1914)? Relaying traffic point-to-point was essentially what attracted the government into legitimizing amateur radio (in 1912). Article 2 in the Connecticut Secretary of State's 29 January 1915 proclamation for the incorporation of the League said in part "...the relaying of messages from station to station..."

In that as one person transmits traffic, someone else is simultaneously copying it in real time, and able to break in for fills, yes there is simultaneous communication taking place. There is no delay (other than the radio waves traveling at 186,000 miles per second).

WASHINGTON, DC, Jul 8, 1999--Unless he decides to protest, a South Carolina ham will spend four months away from the HF bands to clear the books of any outstanding FCC enforcement issues. In a letter June 30, the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth, K4ZDH, said the Commission would modify the license of Richard L. Whiten, WB2OTK, for 120 days to prohibit operation below 30 MHz.

Whiten has 30 days to protest the modification, but if he agrees, Hollingsworth said, "all enforcement issues related to the operation of WB2OTK would be moot and the case terminated" at the end of the suspension. The FCC also said that if there were no violations of the modification order, it would grant Whiten's earlier request--set aside by the FCC earlier this year--for the vanity call sign W2OTK.

Whiten has run afoul of the FCC on several accounts. In late January, Hollingsworth and an FCC engineering team visited Whiten's station after what Hollingsworth called "longstanding complaints" about the operation of Whiten's station. Whiten reportedly cooperated in the station inspection. The FCC says it's received "numerous complaints" about Whiten "regarding profanity, obscenity, broadcasting extreme racial slurs, deliberate interference and failure to properly identify." Hollingsworth also said he'd heard complaints that Whiten had played recordings over the air "for the purpose of harassment or deliberate interference."

In April, the FCC sent Whiten tape recordings of transmissions from his station made on two occasions in November and asked him to explain their contents. Whiten responded in May, but Hollingsworth's June 30 letter does not go into details about Whiten's explanations "in the interests of your privacy."

Hollingsworth noted that he already had spoken with Whiten about the implications of the November transmissions. "However, we have considered your response and your apology for the operation of your station on those dates," Hollingsworth wrote in ordering the modification. Unless Whiten chooses to protest it, the modification would become effective immediately.

Pullease. Of all the taurus feces put out here and on other NGs, the "documentation with recordings" is, without a doubt, the singular most laughable claim extant.

One listening of virtually every one of them reveals the most inept editting imaginable, non-matching background noises, variations in AF processing, etc. They are as reliable as tarot cards.

One needs only to apply the "duck" test to determine the validity of the various claims. In any event the whole discussion belongs on the alt.fan.john.mackey.didnot.didtoo newsgroup.

You may find an audience with disaffected misanthropes like Oris or Lloyd, but you are barking up the wrong tree here. No sale.

Hold on a second while I sing a verse of "My Country Tis of Thee" because you are bring a tear to my eye. You remind my of my grandmother. "Dont talk about the problem, pretend like it doesnt exist, and it will go away". Guess what, problems never go away unless you bring them out and deal with them. Putting your head in the sand by attempting to put a ficticious positive spin on something and then wrapping your ego in all of your club awards wont change a thing. If you cant look at the negative side of something and learn from it, you are not in a postition to give anyone advice.

Every law was written because of something negative not something positive. Do you learn from LAWS? How about our Constitution? That was a result of something negative. How about the Bible? Thats a whole book about negative conditioning..... The problem here is not about being negative, but about YOU taking my comments as a personal attack.....which means the problem is with you, not me.

Sincerely

It is certainly true that the recordings on the Nevada slope-head's
"3950 Opinion Page" are incompetently edited hack jobs -- that's why
I wanted everyone to listen to them.

But if anyone can listen to the repeated exhortations to murder of K5ZU, accurate recordings of which are posted on my web site and which are time-stamped by the QSO participants themselves, and tell me that they are fabrications -- your capacity for lying or surrealistic self-delusion approaches the supernatural.

Honor bright,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

If you follow this News Group, you might think that we all whine and bitch about each other, but the majority of the hams out there are sane. We all enjoy one aspect or another of the hobby. Some keep in touch with life long friends. Some participate in contests. Some chase awards for contacting all states or counties or countries. In other words, there are many things that hams do.

>2) How do you learn it and do you have to buy an expensive radio to get

Find out where the nearest radio club is. Most of them have some type of program, or buy one of the many available study guides. Radio Shack sells those.

No you do not need an expensive radio. There are many deals available out there. I would check with some of the local hams and stay clear of internet offers. I operate nothing but morse code and I payed less than 200 dollars for my radio, and less than 50 on a home built antenna.

>3) Are there many women or youth involved these days?

Not many, but we really need more, so please try to get involved.

Electronics, Solar observation, atmospheric conditions, science history, Sattalite operations and principles to name a few.

Now I want to know what does porkbut do? Does he go for the quick fix and fight so he can stay on the air or does he know when to say enough is a enough and laydown and keep his fat mouth shut. HMMMMM now thats a hard one. porkbut keep his mouth shut? This is one that we will have to wait and see. Is the dumb ass smart enough to admit he was wrong and stay off the radio or does the slob cry his same old bull crap tune, that they started it, I was doing all this so called jamming because I was protecting the intercon net, they made me do it, it was all their fault, and he has the right to free speech over the airwaves. Oh my oh my what does the worthless pond scum do?
Please porkbut fight the FCC's decision. I want to laugh at you. I can laugh when they take your ticket and the airwaves never have to hear your scummy voice and your stupid opinions you fat pond scum slob.
Please porkbut appeal it please please please. From the first time I met you I wondered how long you would get away with your crap. Jimmy Obrian didn't even get a suspension from the band and he got drunk and jammed all the time and got caught in the act. What dose that say about you porkbut? The so called bad guy Herb down on the island is still on the air but your not. Please porkbut fight Mr Hollingsworth's desision. PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE!
See porkbut your worse then alot of these guys with your loud mouth hollier than thou attitude. You are in such deniel that you think your different. I geuss old Mr Hollingsworth took the wind right out of your sails. Your just like the rest of us that you call white trash. You think cause you live in that so called niuce home that makes you better than everyone else. Geuss what fat boy I have a new house that isn't 3 years old yet. Geuss what porkbut your just like everyone else. Why did they kick you out of FLA? Why don't you live in NY NY anymore? porkbut are you in the witness protection program? Is that why you left those places. Did you not pay you bookie or your pickup man. Com'on porkbut you can tell us we'll just laugh at your sorry waste of O2.

I guess for the same reasons folks like to drive "antique" automobiles, or spent hours every weekend looking for the lore of yesteryear. Like barbie dolls, meat grinders, kalidescopes and all that other "old stuff".

Then again, maybe its because CW works when nothing else does. Of have you forgotten that one of our (amateur operators) reasons to have these allocations is to provide communications, in the event of emergencies.

Bottom line is this.....IT TAKES TWO THINGS TO COMMUNICATE, AN OPERATOR

The Fact that Richard Whiten is off the air is one of the best thing that has happened to ham radio >>
Oris dirtbag, if you're not the biggest schmuck to ever hold a ham ticket, then I'm Sir Isaac Newton. To enlighten you halfwit,I had a hour QSO with "The Invisible Man" so to speak on 20 this afternoon. Do you think I talked to thin air? I have a feeling that Mr.R.H. understands that your calls and/or e-mails are as phony as you yourself. He knows that your trumped up charges against Rich mimick the ones you fabricated against me. Didn't you write that you knew for a fact I was jamming on 75? You horse's ass-I had no antenna up for 75 and RILEY KNOWS IT. The only reason why you're trying to get Rich in trouble is due to your personal grudge because of a financial matter. AND RILEY KNOWS ALL ABOUT IT. And he knows that many many complaints came from those same meatheads who jammed and still jam Intercon and tried to get persons fired and called Rabbis and danced with nuns and went to topless clubs with priests and wears special vestments in church and brags about his great affinity for Orthodoz Judaism and how he won WWII in the Pacific singlehandedly and how one is building a kamikaze Zero to crash into the next Intercon Net get together and ad nauseum. Oris, get with the program and stop your bellyaching. You have a problem with Rich? Get on the twisted pair and talk it out rather than to come on this board to prove just how illiterate you are. I just read all of the replies, and there's another option that hasn't really been mentioned (much). I do not personally have an HF rig, or any kind of setup, except for an HT (handheld transceiver, a "handie-talkie"). I am the Operations Manager of our local college radio club, and we have a very nice setup there. Any time I want to do HF, I can go over there and use the radios. If you could find a local radio club, that could be an alternative to the money issue. I'm sure most radio clubs would be more than willing to lend out radios (with your supervision, or theirs, once you have a license), or give demonstrations. As a high school student myself, I would enjoy seeing such a demonstration (even if I did not have an interest in ham radio).

Hope this helps and 73,

David, I've read many of your posts, and I have great respect for your

I just want to let eveyone here that I don't hate Jews. People like AF2Y are the seeds that cause these racist tirades to come out of me. I have met Jews that were decent people. Then I encountered people like AF2Y. Normal Jews don't call for the death of people, no matter what thier beliefs are. They also don't wish bad things to happen to people.

If I were to ever meet a nice, cute Jewish woman, and she respected me, I probably want to marry her. So, see I don't hate Jews, Just the hatred alone from AF2Y will cause people to go bezerk.

Look Lloyd I have been a proud resident of the state of ALABAMA since 1974. And, amongst other things, I have learned......ONCE A YANKEE ALWAYS A YANKEE.

And the other things are; 1. PICK A FOOTBALL TEAM (AUBURN OR ALABAMA)
2. DON'T TRY TO CHANGE NUTTIN.
3. AND NEVER, AND I MEAN NEVER REFERE TO THE WAR BETWEEN THE STATES (WAR FOR SOUTHERN INDEPENDENCE) AS THE "CIVIL WAR".

Away down south in the land of cotton, where that dang war ain't nere forgotten, go away, go away etc......Hey, you know how to beautify the SOUTH? Send a yankee home on a BUS. Hey Hey Hey.

Oh and one more thing Lloyd...ya gotta learn southern humor.

Hey, thanks for reading this. I have an HR 2600 w/ CHIPSWITCH installed.
I enjoy this radio in the mobile. I recently sold my car and brought the radio in the house, and didn't power it up for around a month. When I did it had "LOST IT's MIND" So, I re-programmed it and used it for a while and then did not power it up for a month or so, and the same thing happened again.

My question is : Is there any way to keep the radio from "LOSING IT's MIND"??

There is no battery to speak of, so for memory it uses a capacitor.

Anyone got a fix or any suggestions ??? Thanks in advance Dave/N2JBO

Not even if their names were on the check list and they were applying for s license, two concurrent improbabilities. All that would have happened was that the case would have been referred to the FCC General Counsel for a Yay or Nay decision on issuance.

Guess which one would have emerged.

Sounds to me like you have a 1st generation Magnetron, used on the first radar systems. These were developed by the British and put into use in 1943 or 44. Several magnetron tubes were sent to the USA and relegated to military R&D by companies like GE and RCA. A curious note, the US Navy actually had short range shipboard radar during the latter half of WW-II. All photographs of ships during that era had the radar antennas airbrushed out of the photo masters so the Japanese and Germans would not suspect we had a method of tracking their movements. RADAR was a very hush-hush topic even years after the war. Almost as closly a guarded a secret as the Manhattan Project was. One unit that comes to mind was an experimental airborne radar system that saw some war service while in the prototype stages. It was a system to detect fighter aircraft, installed in one or more bombers (B-29 Stratofortress) flying in a group. (The very first AWACS aircraft if you will - in 1944 or 45!) System had explosive charges place into it so that if the crew had to bail out the entire system, and much of the plane, would be destroyed! This was done so that the Japanese or germans could not recover the RADAR components from the airplane afterwards. Your tube may be a part of such a system, and if so would be of very historical value. I would contact a collectors club or Mil collectors or aircraft restoration group to see if it's a WW-II era Magnetron or similar.

Okay, Charles -- next time you're out there in deep space you and I will have a QSO using whatever NASA is using, as long as you pay for the equipment, for NASA has a budget that I surely don't.

Tell you what -- let's have a contest: You homebrew gear for your favorite NASA mode, and I'll homebrew a CW station, and let's see who:
1. Finishes first
2. Has completed the most QSOs after one month.

>The die-hards CW 'grandfathers' just have their heads in the sand.

I'm not even a father yet, but I do know the reality of everyday amateur communications and building.

>It is an antiquated mode

It's officially the second-most used HF mode, but most of the time I count as many CW QSOs as phone QSOs. Not as "antiquated" you've been lead to believe.

>and a ridiculous testing requirement.

Now you've done it:

You need to step back so as to get a global view of why the code requirement exists for HF privileges. RF at HF respects no boundaries, and as communicators first and foremost, hams the world over should have at least one mode in common. At present, there is only one mode all the world's HF-licensed amateurs hold in common: CW. Whether one chooses to use it or not does not matter; if the need arises he has it available to him (maybe at a slower speed than when he was first licensed!). The phone modes won't work as an international mode due to differences in languages, but there are sufficient code pro-signs so that a meaningful QSO can extend across language barriers. A digital mode could become the international standard, but until such time that every ham worldwide is so equipped and/or has the ability to build and self-maintain such equipment, CW will remain the common mode. The ITU has this global view while many individuals have only an insular nearsightedness - their own personal goals out-weigh those of the global amateur community.

(Daily worldwide comms don't normally take place above 50 MHz, so a common mode in that region can be chosen on a national level; for us it's of course FM phone.)

Do you think we can't tell who you are because your account is proxied twice ? Think about it dolt.

The proxy still knows who you are.

To the unidentified coward who's posting under the domain AF2Y@my-deja.com/
Your actions have been reported to abuse@deja.com and they are working on the "case." I have been assured that you will be caught and undoubtedly tossed off your ISP. I also have someone else on this board, very very skilled in computers, tracking you down. Furthermore since libel is involved, when you are caught, I shall litigate. I believe in free speech and complete non-censorship on such a marvelous medium as the Internet and deja.com offered to grant me self-nuking privileges. I refused because of my hatred of censorship. I told them I have turned everything over to them and hope they will be 100% successful. I have faith in their ability. Someone like you is a disgrace to the idea inherent in this board-disgraceful to the Internet itself. A coward like you belongs in a landfill instead of here. I have rspect for any PROPERLY IDENTIFIED person who comes on this board to take issue with me, and it bothers me not even if foul language is hurled my way. On the other hand I have absolutely no use for a slithering snake like you who forges posts, the same way I have utter disdain for anyone who nukes them. It's a damned shame a pusbag like you has his hands on something as precious as a computer keyboard.

Your assuming that they all LIGHT. What if you had one, two or three burned out bulbs? Or if there were ANY bulbs in place? You do not know that without making a "trip to the attic," and that would be the "Second one". How about open 1 switch (circuit), ground one and short the other. Take a multimeter in the attic with you and you'll know which switch is which.

UPDATE] EVANSVILLE, IN: The FCC notified General licensee David O. Castle, WA9KJI, on July 8 that it was withdrawing the modification of his Amateur Radio license prohibiting operation on HF for two years. On May 19, the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth said the FCC had information that Castle had engaged in "broadcasting and talking to no particular station for over an hour, during which time you prevented the use of the frequencies by others and maliciously interfered with other stations." Hollingsworth's letter had said that Castle had "falsely claimed" to be in contact with another station. As a result of the alleged violations, Castle's privileges below 30 MHz were suspended. In reviewing Castle's response, the FCC now has concluded that Castle was, according to the FCC's July 8 letter, "not at fault on the evening of May 1, 1999 . . . and further that your transmissions were interfered with by another Amateur Radio operator attempting to call a net into session (known as the 'Liberty Net')." Castle's reply to the modification notice included a tape recording of the relevant time period. Hollingsworth said the FCC also reviewed other information, including a sworn affidavit, furnished by other amateurs who were in contact with Castle at the time of the alleged violations. Castle has been the recipient of an FCC warning and an official Notice of Violation for allegedly engaging in malicious interference, and his operating hours have been restricted in the past. Hollingsworth reminded Castle of the "numerous allegations of malicious interference" and said the FCC will continue to review the situation "in regard to alleged past incidents of interference and any future ones that may occur."

[UPDATE] HUDSON, NH: The FCC wrote Extra licensee Victor A. Misek, W1WCR, July 9 to reiterate FCC concerns about the operation of the Liberty Net on 3950 kHz Saturday evenings. On May 7 the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth had written Misek to report that monitoring on May 1 indicated that Misek's station and members of the group for which he was acting as net control "began transmitting on top of existing Amateur communications that were already in progress." Hollingsworth used that occasion to ask Misek to justify the net's use of Amateur Radio frequencies. In his July 9 letter, Hollingsworth said the FCC "cannot tolerate deliberate jamming among licensees, including retaliatory jamming." He noted that the Liberty Net Web site "appears to advertise to shortwave listeners and to appropriate 3950 MHz for your use" and he reminded Misek that "all Amateur frequencies are shared equally among licensees of appropriate license classes," and that ï¿½97.113(b) specifically prohibits broadcasting. Hollingsworth invited Misek to contact him to discuss the matter.

The Liberty Net lost all credibility when they allowed OTK'S trailer trash buddy N3CND into the net with open arms. The only difference between KJI and CND is that David id's when he jams, Oris does not. Bon Appetit

Listen rfCommie take your own advice and just ignore me. You'll never regret it unless your one of the miscreant liberty net members who continually want to drag me back into the fray. I have said three times on this NG that if the NITS stop the jamming and harassment of me on this NG and the radio. I wouldn't post another thing about them. I think they mistook that to mean weakness and started in on me again. We'll see where it goes from here - believe it or not, I do have better things to do. If they would have just had some consideration for others and a little manners - well you know. Instead they wanted to try their German WWII tactics. LOL

FCC Amateur Radio Enforcement Log

A representative listing of recent reports on Amateur Radio enforcement-related actions from the files of the FCC Compliance and Information Bureau:
NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to ï¿½97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered by a volunteer examiner. This Enforcement Log is representative of recent Warning Notices, Notices of Violation, calls for retesting, and other FCC communications to licensees involving possible serious rules violations. It is not a comprehensive listing.

BELGRADE LAKES, ME: The FCC's Riley Hollingsworth wrote Extra licensee Glenn A. Baxter, K1MAN, June 25, after FCC engineers from the Commission's Boston office unsuccessfully attempted to inspect Baxter's station while it was on the air May 14 and again the following day. The FCC engineers reported that the station was transmitting, but facilities appeared to be locked and no one was around during both attempted visits. The FCC says that during its first attempt to visit K1MAN, on the morning of May 14, 1999, K1MAN was transmitting on 3.975 MHz. FCC personnel reportedly were unable to find anyone--either at Baxter's station at the tip of Long Point or at his nearby residence--and, according to Hollingsworth's letter, "there were no vehicles on the premises." Among other things, the FCC wants to know the name, address, and telephone number of the control operator on those two occasions, where the control operator was and at what times, and on what frequencies, K1MAN transmitted on May 14 and 15, 1999. The FCC also asked if K1MAN has been controlled remotely since the inception of the license term on October 17, 1995. The FCC letter gave Baxter 30 days to provide the requested information. [For additional information, see "FCC Queries K1MAN on Control Op's Whereabouts" elsewhere on the AWE news page.] [UPDATE] CALIMESA, CA: The FCC notified Technician licensee Jaime K. Sanchez II, W6RSD, that it was canceling his Technician class Amateur Radio license after he reportedly failed to appear for retesting. The FCC had requested April 27 that Sanchez retake his Technician examination under the supervision of FCC personnel in the Cerritos, California, Field Office before June 30. The FCC has the authority to readminister any examination element previously administered by Volunteer Examiners.

DUNNELLON, FL: The FCC notified General licensee Israel Acevedo, KG4BFQ, on July 6 that it was canceling his Amateur Radio license after the licensee reportedly failed to appear for retesting as requested April 23. The FCC has the authority to readminister any examination element previously administered by Volunteer Examiners.
[UPDATE] EVANSVILLE, IN: The FCC notified General licensee David O. Castle, WA9KJI, on July 8 that it was withdrawing the modification of his Amateur Radio license prohibiting operation on HF for two years. On May 19, the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth said the FCC had information that Castle had engaged in "broadcasting and talking to no particular station for over an hour, during which time you prevented the use of the frequencies by others and maliciously interfered with other stations." Hollingsworth's letter had said that Castle had "falsely claimed" to be in contact with another station. As a result of the alleged violations, Castle's privileges below 30 MHz were suspended. In reviewing Castle's response, the FCC now has concluded that Castle was, according to the FCC's July 8 letter, "not at fault on the evening of May 1, 1999 . . . and further that your transmissions were interfered with by another Amateur Radio operator attempting to call a net into session (known as the 'Liberty Net')." Castle's reply to the modification notice included a tape recording of the relevant time period. Hollingsworth said the FCC also reviewed other information, including a sworn affidavit, furnished by other amateurs who were in contact with Castle at the time of the alleged violations. Castle has been the recipient of an FCC warning and an official Notice of Violation for allegedly engaging in malicious interference, and his operating hours have been restricted in the past. Hollingsworth reminded Castle of the "numerous allegations of malicious interference" and said the FCC will continue to review the situation "in regard to alleged past incidents of interference and any future ones that may occur."
FLUSHING, NY: The FCC notified Technician licensee John A. Sormeley, KC2DMP, on July 2 that information before the Commission indicates that he or someone using his call sign transmitted on 10 meters--a band not available to Technician-class licensees. The FCC cautioned the licensee that such operation could lead to license revocation and a fine and could jeopardize attempts to upgrade.
HOUSTON, TX: The FCC issued an official Notice of Violation June 2 to General licensee Paul Edward Holcombe, K4TOF, for alleged willful and malicious interference and for allegedly failing to identify while operating on a 2-meter repeater on May 24 and 25, 1999. The NOV resulted from an investigation earlier this year undertaken by FCC Field Office personnel in Houston that involved the use of FCC direction-finding equipment. The FCC requested that Holcombe respond to the Notice in writing within 10 days stating specific actions taken to correct each violation and to preclude recurrence. The FCC says it had received complaints for more than five years of intentional interference, jamming, and harassment by unidentified operators directed at users of the Memorial Emergency Repeater Association repeater on 145.470 MHz.
HOUSTON, TX: The FCC issued an official Notice of Violation June 1 to Technician licensee Robert L. Myers, N5WLY, for alleged willful and malicious interference and for allegedly failing to identify while operating on a 2-meter repeater on several occasions in February and March. The NOV resulted from an investigation earlier this year undertaken by FCC Field Office personnel in Houston that involved the use of FCC direction-finding equipment. The FCC requested that Myers respond to the Notice in writing within 10 days stating specific actions taken to correct each violation and to preclude recurrence. The FCC says it had received complaints for more than five years of intentional interference, jamming, and harassment by unidentified operators directed at users of the Memorial Emergency Repeater Association repeater on 145.470 MHz.

[UPDATE] HUDSON, NH: The FCC wrote Extra licensee Victor A. Misek, W1WCR, July 9 to reiterate FCC concerns about the operation of the Liberty Net on 3950 kHz Saturday evenings. On May 7 the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth had written Misek to report that monitoring on May 1 indicated that Misek's station and members of the group for which he was acting as net control "began transmitting on top of existing Amateur communications that were already in progress." Hollingsworth used that occasion to ask Misek to justify the net's use of Amateur Radio frequencies. In his July 9 letter, Hollingsworth said the FCC "cannot tolerate deliberate jamming among licensees, including retaliatory jamming." He noted that the Liberty Net Web site "appears to advertise to shortwave listeners and to appropriate 3950 MHz for your use" and he reminded Misek that "all Amateur frequencies are shared equally among licensees of appropriate license classes," and that ï¿½97.113(b) specifically prohibits broadcasting. Hollingsworth invited Misek to contact him to discuss the matter.
HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA: The FCC requested July 2 that Extra licensee Alan C. Emerald, K6GA, provide justification in writing for at least 16 club station call signs for which he is the responsible party. The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Emerald does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.
LA MIRADA, CA: The FCC requested July 1 that Extra licensee Kent A. Tucker, AA6KT, provide justification in writing for at least eight club station call signs for which he is the responsible party. The FCC noted that "at least 27 other club call signs are licensed to family members at your address." The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Tucker does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.
LA MIRADA, CA: The FCC requested July 1 that Tech Plus licensee Nancy N. Tucker, W5NAN, provide justification in writing for at least two club station call signs for which she is the responsible party. The FCC noted that "at least 27 other club call signs are licensed to family members at your address." The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Tucker does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.
LA MIRADA, CA: The FCC requested June 29 that Extra licensee Kathryn K. Tucker, AA6TK, provide justification in writing for at least nine club station call signs for which she is the responsible party. The FCC noted that "at least 27 other club call signs are licensed to family members at your address." The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Tucker does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.
LA MIRADA, CA: The FCC requested June 30 that Extra licensee Eric G. Tucker, AA6ET, provide justification in writing for at least eight club station call signs for which he is the responsible party. The FCC noted that "at least 27 other club call signs are licensed to family members at your address." The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Tucker does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.

LA MIRADA, CA: The FCC requested June 30 that Extra licensee Roy T. Tucker, N6TK, provide justification in writing for at least nine club station call signs for which he is the responsible party. The FCC noted that "at least 27 other club call signs are licensed to family members at your address." The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Tucker does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.
LAKE WORTH, FL: The FCC requested June 23 that Extra licensee Joseph A. Keller, W8WW, provide justification in writing for at least five club station call signs for which he is the responsible party. The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Tucker does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days.

MANCHESTER, MI: The FCC has requested that Extra licensee Paul P. Kluwe, W8ZO, provide justification in writing for at least four club station call signs for which he is the responsible party. Kluwe recently requested cancellation of six other club station call signs. The FCC said it will cancel all of the listed call signs if Kluwe does not respond satisfactorily within 30 days. The letter, June 28, also gives Kluwe the option of turning in the four remaining club station call signs.
STAFFORD, TX: The FCC issued an official Notice of Violation June 29 to Technician licensee David A. Hold, KC5JCV, for alleged malicious interference while operating on a 2-meter repeater on June 24. The NOV resulted from an investigation undertaken by FCC Field Office personnel in Houston that involved the use of FCC direction-finding equipment. During the course of a station inspection, Hold turned in his Amateur Radio license for cancellation. The FCC says it had received complaints for more than five years of intentional interference, jamming, and harassment by unidentified operators directed at users of the Memorial Emergency Repeater Association repeater on 145.470 MHz.

Sir:

Almost all these things talked about on this forum happened on amateur radio. That being the case, it is all about amateur radio. Like it or not, there are other things to talk about than theory or commercial radio equipment. Amateurs do not build their rigs anymore, they have to send them to a service location to get them repaired. Why waste hours talking about the setting of knobs and switches on a rig that you did not design and do not know how to fix in the first place. In the old days, you built everything. Now few amateurs build, but not many. You can pick out the posts that are about knob settings and mike settings and enjoy them , so why complain about other people talking about sick amateur screwball personalitys.....Rileygotcha

Wonder how you will like it when "Uncle Sam" decides it is not politically correct to discuss Jewish issues on ham radio? Will you then support "Big Government" ?? This CENSORSHIP is a two edged sword. Be careful it don't cut you too.

For someone who claims to know all your sure coming up short in the English language category.
I believe that would be, consensus and it would&#65533; be for your two year old mind, not "you 2 year old mind"
Additionally I think you meant to say understand not "undersand".
Interesting how your posts have a certain signature not unlike that of Donkboy99. If you spent half the time trying to improve your command of the English language as you do posting this grade school garbage on the news group you would be a lot further ahead in life.

Dave,
Welcome back but BE WARY. These 3.950 parasites would like nothing better than to sucker you into their web of hatred,subversion and deceit and then aggravate you to the point whereby they could call Riley H. to complain. Mind your P's and Q's on that frequency. Do nothing that can be misconstrued as broadcasting and jamming. Legitimate dissent to their racist views is definitely legal but go about it correctly and in keeping with Part 97 of the Hymieweiser Book of Better Bagel Making. Good luck and we, who love real liberty, not the inane,insane and putrid dogma of the 3.950 bigots, SALUTE YOU.

A very fine gentleman in Vero Beach sent me the link for the QRZ ham data base onto which I logged and found that KV4FZ was not there. Can someone tell me why not? How can that bum be on the air without a valid call? Does he get a special dispensation for being the only ham who has had three of four sons in jail simultaneously? I do believe that made the Guiness Book of Records.
I did log on to Stromitler's callsignWB4AIO and the butthole looks like an emaciated SS clown. I noticed how proud he was of his journalistic and media achievments but lacking was the notation that he could be found in Ray Franklin's Hate Directory which is used by law enforcement agencies throughout the nation to keep track of Internet hatemongers. Why didn't you disclose it, you racist trash?
At any rate he lives in Rochester, Minnesota, the home of the famous Mayo Clinic medical complex and my fervent wish is that he enters atop a sheet and exits underneath it and that he finds it charming in hell playing cards with Himmler,Goebbels,Hitler,Goering and KE2LO.

Since WA9KJI has been given a free pass to become a radio criminal once again, the IMMEDIATE effect was an increase in jamming, vulgarity, music playing and malicious interference. Right now, I'm tuned into 14313 and am hearing more garbage today then I have in months! Music playing, morse code interference, cat calls, computer noise makers, etc.

I'm afraid ole' Riley has shot himself in the foot. What WAS a great enforcement effort has now been thrown out the window and the radio punks have seen the KJI case as a license to act as the radio criminal once again. And why not? KJI is proving you can get away with it!!

Notice how WB2OTK is going to fight it? Most of us would have taken our four months "in the corner"....played on six and two....and then gotten exonerated for all wrong doing....and gotten our vanity callsign back. But not Rich! He sees that KJI got off the hook, and so can he! So he's gonna fight! And who can blame him? Since Riley, the FCC and the Clinton administration are TOTALLY ineffective.

What about people who owe taxes then cry mayday as they sink o n their yacht ? USCG recently refused to charge for rescues !

Why aren't they required to be audited before they get off the cutter ?

Why should inconsequential hams be harassed ?

What about ppilots and gun owners ?

The way your rights are trampled is related to the impotency of ARRL, vs NRA.

Check inside the parentheses for your credibility quotient. ()

Basically, you're just a troll, aren't you? Just like dspman. You haven't made one positive post yet. All you've done is throw out nonsense to get certain people stirred up. No, I just can't stand your spelling, ignorant boor.

You may express your opinion. You may not SPAM the group with your personal drivel. If you don't cut back, you will be dealt with on here as well.

This is why no one likes you. When someone, such as myself, tries to defend your civil rights yet point out the fact that you sound like a guffoon, you turn on them like the rabid desert rat you are. This is why in four months you will return, you will do it again, and this time FCC will not care about your boorish manners, just your rules violations.

Yes, yet another ham so unphased, so tough and so brave that he goes

Everyone already read your tirades dingbat99. Better luck when you figure out how to spell "crescent". Crestent rolls, heh heh.

Oh well, the titles speak for themselves:

This time I think we'll skip the formalities and go straight not sure you can read much; you certainly can't WRITE much.

But the kind of crap you're doing is likely to get you

So why not be a good boy.... go away and make

Lloyd- espousing racial hatred and hooking it in with Southern Pride is offensive to me and most other true Southern patriots. I don't think you really meant to do that, but it's important to take a stand any time someone appears to link them.

The KKK, the "Aryan" people and others like them that preach racial "purity" have done vast and irreparable harm to the Southern people. They dirty and defame the St. Andrews Cross flag when they carry it in their marches.
Bigotry and hate are not "southern" problems.
They are Mankind problems, without border or color.
But thanks to misguided or foolish or evil people, they are unjustly identified with the South.

My great grandfather, Major William Stinson of the 18th Mississippi, fell wounded at the battle of Sharpsburg- his legs shot out from under him by yankee cannon. He owned no slaves. Most of the men he lead owned no slaves. He and those men did not give of their lives and blood for some hateful, vague idea of "racial purity."
They fought and died because an invading army was looting their homes, burning their cities and killing their kin.

Bigots and hate mongers spit upon the memory of these brave men when they steal the symbols and ideals of the Southern people and pervert them to their political ends.
The blood of my Fathers is on that flag.
I don't want it mixed with the dirt of the ignorant.

Of course, the defamation has gone too far to ever be put right with the Great Herd.
The propaganda force-fed to generations of children as "history" is set too deep.
The walking bits of dung in Washington and Hollywood steal moral ground by keeping the lies alive.
And real racist hate mongersblack, white, jewish, arab, etc.- can hide and dodge from responsibility by pointing their fingers southward at the false "boogieman" they've created.

It is up to the very few-the "one percenters" who have done the work to find the truth-to carry the fire of that truth into the future.
The Great Herd will scoff- but the truth is in the few, not them.
The world is a greater place because the few have carried the flame, and that is something the Great Herd, thundering toward oblivion, can never claim.

Uh, yes, "proof." Right. That's what it is. Proof -- of something.

Normally, aol.comnospam addresses work just fine. Maybe Doctor Hate should write to postmaster@aol.comnospam and see if they can't straighten that "coward" right out there.

While he's at it, Doc Hate should write to kk7ho@aol.communicate and see if he's also "locked out" of that mailbox.

Sheesh!

Astoundedly,

The PD here in Phoenix started charging for false burglar alarms many years ago. You would be amazed at the improvement that occurred. This was a safety improvement measure as it reduced the number of emergency runs and didn't tie up cops for other valid emergencies. The FD started charging people who attempt to cross flash flooded washes for the cost of the rescue. The FD also charges for their emergency response (911) ambulance service.

Now that's a scary thought. Guns currently have a mandatory digital ID (serial number) built in. Even in states with strong gun laws (NY for example), illegal unregistered guns can be obtained and used anonymously. Likewise those hams bent on Jamming could obtain unregistered ham transmitters and anonymously QRM away. Plus those technical hams could build/modify gear to avoid the ID. Meanwhile the rest of us would have another form to send in to Big Brother, and our equipment costs would go up to pay for the "IDer" chip. Bad idea whose time hopefully will never come...

What exactly is there to talk about? So apparently the FCC found him in violation of broadcasting or vulgar language or whatever it was, so they issued a 4 month suspension of HF privileges, OK fine, there it is for all to see. What exactly is your fascination with this station? I can understand if you don't particularly like this station mentioning the suspension or referencing why it was issued but why go on and on? What exactly is your point? and what is it about him that makes you spend so much of your time talking about him? It's amazing that a grown man has so much extra time on his hands that he can spend time to develop a web page focused on his dislike of another station.

OTK is lucky and he knows it, Kicked off hf for 120 days is nothing. If he is smart he will not fight it.
I am also wondering why this Phil was not punished also for making racist remarks, but in short OTK has gotten off very easy, I guess all the stumpers and barfies are happy but keep in mind 120 days is nothing and OTK will be back with vanity call and 10 year renewal.

I couldn't hardly believe this when I saw it in QST, or perhaps on the ARRL web pages. This is the same daughter Burt has quoted here on the news group with her own disparaging remarks about ham radio. Look who was first in line when there was money to be handed out. Apparently shame is not an emotion either of them have.

Yes, it does. These agencies have been created for just this purpose:Public health and safety. That means response without regard to who is calling. We pay a lot in taxes to ensure this continues. It is outrageous anyone suggest billing for emergency services, though I suppose it might be OK, after the fact where someone has, against all common sense and verbal and posted warnings and prohibitions, done something very stupid like climb an HT support. . .

I'd be suprised if Mexico isn't more invasive than FCC. Also, if enough people do that, the FCC is likely to get interested, as they have with people holding a horde of US calls.

A US citizen who holds a foreign license (even if as a result of dual citizenship) or a foreign citizen who holds both a foreign and a US license may not operate in the US under "reciprpcal" or similar arrangements on that foreign license.

We closed that loophole years ago.

Of course you can always move to Mexico (or TimBukToo) and operate there if you don't like the US.

Boy Bob, my nose is itching again. Actually I'm not all that anonymous. Any court order will force my ISP to give me up. So I can't freely slander or harass people if that was your worry. On the other hand if someone decides to invade my privacy by identifying me publicly, I could take legal action against them if I suffered any harm from that outing. Microsoft and Intel both recently tried to slip identifiers in their software/hardware, but when the public found out, they backtracked quickly. Most all netizens want anonymity, not registration...

Boy, you can say that again. My best students have always been immigrants, especially those from Asian countries. They're at an automatic disadvantage in that English is their second language, but that doesn't stop them from putting those born and raised here to shame (some aren't smart enough to even feel shame, though -- they're really quite "empty" upstairs).

The only way the U.S. will ever lead the world intellectually again is to open our doors to bright and motivated immigrants. Thanks for pointing that out, Kevin. I can provide hundreds of examples of just how pro-found the races differ.

Why don't you people give it up, with all this squabeling, and hate crap going back and forth. Why don't you go out and donate your time and efforts to better mankind. You are all acting like a bunch of children. Yeah, there is the admendments that allow for freedom of speech, but you all are carrying this crap on to the point of creating a civil disturbance and the admendments don't cover that. Each one of you should go about your own business (what ever it is), and don't worry what the other is saying to themselves.

Why don't you all stop acting like a bunch of JERKS! and get along with each other?

My 2 cents.

Howard W3CQH

<<<Howard,understand that my remarks were in response to N0VFP's unacceptable anti-Semitic barbs thrown my way despite the fact to what he was replying i.e.my post, had nothing to do with religion to begin with.
Invariably everything coming out of his mill has an anti-Semitic tone to it. Why don't you understand that he IS what he WRITES or in his case, scribbles like a 4 year old?
Don't you understand that Davies is a product of hatemongers such as Stromitler and his buddies on 3.950? N0VFP is incapable of thinking for himself but rather enjoys being a parrot for a net which is written up in Raymond Franklin's HATE DIRECTORY-an outline of hate on the Internet?
Can't you see the man is unbalanced? Do you think it's normal that a fellow 25 years old has NO SOCIAL LIFE! How could he when he loves only subversives and bigots? Lloyd is devoid of compassion,understanding,intelligence and loyalty for this great U.S.A. Can you believe that 150+ years after the Civil War, the nut is screaming THE SOUTH WILL RISE AGAIN when we all know it rose and is very very productive. But in his posts, his calling on the south to rise is abnormal. It most certainly is because he is equating the rise of the south with the rise of Nazism to destroy American Jews as well as once again keeping the black man as slaves. It must be branded RACIST instead of POLITICAL because inherent in his statement is noted that he talks about the same racist garbage to which to which he voluntarily submits i.e. that Jews control America etc. This is a time worn phrase used by bigoted despots and hatemongers for eons of time. He mimicks what controls him continuously i.e hate in print and hate in the communications media.
Dimwit Davies LIVES for things like that and based on the virulence in his postings, you see that I'm making him pay for it and will continue!

Obviously the man's mind has been poisoned from playing with his TinyTenna too long. By osmosis he's absorbed the type of hate necessary to foster not only vicious stuff on this board but in everyday life too.
Davies represents the type of person who,by being thoroughly brainwashed, is capable of bombing a black church or a synagogue or of shooting a minority person as recenty seen in Chicago.Hopefully however, he'll put a bullet in his head BEFORE acting instead of afterward.
In summation, if these 3.950 clowns and hate broadcasters can stir him up, then so can AF2Y. However when I go on a tear, I grind up an opponent into hamburger meat and he can't stand it.You ain't seen nothing yet,

It certainly was a pleasure to hear the ground swell of support for W1WCR last night. People stood up and made brilliant legal, moral and ethical arguements FOR Victor Mizak, and AGAINST WA9KJI and his band of radio outlaws and AGAINST Riley Hollingsworth for what he's done. I particularly liked the responses from NON Liberty Net particpants who have been vicitmized by WA9KJI's jamming, EVEN TO THE POINT OF HIRING THEIR OWN PRIVATE ATTORNEY'S to fight the bastard! Bravo to these brave souls!

Now a message to KK7HO:

I KNOW you will respond to this. So I'm going to get my piece in first. But if I EVER catch you remotely near a hamfest over here in my neck-of-the-woods, I will PERSONALLY take you into the nearest bathroom, and wash your filthy, lying, libelous & slanderous mouth out with soap, and then rinse it clean with a good ole' fashioned collegian-style SWIRL-EE!! Terrific, I think that's a perfect angle to show the 'round table' chat mode exists on amateur radio the same as it does in a chat room. My son talks to all his local friends using AOL's instant messenger, I've tried to propose the same senario but with limited success! Now that I've read your post perhaps I'll try again. :)

Jay, I can't help with specifics but here is a thought. If the diode matrix is already in the radio (I couldn't tell from the post) you might want to consider installing a a set of dip switches on a separate board and routing the diodes through the switches, using a dummy load and freq. counter you could set the switches to a known frequency then change each one separately and monitor the amount of freq. change. If you know the value of each diode you should be able to figure out where you want to be.

He IS DEAD but nobody's told him yet. Has been for several years! His "magazine" is rapidly following him.

Perhaps his life-extension theories, contact with space aliens, crystals, pyramids, perpetual motion and cold-fusion are deceiving him into thinking that he's really still alive!

Ahhh... for the "good old days" of the 1960s and 70s when his magazine was an amateur publication and worth $37 for a lifetime subscription.

Yes, and the intellectual success of Asians proves that the "cultural bias" argument used to excuse low Mestizo and Black achievement, and IQ scores, is total hogwash.

If you think that it will annoy me to state the well-known fact that Asians, particularly North Asians, possess higher average IQs than most other races, then you are mistaken.

North Asian average IQs are slightly higher than (broadly defined) White average IQs, though the distribution curve is narrower -- meaning that the European race produces more absolute dolts than the North Asians -- and also more superlative geniuses.

North Asians, the hybrid Ashkenazic Jews, and European-descended people are at the top of the IQ pyramid, with Congoids and Australoids at the bottom. The other races occupy the considerable space in between.

> The only way the U.S. will ever lead the world intellectually again is > to open our doors to bright and motivated immigrants.

The doors are almost closed to immigrants from Europe now, where people not only are of a generally high intellectual quality, but are of the same race and essentially the same culture as Americans, so that the nation is strengthened by them instead of fractured. So those doors ought to be wide open again, as they were prior to the treasonous alteration of our immigration laws in 1965.

America became a leading nation during a period in which her population was over 90 per cent. European and her immigration laws favored preserving that genetic heritage.

We have a Mark 4c repeater in Amateur service at 145.39. We'd like to turn on transmit CTCSS (PL) so that our users with receive CTCSS capabilty in their radios can do so. That way the they only hear the our repeater and not the other "garbage" such as intermod and other repeaters on the same frequency 100 miles away.

No where in the manual I have can I find a mention of transmit CTCSS capability or a software command to tell the processor to do that. We have the TS-32 option installed and using it for CTCSS protection on the receiver.

What do I need to do to make transmit CTCSS a reality ?

I just want to let eveyone here that I don't hate Jews. People like AF2Y are the seeds that cause these racist tirades to come out of me. I have met Jews that were decent people. Then I encountered people like AF2Y. Normal Jews don't call for the death of people, no matter what thier beliefs are. They also don't wish bad things to happen to people.

If I were to ever meet a nice, cute Jewish woman, and she respected me, I probably want to marry her. So, see I don't hate Jews, Just the hatred alone from AF2Y will cause people to go bezerk.

An electrician friend who is working on getting his first ticket has an opportunity to acquire the IC-737 from the estate of a SK. I have zero knowledge of this rig. He asked for my advice. What are the pro and cons? What is a fair price range?
Thank you.

3C0, ANNOBON. A press release by Tony, EA5BY, reports the finalizing plans for a DXpedition to the island of Annobon scheduled for September 14 through 24th, 1999. Their goals are the following: first of all to provide as many stations with a new country, and second is to leave open doors for other possible DXpeditions. Annobon island is very much needed as evidenced as being identified in the top 10 (7th place) on the most wanted list. The callsign to be used will be 3C0R. With four stations operational, this should allow easy access for those in need. One station has been identified specifically for RTTY. The other three will pay attention to SSB as well as CW. The list of operators are: Ramon/3C1GS, Roberto/3C1RV, Elmo/EA5BYP and Vic/EA5YN. The complete press release will be sent to all OPDX InterNet Subscribers as an additional bulletin.

AMATEUR RADIO NEXT ???? "PLEASE!" On nationally televised news this week, reports showed that the Bhutanese government has allowed broadcast television available in their country for the first time. However, the TV station is government run. Could "Amateur Radio" be next?

The USCG (along with FDs and PDs) don't levy charges against those they assist out of fear that folks will delay (or not call at all) when vital assistance is needed. The prevention of loss of life outweighs the collection of fees.

>Why should inconsequential hams be harassed ?

"Harassed"? Don't renew your license if you feel "harassed."

If p-pilots "do business" with the government (they do) then that congressional act will also apply to them.

When you registered your weapon you had to provide your SSN.

The NRA has many congressmen "in their pocket," and that organization's members have much more to lose than amateurs. We don't have to register our radios (although I wouldn't mind seeing that done, along with a mandatory digital ID'er built into the transmitter).

Lloyd has no idea of what he is talking about. He know's NOTHING of the South in general, and Less than that about Alabama in particular.
Don't worry about him, he would be the first to go anyway.

Maurice,

You have to excuse Oris, he is a product of his upbringing. He is also I've hammered on you in a couple of other posts, but I'm not going to do that here. I read what I think is genuine remorse over some things you said. May I offer a couple of suggestions?

Whenever I have been annoyed to the point of wanting to verbally "rip someone to pieces" I always adopt what I call the "24 hour rule." Go ahead and type out your response, but then sit on it for 24 hours and look at it again. See if it's really something you want to put in a permanent public venue that will serve to represent who you are, even if it's inaccurate.

In watching the back and forth on this board for some time I have observed certain people have certain hot buttons. AF2Y is a hot button for you. He posts a comment; you are compelled to respond. If you think he isn't aware of that, you are mistaken. Right now, he can set you off anytime he wants to. Who do you want to control your actions; him or you? It's a matter of discipline.

If one wants to avoid having to make a "public atonement" for things one said that one recognizes were inappropriate, one must learn to identify those hot buttons, and resist the urge to play the game. In your case, you might want to consider just ignoring AF2Y's posts altogether. You already blocked his mail. That was a good step, but you still read his posts. Don't.

You can't unring a bell, and your post definitely failed the "duck" test (if it walks like a duck, quacks like a duck...), so you have more work to do than your one post to restore your image. But if you are sincere in your belief that you really aren't like that, then you will have to work extra hard at disciplining what you put in your posts and to whom you respond (including me, if that's how you feel) and regaining the respect of the people here that are not bigots or racists.

This is a genuine offer of assistance. There is no hidden agenda or trick in it.

It is strange that in several cases world class jamers have orchistrated complaints aginst others.The big time jamers walk free and the one complained about gets thumped.

The liberty net is being hassled and attempted to be shut down.The jamers get a slap on the wrist.

Well folks taking 300 units of insulin a day

I have met some quality folks in the long haired grab asstic mode in the past but very few.

Why would one want to identify with that sub element of our culture.

If I knew I'd write a book about it and retire.

So Rich is on the shelf for a few months.Im sure he has a life outside radio and will probably enjoy the hobby more after a short respit.

Just thought I'd add that it is not bigotry to call attention to the fact that the races differ profoundly in manifold ways.

And it is not hatred to want your own race to survive, or to point out that it cannot survive without a territory to call its own.

The leaders of the Old South recognized both of these things -- as did even Abraham Lincoln, who was himself a racial separatist.

As for myself, I hold no hatred for other human races, any more than I do for other kinds of sentient life upon this Earth, none of which I will purposely kill or harm without absolute necessity. In fact, I don't allow my children to step on insects, or even "liberals."

With all good wishes,

Well, I have a brother who recently joined the hobby (February) and his friend (who I am friends with also) had gotten his license this past December. After hearing them talk about it so much and listening to them talk so much, I decided to go get my license in April. I think a lot of teens would be interested in contesting and QSL cards and just the idea of being able to talk more than 2 miles away for free. I think if more teens were exposed to amateur radio (a suprising number of people I've talked to have never even heard of it) in a positive way and showed how interesting it can be, there would be a higher number of younger people trying out for their licenses. I think clubs and classes structured around the hobby are a very good idea. I have interested some of my peers in the hobby by telling them it is like the chatting aspect of the internet, except with voice instead of type and that made them want to know more. Anyway, I could talk on and on about the subject, but I'll try to keep this (kinda) short

Why don't you people give it up, with all this squabeling, and hate crap going back and forth. Why don't you go out and donate your time and efforts to better mankind. You are all acting like a bunch of children. Yeah, there is the admendments that allow for freedom of speech, but you all are carrying this crap on to the point of creating a civil disturbance and the admendments don't cover that. Each one of you should go about your own business (what ever it is), and don't worry what the other is saying to themselves.

Why don't you all stop acting like a bunch of JERKS! and get along with each other?

Since my retirement as an Illinois licensed paramedic, due to a debilitating spinal cird injury, I find myself once more working on the Department's radio equipment.

We recently inhereted (donated) a pair of Uniden Force 8 channel diode-matrix 50W VHF 2-way radios. We need to get these set up on 2 additional frequencies, but as there is no documentation with these radios on the programming formulas (and Uniden is NO help, as they state we MUST take them to an authorized service center to have the diode matix boards added!!!!), I need to find out the following:

The diode matrix formula to set up both receive and transmit. I've figured out there are 18 diodes, and no matter how myself, and the other tech have tried, we can't figure out how they're formulating how the diodes are either placed or "cut (actually physically not there), for the existing transmit and receive frequencies.

We need to set these 2 radios up as spare units for out ambulances to contact the local hospital systems and out mutual aid fire-ground frequencies.

Any assistance on how to formulate the diode placement would be most helpful to us.

Thanks in advance for anyone who can assist myself and out Department.

It was not a good thing. It was a Part 97 violation. I too have a recording of it. The tape was a "BROADCAST" tape played on Amateur radio. It was from a "program" By Joyce Rielly. This is ONE of the practices and rules violations that this "So Called" net believe that they are "Immune" to.
The damn tape that was played even states that it was a "recorded from a "Broadcast." The whole tape was from a radio broadcast "program." i'm not even going to mention any possible copyright violations.

During the Russian Revoution, the Czar was given many chances to mellow out, he instead got more "ornery". The Bolsheviks ultimately whacked the Trotskyites and Royalists.

Louis XVI made the same boo-boo, when he had the chance to cool it.

So too will the moderates like me, lose to the no-code yuppies.

As I listened to the OAHU, IARU, or MAUI HF Contest this weekend (it was some Hawaiian word ARRL invented to make money through merchandising), I marvelled not only at the dramatic jump in CW use in otherwise empty subbands, but also the speeds involved.

The "great" contesters just dont get it do they ?

I hear them CQ, and the only ones who answer them are their fellows. The casual "point giveroutter" has vanished due to the extremism displayed by the likes of FRC, YCCC, etc., who feel that even though the last use of CW outside of ham radio in the U.S. occurs tonight at 0000z, they still need to teach the rest of the ops something.

Dry up and blow away grandpa (and I'm a 38 year old who sends and receives at 20 wpm).

It doesn't make any difference if you reply to me or just mention

Well, make up your mind. You can't even use your name. Just like the Bwahahahahaha. Someone must have called you that on alt.teen.mtv and Bwahahahahaha.

Really? And how do you know who answers them? Just one tiny example of the error of your statement. In 1997 and 1998 the 40 meter station alone at 6Y2A in CQWW CW logged nearly 4000 QSOs. Do you really think there are that many contesters? Both set new records.

Every contest article I've read or written has acknowledged the significant role the "casual point giveroutter" plays in every contest. If only contesters worked contesters there would be nowhere near the QSO counts that contesters enjoy. And records continue to be broken.

Do some research and see how many CW scores from 1980 remain as records. Pick any contest. While you're looking, note how many are there from 1996, 97, 98. Not bad for a dying breed, huh?

CW outside of ham radio is the apples to the CW inside of ham radio's oranges. Use of CW outside of ham radio was always a money issue. Whether it was teletype sending copy faster or the cost of staffing radio positions.

Ham radio is not driven by any of the concerns with which business have contend. Therefore, what may not be economic or efficient for a business, and therefore wise to discontinue, is not a valid argument for the inclusion or exclusion in ham radio.

See if you can get beyond one line comments and , if you can, try and come up with an original thought. Up until now I was kind of ambivalent about the possibility of a suspension. Now I am happy.

We finally will be able to listen to the radio without hearing your bragging and your breakfast, lunch and dinner menu's. Keith:

Here is my earlier post on the freqs:

The following is reposted for those who may be interested in "QRT" broadcasts in CW.

Friends,
This from Dick Dillman:

In my posting a couple of weeks ago I mentioned that the Globe Wireless stations, the last coast stations in North America to use Morse, would be closing down their Morse operations on Monday, 12 July.

I now have the time and frequency information for that event that many readers asked for.

The call signs involved are WCC/WNU which will be keyed from Lousiana and KPH/KFS which will be keyed from Half Moon Bay, CA. I use the term
"call signs" instead of "stations" because in the cases of WCC and KPH, formerly the calls of the two great RCA stations on the east and west coasts, their original transmitting plants were shut down years ago. Still, it will be your last chance to hear these calls on the air.

The official beginning of the event will be at 1600PDT (2300Z) with messages from WCC/WNU followed by messages from KPH/KFS with the final sign-off at 2359Z. However certain personal or organizational messages may be sent from KPH/KFS beginning at 1500PDT (2200Z). So my advice is to start your listening watch a little before 2200Z to make sure you hear everything.

The frequencies are listed below but please be sure to read my special request at the end of the list.

WCC/WNU

500 Kc.
12826.5 Kc.

17117.6 Kc.

KPH/KFS

500 Kc.
8444.5 Kc.
17184.8 Kc.

Special Request: I will be at the Half Moon Bay site to participate in the closing ceremonies. Thus I will not be able to make any off-the-air recordings of the event. My special request is that anyone within listening range of any of the stations - but especially KPH/KFS on 500 Kc. - do their best to make an audio recording of the transmissions. I would of course like a copy of any such recordings for my archives and would be happy to pay and copying and shipping costs involved.

All true Polly, now how about your running your mouth for 5 years

What a pleasant surprise to know that Butch is on the Internet and hopefully will be returning to 14.313. He shied away from 20 because of Mike,ND8V, but now that he's a silent key, Butch has nothing of which to be afraid,
Last June, while changing planes in Houston,I had the distinct pleasure of meeting Mr.Rulfs and found him to be articulate,sophisticated, well groomed, gentlemanly before my wife and genuine in every respect. We lunched together at the airport while he then kept us company as we waited for the connecting flight to Tucson. During our time together, Butch hypnotized me by discussing Chaucer, the philosophies of Rene Decartes and Immanuel Kant who could and Einstein's Theory of Relativity. How refreshing to have found a real intellectual among the potpourri of insect minds inhabiting 20 meters. Between Mr.Rulfs and Mr.Whiten, I have become even better educated than previously which is saying much since I had eight years of college education which proves itself by the brilliance I demonstrate. I just recently purchased an MFJ 9475 SSB rig for 75 meters. I am planning on using the rig for mobile QRP operating when 75 Meters is open at night. Does anyone know of a good mobile single band mobile whip that will work for 75 meters? I already have the magnet base with the 3/8 x 24 threads, I just need to get a whip that I can use for 75 meters that will work well with the MFJ 9475. Also, any operating practices for 75 meters would be appreciated, since I have never worked on this particular band before, I mostly hang out on 10 meters. I have a brother that lives about 25 miles away from me, would 75 meters be a good band that we could work each other on from this distance at night? Please e-mail me with any suggestions or tips. Thanks for the help.

I don't think for a minute the "racist remarks" had anything to do with the suspension. Those remarks are just the rallying point that the anti-OTKs use for their rhetoric. I believe a broad palette of relatively minor technical violations led to the action. And for the record, I don't mean minor as in insignificant. I mean the infractions by themselves (failure to ID properly, or illegal power, for example) might not have been enough to warrant the suspension, but in large numbers and in conjunction with other elements of the case probably added up to it.

> ...but keep in mind 120 days is nothing and OTK will be back with

And "a clean slate." I think that's the evidence that proves my point. The question now is what will he and the other players do with this opportunity.

I also don't believe that is the last sanction that will be invoked amongst the players. When you see some 12 year olds pointing fingers and shouting, "look what he's doing," you know that some or most of them were doing the same thing. There is a lot of fertile territory to be exploited, and the FCC seems interested in doing just that.

In the Long Island area the Coast Guard does charge a fee when they have to rescue small crafts that run out of gas. They must do this or they will be busy "rescuing" everyone who doesn't take care to carry enough fuel and thus not be available for more serious emergencies.
Local emergency ambulances do not charge high fees beyond what is covered by most insurance but they do ask for voluntary contributions.
The local fire departments get supported by money from real estate taxes as well as voluntary contributions.

ALL licensed radio operators will be "harassed" the same way according to the ULS....that is because of the streamlining "one size fits all" radio operators' form concept that is at the heart of ULS.

Right on!

Pilots are not the only ones who need to be certified by the FAA. As an inspector in an FAA approved avionics shop I once had to hold an FAA radio-instrument repairmans certificate. The FAA has to have the addresses of pilots and repairmen in order to notify them or their employers if required service bulletins are mandatory in the equipment that they are likly to be involved with, and for other matters involving aircraft safety. It is common sense that full ID must be maintained by the government. In the case of an accident that needs to be investigated the FAA must be able to track pilots and maintainers who may be involved and thus may be needed to answer questions. This is not just to place blame but to prevent future potential accidents. The FAA also invites pilots and maintainers to educational safety lectures.

I don't want to debate gun control again here but I will say that Hams and pilots are supposed to be under control of the FCC and the FAA, (federal agencies) BUT gun control my be ruled by either federal or state authorities and therefore is often overlapping or inconsistent. The rules for selling and registering guns can vary in different states and in practice we know that enforcement does vary from state to state or city to city, regardless of federal laws.

Nah...I think the NRA can win because they have enough money to hire an actor who "got the Ten Commandments" and get him elected for their president. Maybe the ARRL needs to hire a big name actor or actress as a spokesperson...but stay away from actor-pilots like the late Arthur Godfrey, who buzzed control towers for fun. Maybe we need to get Rosie O'Donald, Oprah Winfrey or Whoopie Goldberg a Ham license. People seem to trust their opinions more than any congressmen.

>We don't have to

Hmmm...what about a digital ID for the Hams who post here? What about the ones who use "No-mail" in their E-mail address and display other paranoidal behavior? When tracked to other news groups, one such person said that he was not the same "no-mail". Maybe we should be able to tag them with a hidden ID, which only other licensed Hams could decode but can not be deleted. Does anyone have the smarts to know how to do that? I know it is possible technically because it is being done for other purposes when we update from microsoft or visit certain web sites.
Do Hams need caller-ident? What about sub-audio PL tones for unique IDs? Certainly the technology exists.
Dont just feel ashamed of yourself. Identify as a Ham and let us all feel ashamed of you.

Yes old porkbut did get off quite easy if you want my opinion. None of us have the right to take the law into our own hands. Lets see how long the porkster really stays off the radio. Lets see once he gets back on the radio how long it takes that trash to be back into trouble again. I wonder how long it will be before he is running those 8877s at full bore. Then just like the Dog he'll be truly gone!
Not only did porky run to much power, not ID but he jammed, stole and lied to the FCC officals. I think that the main thing that got porkbut's suspension is the fact that he is a high profile operator. Thus the FCC makes a example out of him.
This is the same reason Jimmy Obriandead got off scott free for jamming. Nobody really knows old Jimmy Obraindead or some of the trash on 3.8945 that he hangs with. That is why he and his friends got off scott free! (I think Jim W4AMP is the white noise jammer on 3.950. A Dentron MLA 2500 can make a pretty good signal but it wasn't as good as porkbuts pair of 8877s.) So there is something to said about having a low profile. I think that old porkbut is smarter than that to jam while under suspension. I live down here by both of these fools and the signal wasn't big enough to be porkscum's Opps I mean porkbut's. I mean Theives are smart they have to be. That in it self would make me suspect old Jimmy Obraindead he is about the stupidest person I have ever met. Most people who jam on amateur radio are pretty stupid anyway. I mean he will even lie under oath. I had the displeasure of watching that slime lie under oath and the home town judge didn't even take transcripts of the hearing. One thing you can say about Georgia it takes care of its own losers thats twice since I have been down here that I have seen the judge let a local get away with lieing under oath. So with that in mind I would beleive that the white noise jammer isn't that slime ball porkbut. I beleive that is that scum of the earth Jimmy Obraindead!
Thats just my opinion I could be wrong!

1230. Looking for TCP/IP over DataRadio DMP

Hello,

I need my program to work on mobile computers connected to main office computer by DataRadio VIS(MRM at Client, BDLC in the office). Client is laptop with Windows 95/98, server is Windows NT Server.
But I need to develop myself send-receive functions using DataRadio DMP. It is very time consuming for me.

So, I'm looking for any implementations of TCP/IP (or may be NetBEUI) over DataRadio DMP. I know now only about IBM implementation but it's expensive and run on AIX.

Thanks a lot,
Sashka.

The correct words are:

yourself
somebody

"Real quick" should be "really quickly" or "very quickly;" adverb - adverb construction.

That should be "Lucent's." The corporation's name is "Lucent Technology." Adding the apostrophe s ('s) makes the name possessive, as in "Lucent's rules."

"AOL's" is the correct form; possessive of "AOL."

The word "ain't," while listed as an illiteracy, is spelled "ain't" because it is a contraction for "am not."

"Crybaby" is one word.

"Can't" is the correct form; contraction for "can not."

This guy does not know the difference between "hear" and "here."

I think you are looking for implementations for IP/IPX eithernet 802.EEE. We just put together a moblie data system in Atlanta using the IP/IPX network then ran it through a router into a TCP/IP network. We used the 2.4 GHz spread spectrum transmiters and we get 10 MBps at a little over 25 miles away.
I wouldn't use netbeui because of its waste of airtime. Netbeui is always polling. In other words its allways asking if the other computer are there. IP/IPX isn't quite that chatty. The only draw back of the system we proposed in Atlanta was that its expense. One unit was 10,000 bucs. You could do something with 9600baud paket radio but if you where going to send video through that link it would be very very crappy video. video at 33.6 is choppy. What type of data to you intend to send throught this moblie link? The police use a 2400 baud system in a experment with the NCIC and DOT but like packet radio they mainly send text.
I hope that this helps you. I'll get hit and discredited by all my lovly trolls, lids and jammers.

Rick,

I have owned all three 706 models.
One way to look at your decision:
The 706 MKIIG is the 3rd attempt to get it right.
I seriously doubt the FT-100 is as well engineered/mature as the 706MKIIG. Mine is superb in every way and I have found no flaws so far.

Yesterday I received two phone calls and six E-mails concerning the fact that KV4FZ was disparaging me on 14.313 or .300. Please understand that I don't give a flying snot about what he or any of his friends say about me. He and they DO NOT COUNT! If anyone thinks that I'm about to go on the air to argue with Schoenbohm, you're crazy. Do you think I'm that stupid as to allow such a moron to bait me and then run to call Riley? Herbie is just about out of here for good i.e.ham radio. I'm an Extra with a ticket good for years to come and I'm not about to jeapordize it or put myself in a position to have to pay a fine to the FCC. So for all I care, KV4FZ and his cronies can blow their guts out calling me names, concoct stories about me and my family ad infinitum. Herbie Schoenbohm was born a rotten stinking person and has been steadily losing ground for 59 years. Doc,AF2Y

The pirates are, unfortunately, alive and well on Internet as well as on amateur radio!

The above item was not published by or on behalf of myself. Any message issued by me originates via demon.co.uk

However, the place to complain is the Internet Service Provider (ISP) of the offending user, e.g. 'mcmail.com'. This information can be found from the 'Path:' field of the full header:

The customary address to complain to would be 'abuse@mcmail.com', and if that fails, try 'postmaster@mcmail.com'. Be polite, firm and direct.

When you complain here about an individual, you are posting off-topic, which is also inappropriate to the newsgroups you're posting to. If you have a net abuse problem, then bring it up in one of the net abuse newsgroups, where such things are discussed; not here. Complain to the ISP, who can do something about it, not to us.

-- KD6PAG (Networking Old-Timer, "RF Newbie")

P.S. If the ISP is not cooperative and the abuse is very serious, then complain to the upstream ISP. There are also some other ways of dealing with such postings, but such methods may be as questionable as the original posting...

Wait a minute. If he did it for years and years, then clearly he does have them. You on the other hand, claim to be just an SWL. You're not in much of a position for a dick measuring contest with that pedigree.

> If you are so good at it , why don't you lock horns with Mr R.

Make up your mind. Either he did it or he didn't. In any event, now that there's a new sheriff in town, you must not be very bright if you think that questioning someone's manhood is enough of a motivator to risk one's license over.

Sounds like exercising perfect sense to me.

Then why don't you quit SWLing and get a license. Oh, by the way, you just can't depend on Dan Quayle's example for everything. In the plural form potato does have an "e". And you might try "compared" in order to convince people whatever point you might have is worth evaluating.

> ...you are a yellow chicken and won't confront Herb because he will

Wow, a "yellow chicken." Haven't heard that since grade school. And it's mighty big talk for someone who won't even sign their name.

Well, I've left you alone for a few days, but now it's time to push your button again. You are powerless.

About as scary as having to register a motor vehicle. Operating a radio transmitter, like driving a car, is a privilege, not a right. And just as your automobile must registered, so should your transmitters.

>>Guns currently have a mandatory digital ID (serial number) built in.

Which is why all guns should be registered at the time of sale, with a seller being fined and jailed for not doing so.

It goes along with the privilege of operating a transmitter. Just as one can attempt to change their car's VIN and license plate, hams could attempt to change the IDer. Fined and jailed if caught in either case.

>>and our equipment costs would go up to pay for the "IDer" chip.

That's the price we'll have to pay in order to keep the airwaves free of "undesirables."

>$1000 down the tubes and its so damn boring!
>N9YIM

Generally, I do agree with you. The most common aspects of the hobby, HF phone is or at least has gotten boring. But there must be something that got you interested in the first place. There's so much besides HF phone and 2m or 440 repeaters. Have you tried the ham satellites? Have you tried serious VHF/UHF Dxing? Howabout mountain-topping? What are you into? What is it that's boring? Pin that down and avoid it. I hate contesting. On a contest weekend, regardless of how much free time I have, no one will hear me on the air. I generally don't like VHF repeaters. They are somewhat like exclusive clubs. I don't use them. I get some radio jollies on the ham satellites...not hard to do. I'm working on a homebrew yagi-array for moonbounce. Hopefully by the winter I'll be good to go. Watching the propagation boards looking for a good Es opening or an Au opening is fun...getting in on an opening on 2m, 6m or 432 ssb is fantastic (for me anyway). Watching the national weather looking for a stationary front during the summer months looking for the possibility of some tropo- ducting is a worthwhile endevor. Looking for contacts on 2m with MIR or the NASA shuttles is a real kick (for me, not necessarily everyone). There's a lot to be said about the digital modes. Personally, I like HF AMTOR and straight RTTY. Packet can be fun. I got tired of it, but every now and again I get back into it for a while. I recently got into 432Mhz Amateur Television. All I'm trying to say is if what you're into is boring, try something else. Between 1.8 mhz and 900 whatever mhz and beyond, there's a lot out there...alot more than a bunch of seniors (and there's nothing negative or disrespectful intended) discussing their war days, aches and pains and how long ago their spouses died. There's more out there than people talking about their antennas and how much power they are running. There's more to talk about than the weather. Wanna get some people upset? Break the rules. Ask a question. Ask a question about something non radio related. The best conversations, true back and forth dialogs can only start with a question. The routine conversation, "the QTH here is _____ and my name is _____. I'm running a_____ at______watts into a _____ at _____feet. The weather here is _____ but they say that later it might _____. The age here is_____ and I'm_____ _____. Back to you. This is _____." Make up a list of questions. Ask almost anything. Make the mindless aspect of this hobby go away... at least for this one conversation. Get the other guy (or gal) talking from the heart, not just describing what is on their desk in front of them and whatever is going on right outside their window. We can all talk about the hobby, but you know what...I DONT CARE ABOUT THE OTHER PERSONS WEATHER, unless of course it's a serious disaster or unusual occurance. Try to broaden your radio horizons. We all get bored with it sometimes. I've been licensed since 1988...I have been bored a lot. Stay with it. Find the fun. Call CQ on a band that's supposed to be dead. If you're board with what you're doing...do something else. Ham radio is only dead and boring to those who make it that way.

How about going through the rubber gromets in the firewall or a rubber drain plug in the floorboard (sometimes under the back seat) or behind the seat into the trunk. Never heard of any flat coax.

Why has a group of former 3950-ites left and started QSOs on another freq? Are they disaffected with the lack of liberty on 3950? Are they disgusted with some on 3950 who exposed the depredations of the ZOG night after night for years and then seemed surprised when the ZOG acted perfectly within its criminal character to exonerate the worst jammer in the history of ham radio and simultaneously accuse an innocent man? Are they repelled by the machinations of a new power-clique which has arisen to act in ways that make the charges of their lying, jamming detractors seem plausible? Are they disappointed because their advice and warnings which were rebuffed and rejected have proven to be right on target? Just what IS happening on 3950, anyway? Is it an inside sabotage job? Has there been a change in leadership in favor of a marxist-leaner who called Ho Chi Minh a harmless agrarian reformer?

Taken from http://www.newswatchmagazine.org/

Adam Weishaupt organized the Order of the Illuminati on May 1, 1776. He stated that his adepts should change its name if it became suspected of subversive activities. Eventually Albert Pike wrote Wesihaupt's successor, Guiseppe Mazzini, the Luciferian outline for world government to hopefully be completed by the close of the 20th century.

In his remarkable letter dated August 15, 1871, which was on display in the British Museum Library in London, England, until recent years, Pike gave Mazzini details of the plan for world conquest. In graphic details he outlined PLANS for three world wars. There would also be many revolutionary wars. He stated that in the third of these wars "WE [the Illuminati - worshippers of Lucifer as god] shall UNLEASH the Nihilists and Atheists, and WE shall provoke a formidable social cataclysm which in all its HORROR will show clearly to the nations the effect of absolute atheism, origin of savagery and of the most bloody turmoil. Then everywhere, the citizens, obliged to defend themselves against the world minority of revolutionaries, will EXTERMINATE those destroyers of civilization, and the multitude, DISILLUSIONED WITH CHRISTIANITY, whose deistic spirits will from that moment be without compass [direction], anxious for an ideal, but without knowing WHERE to render its adoration, will receive the pure light through the universal manifestation of the pure doctrine of Lucifer, brought finally out in the public view, a manifestation which will result from the general reactionary movement which will follow the DESTRUCTION of Christianity and atheism, BOTH CONQUERED and EXTERMINATED at the same time.1

In the early 1920s the plan was expanded by V.I. Lenin: "FIRST, we will take Eastern Europe, THEN the masses of Asia. THEN we will encircle the United States, which will be the last bastion of capitalism. We shall not have to attack. It [the U.S.] will fall like a ripe fruit into our hands."

In the April 15, 1999 issue of Newswatch we showed the history of the Illuminati - how it imposed their first world war and attempted to set up world government through the League of Nations. We explained the overthrow of the Czar of Russia for the Illuminati to set up a seen enemy of the West and to become the destructive force for world revolution.

We showed how they began to infiltrate into our government to change it by legislation. We gave proof of the establishment of a Central Bank to control our economy and the income tax - BOTH planks of the Communist Manifesto. We showed HOW the second world war was created as Pike outlined. Then the takeover of China and our State Department betrayal of ally Chiang Kai-shek. After Eastern Europe was taken with the ending of World War 11, the stage was set to take the masses of Asia. We are deep into Pike and Lenin's plan for world conquest. As a result of our betrayal of Chiang Kai-shek, the way was now clear for the start of the Korean War.

The Remainder of Asia After China

The Korean War was a war the United States was NOT ALLOWED to win, the war in which the greatest American general of the century, Douglas MacArthur, was disgracefully dismissed by President Truman because he would accept NO substitute for victory. When the Chinese Communist hordes entered the war, our policymakers afforded them a privileged sanctuary across the Yalu River, in Manchuria, by prohibiting American commanders from attacking Chinese Communist depots, bases and airfields located there. Officials in Washington also ordered the American Seventh Fleet into Formosa Strait, to prevent our ally - Chiang Kai-shek - from invading his lost mainland (which would have taken the pressure off our troops fighting the Chinese Communist enemy in Korea). Our government even refused Chiang's offer to fight beside us in Korea.

Disclosure of some of these facts by patriotic Americans during the Korean War - coupled with the work of a few Congressional investigating committees, carried on despite fierce opposition from LIBERALS (cover name for Communists) - finally began to bring about some awakening among the American people to the dangers of Communism. This became a major issue in the political campaigns of 1952.

January 1, 1945. Leadership of history's largest seaborne assault - the Allies' D-day landing in Normandy. Little did Americans know the deliberate holdup in Europe to allow Communism to take Eastern Europe was led by Dwight David Eisenhower. He later failed to act on other Communist fronts allowing Communism to spread.

Eisenhower campaigned with bold statements about "liberation" - "rolling back the Iron Curtain" - and "freeing the captive peoples." When Eisenhower became President, many patriotic Americans naively assumed that drastic changes would be made in our foreign policy and that we would quickly get back on the right track once again. Little did the public realize that the Illuminati International Bankers controlled our money supply AND foreign policy, PLUS Congress was loaded with 33% Masons who were hand-picked to learn the secrets of World Government.

People behind the Iron curtain listened to the Eisenhower rhetoric - and in the Fall of 1956, in Hungary, they acted. In the magnificent uprising against their tyrannical communist slave masters, the Hungarian "Freedom Fighters," in a few days of sublime heroism, forced the withdrawal of Russian occupation forces from Hungary. This was the first major uprising in any communist country since the Bolsheviks first gained control of Russia. It was the FIRST chance we had been offered to prove that "liberation" was more than an empty slogan to help win elections, and that victory over our enemies was more than a bygone dream. The world looked to the U.S. to redeem our pledges, to honor our commitment to the freedom we valued above all else. In this one brief moment, we had a dazzling opportunity to roll back the Iron Curtain and free the captive people as promised by Eisenhower in his campaign rhetoric.

Resentment against Communist rule was at fever pitch all through Eastern Europe. Had the uprising in Hungary succeeded, there would have been a wave of similar uprisings in almost all the other Eastern satellites. The whole area was a powder keg waiting to explode in Russia's face - if we had sided with the brave Freedom Fighters.

We answered by spitting in Hungary's Freedom Fighter's faces and dousing the fuse with ice cold water! Our State Department sent a telegram to the Communists. It read: "The Government of the United States does not look with favor upon governments unfriendly to the Soviet Union on the border of the Soviet Union."2

That was all Krushchev needed. The American State Department had confirmed its support of his objectives. Within hours, the Russians controlled by the Illuminati sent their tanks and troops back into Budapest, with orders to kill without mercy (see Rev.6:3-4). In this way "our" State Department sealed the fate of millions of freedom-loving Hungarians who had been naive enough to believe Eisenhower's cheap election rhetoric. As the Red Army's tanks rumbled into Budapest on November 4, 1956, the radio station of the heroic Freedom Fighters broadcast one last, vain message: "People of the world, listen to our call. Help us not with words, but with actions, with soldiers and arms. Please do not forget that this wild attack of... continued...

"We are grateful to the Washington Post, the New York Times, Time Magazine, and OTHER great publications whose directors have attended our meetings and respected THEIR PROMISES of discretion [silence] for almost forty years...It would have been IMPOSSIBLE for us to develop OUR PLAN FOR THE WORLD if we had been subject to the bright lights of publicity during these years." -- David Rockefeller

"And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast; and they worshipped the beast saying, Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?" Revelation 13:4

Welcome to the Auxiliary Communications Service Newsletter, developed by the ACS Training Unit of the State of California Governor's Office of Emergency Services. Please visit our ACS Home Page at http://acs.oes.ca.gov

The purpose of this weekly newsletter is to bring those of us in emergency communications closer together by sharing common ideas, and by introducing new technology into the emergency services community. All individuals with an interest in emergency communications, disaster preparedness or helping the community at large are encouraged to participate here in an open forum.

You will find a virtual community here, with representatives from many different organizations with the same common goal: emergency response. We encourage everyone, from whatever organization you represent (or just yourself!) to bring us your ideas, suggestions, concerns, manuals, handbooks, or opinions so that we may share them with the group. To those of you who have just joined us, welcome aboard!

>From the Mailbag:

(Regarding last week's EMCOMM Bulletin on type-accepted radios):

From: Tom Shinn <Tom_Shinn@3com.com>

On type-accepted radios: perhaps one of the biggest roadblocks to using amateur equipment on Public Service frequencies is the requirement that the user NOT be able to change the pre-programmed transmitting frequency in the field without doing what is equivalent to standing on one foot while patting the top of your head and rubbing your belly.

The intent is to prevent inadvertent changes off-frequency (onto other users' freqs) and we all know how easy it is to accidentallychange the frequency of most ham radios.

A perfectly acceptable (and legal) approach, however, where operation in both services is necessary is to use type-accepted radios for both. There's absolutely nothing in Part 97 that limits the use of such equipment, though the (typically) higher cost and difficulty of programming make them less attractive to most hams.

This week's EMCOMM Bulletin:

EMC192 Type Accepted? 2/2
To: Emergency Communications Units - Information Bulletin
To: Emergency Management Agencies via Internet and Radio
By: Auxiliary Communications Service (ACS) of the California Governor's Office of Emergency Services

EMC192 Type Accepted? 2/2 For release 7/12/99

Mike Krueger, N6MIK, Orange County RACES Assistant Radio Officer and Training Officer, explains the situation clearly. "Expanding the frequency of your amateur rig is legal, but using that rig to transmit on Public-Safety frequencies IS NOT legal. Amateur radios are not FCC certified for operation outside the amateur bands.

"All Public-Safety, marine, aviation, and commercial frequencies are regulated by the FCC. All equipment used must be FCC-approved for use in that particular service. MARS and Civil Air Patrol users are the only exceptions, and only because the military spectrum they use is governed by the NTIA, not FCC.

"The police chief can grant YOU (an individual) permission to operate on 'his' frequencies, but cannot grant your radio the same privileges. Remember, the agency doesn't 'own' the frequency.

"The penalties for operating a non-type-accepted transmitter outside the amateur bands can be quite severe, including heavy fines and revocation of your amateur license, and possibly the agency's license. As an EMCOMM unit participant, you should be familiar with the operations and capabilities of your agency's radio systems, since you are there to serve the agency, and may NEED to use that system some day.

"We have all heard stories about hams using Public-Safety channels to summon assistance in times of emergency. The outcome depends on the emergency, the agency, and the person involved. Personally, I couldn't justify the risk.

"Unauthorized or accidental transmissions on Public-Safety channels can be very serious. Imagine if your accidental transmission covered an officer reporting shots fired or 'blew the cover' of an officer searching a building for a burglary suspect. There is severe personal liability at risk as well for operating without a license/authorization and interference with police communications."

Mike concludes, "An honest mistake is usually forgiven, depending on the person and circumstances. However, this is an easy situation to avoid. Program your amateur radio so it will not transmit on the Public-Safety frequencies by using 'odd splits' (nonstandard transmit offsets) or other means to keep the RF in the ham band."

Why not use a balun and twin-lead and an antenna with 300 ohm impedance?

Buying your own van would be cheaper than divorce.

Divorce would probably mean he wouldn't have a car to put the rig into or enough money to purchase round coax.

I heard Volz invade the Liberty Net too. The net was orderly and civil until KK7HO started his campaign of malicious jamming last Saturday night.

In addition to his "hiding behind his daughter's skirt" Volz said that he was "being dragged" back onto 3.950. So his jamming is/was justified. I haven't seen the area of part 97 that addresses KK7HOs 'justified jamming'.

Now he threatens to keep posting his messages here because he is being "dragged back" into the newsgroup.

But it's just another KK7HO lie.

If you check the dates of his posts here, you can see that as soon as he was done jamming the Liberty Net last Saturday night, he got on the newsgroups and posted several messages about the Liberty Net and it's participants.

How is this "dragging" him back onto the newsgroups?
Please enlighten us, Tim.

Maybe you're looking for "Twin Lead Cable" sometimes referred to as "Ribbon Cable".
Generally this is 200 to 300 Ohm but did see 75 ohm once.

And then opened it. Currently, a permanent resident of the US (as well as any other foreigner) may operate under reciprocal privileges permanently, without ever supplying any information to any US agency---not even so much as a US mailing address---so long as he neither holds a US license nor naturalizes. Since the purpose of the reform you quote, according to the FCC, was to keep people from permanently circumventing US licensing requirements, that loophole is now open again---if you're privileged enough not to be a US citizen.

The best solution, of course, is to haromínize our licensing system. But, failing that, no permanent resident should be eligible for reciprocal privileges.

No, but because every time someone gets behind the wheel of a car, they are putting their own and others' lives and property at great risk. Again, what is the proportion of deaths, injuries, and property damage caused by automobiles compared to radio transmitters? (jeez, this is beginning to look really silly!)

Get some scrap plexiglass approximately the same thickness as your car window. Trace the shape of the window's top edge onto a piece of cardboard and then cut three sections of plexiglass the same shape as the hole that is formed when you roll the window down about an inch.
Glue these into a sandwich with your favorite sticky goo such that they form a "pocket" that seats nicely to the top curve of the window. Drill hole for the coax in the plexiglass and then wedge it into place by rolling the window up to clamp it between the top of the window and the rubber seal. If you don't want to trap the plexiglass onto the feed line, you can make a slot instead of a hole, but a slot will leak more.

I went from 0 wpm to 20 wpm via the PC running Morse Tutor Gold software. In my opinion it is the 'Cadillac' of all the Morse training software out there. You obviously have a PC so I would recommend that. I did about 45-60 mins a day almost everyday. Never copied code off the air since I never intended to work CW mode. Went from no-code tech to extra in 6 months. Also get the upgrade question pools and run practice theory exams on the PC. After passing a dozen or so of those you will know the material and your confidence will be greatly bolstered come test day.

Others will have different advice but this is what worked for me....good luck with the upgrades. See you on 14.165 soon!

And a byproduct of that service is that dumb fucks like riley can pay our disability with his tax money. Eat your heart our, riley. Soon I plan on getting a HF radio with money from your wallet. BTW, start doing some overtime as soon I'm up for review to have an increase in my disability percentage. That increase will help pay for the antenna.

Chuck there are plenty ham transceivers that have xtal sockets where you can add a 6Khz filter for AM reception, while there may be some recievers out there that would be better specifically for SWLing, I think you'll find for the difference in price you can get the transmitter along with it and have much more fun.

Well yes it does take a little time to learn the code, but the rewards are great. Don't worry so much about the upgrade, practice tapes are good, or any of the PC programs are fine. If you using a PC program set it up to send E, I, S, H, 5 these characters are all dits, take your time, learn the first 5 well then move onto another set of 5 like T, M, O, & Zero, all dashes. Don't expect instant results and you won't be disapointed. A 20min session each evening would be a good start.

Obviously he is worried about upgrading Lloyd, that's why he asked. It may be a ritual Lloyd but it sure was a lot of fun making that first CW contact, and what a learning experience it was learning how to properly use opposite sidebands and filtering to pull out a station on a crowded band. It also comes in real handy when travelling being able to ID a repeater by the call in morse, not to mention it's the one digital mode copyable by ear with no need for external electronics. It's also a mode used for HSMS (high speed meteor scatter), it's the only mode with it's own dedicated portion of band, (with the exeption of a data only portion of 900Mhz). When making satellite contacts it allows the use of older, non SSB, 2m equipment allowing many to experience satellite communications on a low budget. I paid $20 for an Ameco TX-62 2m AM/CW transmitter allowing me to work RS-13. Additionally there are CW only trancievers on the market for a song, even new kits for as low as $25. It's how most VHF/UHF police/ambulance/fire repeaters identify making it a valuable tool for scanner enthusiasts to ID stations. So by all means Lloyd petition the FCC, but it does have a lot of good uses in amateur radio, shortwave, and scanner monitoring, and because you may not know code does not change that.

SAN FRANCISCO (Reuters) - It's finally taps for U.S. ship-to-shore telegraph, drowned out by the high-speed chattering of satellite communications, high frequency radios and e-mail.

Globe Wireless, an 89-year-old California communications company, Monday sent out what it billed as the last commercial maritime Morse Code message from North America, a terse sign-off that repeated the first words transmitted by the telegraph's inventor, Samuel F.B. Morse, 155 years ago: "What hath God wrought?"

That's a Permanent Resident, not a citizen. The treaties and the proscriptions deal with citizenship.

It would take rewriting the Comm Act and all of our

Respond to mtanner@city-net.com

The owner was a heavy smoker so most of the equipment is somewhat dirty, but other than that it is in fair to moderate condition.

Hello All,

I am looking into buying a new HT soon.
My choices are the Yaesu VX-5R or the Icom IC-T81A.
I know a lot about the VX-5R. I have even played around with the VX-5R, and I gotta say what a sweet radio it is!!! Sooooo small!!
But, I have just begun looking at the Icom IC-T81A.

That is the new 6m/2m/440/1.2 HT.
I have not seen, heard, or read anything about this HT, other than what is on Icom's website.
I would like to know which HT is better for the money.
I love Yaesu, and they have a really good reputation.
I currently own a FT-50R, but am looking to upgrade.

Is the VX-5R the HT to get, or the IC-T81A???

According to AES prices, the VX-5R go for $359.95 and the IC-T81A go for $399.95.
So, for $40 more I can have 1.2 as well!!
Is the rig worth it?? How does it perform?

What are your thoughts regarding this??
Please let me know.
E-mail me if you can help me.

But during the conversation it came out that KK7HO has been sending pornographic messages to the email boxes of net members. When cornered by several members that had received these messages, Tim Volz blamed his daughter for sending the vile email material.

That's right, folks. Tim Volz hid behind the skirts of his daughter, for the unsolicited email porno send from his home computer, saying that she didn't understand what she was doing.

The question begs, why is there pornographic material on Volz's computer that his daughter has access too?

The U.S. FCC is still offering the 1st, 2nd and perhaps 3rd RAdiotelegraph licenses.

As of this writing, U.S. flag steamship companies including Sea-Land, Matson, Farrell Lines, American President Lines and Waterman still have Radio-electronics officers aboard. This could end by 12/3/1/99 depending upon current court actions, etc. Some U.S. companies MIGHT carry a few until the year 2002.

You are right in pointing out that the need for the radiotelegraph license is rapidly ending.

BTW, in 1990, I sat at the operating console of the Irish coast station EJK/Valentia Radio. They allowed me to work a ship at their 500KHz position. I understand that EJK has also ended CW operations.

The aircraft endorsement for the radiotelegraph license was discontinued more than 22 years ago, before I got my radiotelegraph license in 1978.

The 1st and 2nd class radiotelegraph licenses are still being issued by the U.S. FCC, although the need is rapidly declining.

The radar endorsement is still offered for the radiotelegraph license.

Why do you think Wa9kji is back on the air?? And now to answer their latest LIE.

IT's ANOTHER LIE from the "So Called" net. The "letter" that was sent to me and accidentally fwd'd to some Railed "AGAINST" homosexuality. From the SPIN DOCTORING that one of the net members is doing here in this NG it's sounds as though the "NET" may favor what the letter was railing against. There were no pictures or foul words in the message what so ever. There was absolutely nothing in there that one would consider Porno. This is just a lame attempt to distract from their PROBLEMS, and to discredit me because of my outspoken position to their activities on ham radio. This is just another instance OF LYING and SPIN DOCTORING being used to deflect critism of them. I will search out the message, if possible and post it here so that EVERYONE can SEE the LIES of the "So Called" net members. It may have been too long ago for me to still have a copy in my browser file cabinet but, I wiil certainly look because if I find it, EVERYONE will KNOW WHAT LIARS THEY ARE. I was going to lay off of them, not criticize or post about them, if, they would stop their activity here and on 50. It now looks now as though "THEY HAVE NO INTENTION OF CLEANING UP THEIR ACT"
I guess that Riley will have to do it for them. I hope he does, these LIES and libel are a needless part of this NG and unfortunately I must respond.
I have never in my life seen a group of people so bent on LIES and misinformation.

That's a shame; KFS was 599+ on 17.184.8 MHz here near Chicago. I didn't think to record them. I have a mini-disc player recorder handy, too.

I don't know. How many people have been "murdered" with a car? Certainly we're not required to register automobiles because of a very small number of ADW car "murders" which are committed each year.

Ramsey is making a kit based on the unit featured in the last couple issues of QST. The article has enough info to make your own if you want to go that route. I hope to get my Ramsey unit finished in time for our hunt this weekend.

As to antennas, my favorites are the ones made from pvc with metal measuring tape for the elements. They are detailed on a web site, but I don't have the url handy. If you don't find it with a simple search let me know and I'll send it to you. If you have a dual band receiver, make yourself a "440" version of the tape antenna. You can hunt for the third harmonic when you get in close. It works great.

Thanks for posting those frequencies and times. I gave it a listen, 1380. Flat Coax?

Hello All;
I'm in search of a short section of "flat coax" HF feed (for 20M operation;possible 100W transfer energy) that can be tightly pressed between a vehicle window and the adjacent rubber seal. The wife has make it very clear there will be no holes added to "her" :-) van for a direct coaxial antenna feed.

Any suggestions, ideas? Do such items exist?

Currently, the side window pressure fit to surrounding rubber appears to be so tight as to not provide the space necessary to accommodate the smaller Beldon 58/U coax without possible overstress of the surrounding glass.

Suggestions, comments would be greatly appreciated.

Thanks in advance,

Dave Green

Nope. You lost. You can't control yourself. You can't spell. You can't construct a sentence. You can't tell who's baiting you. You don't have a clue about the rules of engagement. And best of all, you can't tell you lost. You are so confused. But your loss is there for everyone to see.

Now you'll make some lame post about someone posing as someone else. And you'll call some names. Or you'll make your usual anonymous post about how you don't have to identify yourself. Or you'll make your school boy taunts. But son, there is one inescabable truth. I own you. I can turn you on and I can turn you off.

You don't have enough self control to avoid it.

Oh really? Care to explain these?

Lie #1:
I have NEVER said I "have 5 FCC licenses".

John's License Post: 4/22/99

> Thirdly, you claim to have more FCC licenses than you can count one > one hand. Please list those.

Gladely Blake, they are a matter of public record!I have had my Amateur Radio Novice license (1983), my Amateur Radio Technician license (1984), my Amateur Radio General License (1990), my Amateur Radio Advanced license (1990), and my Amateur radio Extra class license (1993). All these in addition to my General Radiotelephone License.

Lie #2:
If I am obsesed with that person, when why is it that everyone else is always wanting to talk about him??

When was the last time you saw ME initiate any discussion about him?

John's initiation of a Bill Cheek thread:

Subject: How to contact Bill Cheek??
Date: 1999/04/04
Author: jmackey <jmackey@usa.net>
Posting History

Does anyone know what jail or prison Bill was taken to upon his arrest by the federal investigators so we may send him cards & letters? This way, he will know we are all thinking of him!

Lie #3:
I do NOT "post OVER 350 offtopic posts a month" as you claim.

Dejanews search from 1/1/99 to present:

Messages 1-100 of about 2200 matches

2200 divided by 6 months = 366 messages per month. Do the math.

Lie #4:
> That's the wrong John Mackey. This one's only claim to fame is being the top > off-topic poster on usenet with thousands of off-topic messages across

Oh no, I could NEVER try to hold that title. Bill Cheek won that title severaltimes over according to information POSTED by YOU. Remember the "reality check"
post where YOUR OWN DATA showed that Cheek posted several hundred more posts on usenet than me!?!?!?!?!

Below is an abbreviated qoute:

Date | Mackey | Cheek |

TOTALS | 2139 | 2348 |

Current Totals for Cheek and Mackey 1999:

Mackey: About 2200 listed this year
Cheek: About 1303 listed this year

Estimated on topic content Cheek: 60%
Mackey: 0.99%

Oh, those lies.... Those aren't lies, they're um.... half-truths right John?

Just my 2 cents worth John, but why don't you just try lurking for a while, you know read a post, then read the answers? You might actually learn something about scanners, and the whole flame war would die down in the meantime.

Just a thought (no doubt lost on the reader, but hey, I tried, guys.)

What you are looking for is some RG-174 coaxial cable. The total diameter is similar to the center conductor of RG-8 (just the metal center, not the dielectric) and is very useful in "Tight Fitting" applications. You should be able to acquire some with the appropriate adapters/connectors through Mouser Electronics or some other vendor. Works great but is very lossy if to long of a length is utilized, so keep it as short as possible.

I recently wrote a letter to them. I listen to the program "World Wide Counrty Radio" in the mornings when I get up. Just take a listen tomorrow.
Judging by the way Lloyd spells "country," they'll probably want him to speak on the handicap of lack of education. And I'm glad to know that he listens to them when he gets up because the show would be meaningless if he were still asleep. Hello Lloyd. Anyone home?

1424. Shortwave Receiver or Ham Transceiver ?

Hello,

I recently got my ham license (KG4CYD) but do not have a radio. My main interests lie more in shortwave listening rather than ham HF transmitting. Therefore I am thinking of getting the Drake R8B.

Question: If I am going to spend $1000 on a radio, would a general coverage transceiver do just as well for shortwave listening as the Drake receiver? This would allow me to cover both the SWL and ham transmitting with one purchase.

I was thinking the dedicated receiver would do better for SWL but don't really know.

thanks.

Well, there you go. You bought a commercially-built radio and immediately got bored. You should have instead acquired some building skills and homebrewed first a simple transmitter and receiver, then progressed from there.

It's not too late.

Thanks for the input Randy, that's the way I have been looking at it. The reply I got the other day from Paul sure indicated they may have some problems (at least with the older model) antenna tuner. They may have that fixed by now. Based on what you are telling me, I think I will buy the 706 at the next hamfest.

Listen to the ARRL site, use Supermorse (do a web search for it, it's excellent) and once you learn the charactures listen to the novice portions of 40 and 80m.

Spend at the minimum 10-15 minutes a day at it, as SOON as you begin to get a little frustrated STOP and give your self a break for a few hours. If you can get 2 sessions a day in, all the better. If you can find someone locally to practice code with that's great too.

Congrats on getting your license by the way and welcome to amateur radio!

Hi Chuck,
Congratulations first of all! Get an HF rig, they are just as good if not more so and more than likely you'll change your mind someday and want to start meeting and chatting with people on the air. It's a BLAST! Imagine sitting in your house talking to someone someday in Russia or Italy or Hawaii or......!

I would'nt even worry about upgrading. Join No-Code International and petition the FCC to eleminate the code requirement. Learning code to get on HF is a Hazing Ritual.

1443. Icom IC-2SRA speaker-mic pinouts????

I have an Icom IC-2SRA (2M HT + VHF/UHF scanner), that I'm trying to find some info on. The manual is currently packed in storage several hundred miles away :(

I'm trying to find the speaker/mic jack pinouts and application data (i.e. how to key the radio), in order to adapt a random Pryme headset I just picked up.

The radio is so old that it's not even listed on Icom's website :o)

Any clues? I can't see far enough into the jack to know if it's 3-pin or 4-pin. I am able to get audio out from tip and shield on a 3-pin 1/8" plug. And if I short out tip and ring on that same plug, the radio keys up in a series of short bursts. ISTR a resistor or something in a diagram Icom faxed me years ago to hook the 2SRA into an aircraft intercom system, but I don't have that doc any longer.

Thanks.

I mostly agree with Charles, except for the time per day on the code. Most people find a 15-20 minute session to be about all they can handle. However, you should be able to do two of those per day, which isn't far off of his suggestion.

My recommendation is once you learn the characters, don't listen to anything less than 25 wpm. Copy down everything you recognize. The first few times you won't even be able to tell the dits from the dahs, but you will quickly find yourself recognizing "O" and "Q" and other longer "dash heavy" characters. As you continue practicing, you will find yourself copying other characters as well. Don't worry about making sense out of what's being sent. Just write down every character you recognize.

You will quickly find yourself copying 15% or so at 25 wpm! Keep going. Plan on being discouraged, but always remind yourself that 2 days ago, or a week ago, or 2 weeks ago, you couldn't even tell dots from dashes.

Give yourself a treat every once in awhile and crank the speed down to about 15 wpm. Don't listen to 13 wpm. It's actually harder to copy than 15. But don't spend too much time there. Crank 'er back up to 25 and have at it.

After 2 weeks, you should be able to copy 60-80% at 25 wpm. At this point, any question of whether you can copy code should have been long dispelled. It is like any other psycho-motor exercise. There is no substitute for practice. Sort of like the "hazing" of learning to catch a baseball in order to play baseball.

The written material is largely common sense, at least as far as the regulations are concerned. The electronics can be fun, and don't let anyone tell you "hams don't build anymore." Most of the guys saying that were lined up at the ham store counter in the 50s plunking down their cash for Hallicrafters, National, and Collins radios.

The point of studying the question pool is to learn enough material to pass the exam. No one is required to be a BSEE, and no one has been required to draw a schematic in 35 years, so don't let the gainsayers get you down. If you study the material, you will learn stuff. With any luck, it will be an impetus to learn more once you are licensed.

The Advanced written is the toughest test and the most comprehensive. But if you are disciplined in your study habits, you can pass them all.

I also agree with Charles: good luck. Have fun. Welcome.

APPARENTLY YOU HAVEN'T. INFLAMMATORY COMMENTS ON THE NET ARE BOUND TO GET A RESPONSE. THE NET THEN GOES INTO THEIR HARASSMENT MODE AND THE PERSON RESPONDING IS "AUTOMATICALLY" CLASSIFIED A JAMMER. LOL
NO ONE HAS "DENIED" THE "SO CALLED" NET ACCESS TO 3950. IT IS THEM ON THE OTHER HAND THAT BELIEVE THEY OWN 3950 AND HAVE RAN OTHERS OFF FOR YEARS. YOU NITS WILL NEVER TELL THE TRUTH - ALWAYS IN THE DAMAGE CONTROL/SPIN DOCTORING MODE. REALLY DISGUSTING.

YOUR REALLY FULL OF IT AREN'T YOU. YOU SEEM TO THINK THAT THEY CAN SPEW THEIR RACIST CRAP OVER HAM RADIO BUT I CANNOT SPEAK MY OPINION OF IT. LOL I CAN AND WILL EXPRESS ANY THOUGHT OR OPINION I WISH TO. Martin I have been lied about, slandered, libeled, defamed, jammed, heckled and harassed by this "So Called" net. I have had personal information posted about me, my neighbors, and two instances of illegal activitie occured. Now you ask ME to disengaged when I have requested that from them 4 times. I think not. You haven't been involved in this for very long (i.e a newcomer) so I sugest you learn the facts. i ubderstand your desire to have this stopped. i too have a desire to have it stopped. i would suggest to you that you tell them what you are trying to tell me. THEY need to show the desire to cease.
They need to remove the LYING libelous BS from the internet. Then and only then will this cease. I have the FACTS. They LIE and Slander, libel and Spin. I don't have to make things up the truth is out there. Tell them to remove, cease and desist, take down, stay off 3950 for 90 days. Then maybe we can have some piece and civility if they are sincere. I absolutely, after try 4 previous times will not back off until THEY Show Their sincerity to have this come to a stop. I will reciprocate in kind. The ball is in THEIR court.

My humble suggestion is to use teflon miniature coax aka RG 178, RG 196 and M17/169. Diameter is 1.8 millimeter.

This cable will withstand 100 watt (do NOT use the more common none-teflon RG174), use as short cable as possible as it's pretty lossy.

But I doubt you will find any thinner cable with controlled impedance!!!

Cheers

Congrats on getting your license first of all. :) As a person who just recently passed her 5wpm CW test, I've got a few hints.

* Use the code tapes initially. This will help you get to the point where you will at least learn the letters themselves.

* Get either a program (such as supermorse) or MFJ's code generator (it's a little black box that can generate code to practice with - it's excellent) to generate random letter sets when you're ready. You should practice what you know daily for at least 10-15 minutes a day just by listening. I personally liked MFJ's morse tutor unit since it was small and I could take it with me anywhere. :)

* When you are practicing, do not try to do this while doing other things such as driving, etc. Write the letters you hear down. This is important. Until you get to the point where you can join letters together to form words in your head on the fly, not writing the letters down will actually cause you to take longer to learn the code.

* Practice Transmitting. :) Get a straight key code practice oscillator or a paddle w/ keyer and take it with you. In your car, when you pass street signs, etc., use the paddle/straight key and actually do the sign in morse... Or if you don't want to pick up a key/paddle, say the street sign out loud. i.e.:

Cahalan St.
-.-. .- .... .- .-.. .- -. ... - .-.-.- (on a paddle or keyer)
dah dit dah dit dit dah dit dit dit dit (etc out loud)

You wouldn't believe how much this will help... And the first time you get on the air live, it'll help tremendously with your rythm. :)

Remember that when you take your test you do not need to be able to copy 100% in order to pass generally. I really thought that when I looked at my copy that I was dead... However, when I got the 10 questions, I thought "Oh. This isn't too bad." :) There were letters missed that I thought I could drive a semi through, but I did pass. :) Once you at least get your

5 down, you will be able to do what will help you the most... actually getting on the air and working people. You will mess up (and probably mess up badly like I did. heh), but the more you do, the better you'll get. :)

I use RG-174 in my baluns, and they handle 300 watts at HF with no problem. It wouldn't be a good idea if the SWR is high, though.

Well, maybe not all. Canada seems to have such a restriction in its rules with respect to the US. I was sure other countries routinely did, although, wouldn't you know it, I can't find proof of that now that I need it. For any that do, little rewriting would seem necessary. For the rest, well, score another point for the benefits of harmonization.

KG4CYD , you can use an Antron 99 ,
CB antenna that costs about $50.00 now adays, to to talk on 12 , 15 , 17 , 10 , 11 and 40 ..wit a good tuner you can ever get on 80 meters.als buy yourself some wire 10 or 12 guage , make your self a loop ..260 feet or a 500 foot with a tuner and your on almost every band you want..with about $100.00 or less you will be where the big boys are antenna wise..check out the web , you can find antenna projects that are easy to do and costs less then you may think. Antennas and tuners are the key to really being able to talk.AND of course a RADIO ....LIKE I said you can get an older radio to do what the $1000.00 dollar one will do ..

Which got me wondering, are you better off adding a connector at each end or could you simply splice the sections together overlapping the shields then sealing them with heat shrink or somthing similiar. Would it make any noticable difference in performance? How about at 6 or 2m?

I need to replace the diodes in my TS-930's RX filters and have been told to use MI201 PIN diodes, but I'm unable to find a source for this particular part. I've also heard of MPN3700 and HP5082-3080 being used.

My questions are:
Is there a "best" (readily available) diode for this situation?
What makes one PIN diode better than another for this use?
What are "good" specs for this application?

I know that PIN diodes are more sensitive to static discharge, but I don't have the rig connected to the antenna/ground/power when not in use so I don't think this will be a problem.

I was wondering what is the maximum voltage battery pack I can use on this radio? Does the battery pack from a HTX-202 fit this radio? Can I use the radio while it is charging? Can I hook it up to an external 13.8V power supply? Sorry for all the questions but I am fairly new to Ham Radio and just bought this radio used with no manual, so I wouldn't want to break it first thing.

Keep your power low, remember a 100 watt signal that is S-9 is S-7 at 6 watts! You might consider an external filter depending on the rig you use. I never had any complaints so I can't help you there, but I would certainly address them if they came.

Well, well "Waiverboy" is on the forum. good, good, At least he does not have to Brown nose a Arab Potentate and suck up to a Bush, to get on here, like he did on ham radio to get a greased path to a ham ticket because he was incompetant as far as code is concerned, he needs to go the retest route like TEW and X9J. But he will not, he will just make nasty remarks against people and play the "disabled" card, and whine like he did to get his ticket. What is this I hear about a "DWI" arrest and sexual assualt charges on you, EXPLAIN PLEASE, AF2Y?

the max voltage for the IC-2at is 8.4 volts unless you have the 12v adapter pack with it. yes the 7.2 volt HTX-202 packs will work fine with it.. the HTX-202 was redeisgned from the ICOM IC-O2AT.

At 300 watts and 1:1 SWR, the current is about 2.5 amps. At 14 MHz, the RF resistivity of the #22 center conductor of RG-174 is about 0.15 ohms/foot, so the cable dissipates less than a watt per foot. This isn't enough to raise the temperature of the center conductor to the melting point of polyethylene. The resistivity increases as you go up in frequency, but it should still be ok at this power level anywhere in the HF bands.

Voltage isn't a problem. RG-174 is rated at 1100 volts RMS, which is over 24 kW at 1:1 SWR.

Sure I'll stick to it. Been using RG-174 for baluns and other purposes for more than 20 years and have never had any problem up to 300 watts. It's poor for long runs, though. The loss at low HF is nearly as great as at the high end, due to current penetration of the steel portion of the very small center conductor strands.

Assuming your HF rig is clean, RFI is going to be due to fundamental overload of consumer electronic equipment. There are a number of types of susceptible consumer equipment, and they can exhibit a number of different symptoms.

VCRs are particularly susceptible to lower HF signals since they use those frequencies internally to record and playback. VCRs FM modulate a carrier between 4 and 8 MHz to record the signal on tape, and recover that same broad FM signal during playback using very sensitive heads and preamps (and circuits with virtually no selectivity). These often aren't well shielded and will pick up your 80m and 40m signals if the field strength at the VCR is high. There isn't a lot you can do about this, other than keeping the field strength low, since you'd need to totally shield the VCR to avoid this sort of on-frequency pick up in a strong field.

Telephones and stereos are also susceptible to high RF field strengths.
They will rectify and amplify signals that they pick up on their wiring.
You can do some things to filter the signal off their wiring, since it isn't at a frequency that they normally use. Chokes and bypass capacitors can be used on stereo speaker leads, on telephone wiring, etc, to suppress this sort of RFI. But if the neighbors don't want you modifying their equipment, again you need to reduce the field strength at these devices to reduce the level of interference you will cause. Note that nothing you can do to your transmitter (other than reduce power) will affect problems caused by fundamental overload. So don't waste your time monkeying with grounds or filters on your equipment. It won't help.

Now legally, it is the responsibility of the owners of consumer equipment which is not designed to be a shortwave receiver to solve cases of fundamental overload. But most consumers don't want to believe this, and in pursuit of good neighbor relations you don't want to throw it in their faces. So you want to take steps to prevent the problem in the first place.

The only way to do that is to reduce the field strength experienced by the susceptible equipment. There are two ways to do that. The best way is to locate the antenna as far away from the susceptable equipment as possible.
This brings our friend the inverse square law into play and reduces the field strength proportional to the square of the separation we can achieve. The second way is to reduce transmitter power. This will, of course, reduce the field strength seen by susceptible equipment. It also reduces the field strength seen by distant stations, however, so we want to avoid having to do this if possible. So get your antenna high, and well away from dwelling areas. The more distance you can put between it and consumer equipment, the less RFI complaints you will get.

I've been using a 207H for several months now and am happy with it. I thought it wasn't very sensitive until I realized that the squelch control also activates an r.f. attenuator when turned way up. It doesn't have cross-band or dual-receive capability. The control head is smaller than either the 2710 or 8100, but the one for the new FT-90 looks like it might be even smaller.

Had the FCC done their job in '82 at which time FZ got the ONV or NAL followed up by the letter from Melvin Hyman, field engineer at the Allegon Michigan monitoring station which warned him to stop annoying nets, no eruption would have ever taken place. FZ ripped up that warning and commenced a full scale attack which then provoked responses and the war began. Trying to solve some 40M modem interference in my own shack. When I am on 40M SSB it disconnects my modem from my telnet cluster session. Also after a while it will completely disconnect the modem from the ISP. I have finally tracked this down after several days of head scratching. Radio Shack makes a filter and K-Com does too that is an easy plug and play modular jack arrangement. Does anyone have anything good to say about K-Com or Radio Shack phone filters? Also is there a better filter that I may be overlooking? Thanks..... 73 / DX

That's why this board is going to pot. Too many goyim with microphones. N0VFP says the Illuminati Light Fixture Company is going to toss Christians into detention camps and I don't know if that's a bad idea. In fact, even resettlement or reeducation in Israel just might be the right thing. Let's call it payback for the Crusades and continuous persecutions in the name of the Jew from Nazareth. But all kidding aside, I think we need some more Jewish intellectualism here since WB2OTK and I are the only ones who offer it. Aren't you dumb goyim sick and tired of the quagmire of intellectual indolence in which you find yourselves? Why not lubricate your gray matter by delving into the philosophies of such great Jewish scholars as Baruch Spinoza, Immanuel Kant, Aristottele, Chuztpah,Moses Mendelsohn and Mendel Mosessohn. Here we have the movers and messhugenehs who shaped Western civilization. On the Christian side, whom do we have of equal importance? Reggie Jackson? John Dillinger? Dan Quayle, Mr. Potato Head or is it Potatoe Head or what? These USENET goyim are lacking in leadership as proven by their dependence on KV4FZ for guidance. And here's a man who guided himself right into the toilet and he ain't Charmin either. I mean when I hear hams squawking about Intercon crimes which are nonexistent to begin with,such inane babbling can come only from goyim. No Jewish kosher ham could be so bogged down with the ridiculous to the sublime. And that's the crotch of this posting:we need not put God back into the schools because of goyische pressure but instead let's put brains back into goyische skulls. And that brings me to another salient point. Trouble on this ham USENET is caused by stupid goyim who want to foist upon everyone the belief that their faith is better and that this government is worse. On a daily basis I get e-mails advising or demanding that I convert. I ask myself why? Jews are doing fine. I can remember an incdient one time when I was on vacation in Miami Beach. This frail aged Jewish fellow with a homburg and beard was crossing Collins Avenue when he was hit by an oncoming auto and knocked forty feet onto a lawn across the street. I ran to help the fellow who was lying on his back. Looking down at him, I knelt alongside the gentleman and while cradling his head in my hands I asked, "Are you comfortable?" to which he replied, "I make a good living." That is the type of class and respect lacking by a lot of the goyim who congregate at this site and so I advise many of them to pack it in and move off to other locations. Do it fast too. N0VFP says the Illuminati is coming to get you!

Apparently you are NOT familar with the "Incentive Licensive" program of Amateur Radio by the FCC. Upgrading your license to a higher class of license is encouraged (for example: going from technician to general). You maintain the same license, but upgrade the "CLASS" of your license. I DID NOT hold the Novice, Technician, General, Advanced, & Extra all at the same time.
Rather, I upgraded thru each level as time passed.

But any way, I agree with you. All this flaming & trouble making should stop & it would be nice if the parties involved would simply let it die. Bowers, Hansen,

My -2AT manual doesn't specify a maximum voltage, but the BP-5 battery supplies 10.8V (and 2.3W RF out), so at least that much is acceptable.
I don't think it's intended to be run direct from 13.8v.

I haven't tried it but I've read that batteries are interchangable with the HTX-202.

Manual says NOT to charge battery while radio is on.

This group is in leauge with the Illuminati. They take care of all the "behind the scenes" work. They have a vast network of infomants, they have infiltrated almost all US Goverment. They are the puppet masters of the UN, and the EURO. It's even thought they run the ARRL.

Noone knows for sure how far the Tri-Lateral's have dug themselves into. They have plants in every part of the country. Here in Alabama, it's believed that the Tri-Lateral's have taken over the water departments and that's why the water is bad here.

These folks are very EVIL. I can't even begin to tell you on the board. Rumor has it that AF2Y is a member too!!!!

Hey Mike
I'm wondering what your useing for a antenna. Tim is right if you keep you power low you shoulded have much problem with interferance. You should able to get out pretty good with low power just before the sun goes down on 75-meters CW. 40-meters will be a good band for low power in the morning you'll be fine with CW. I would stay away from 20-meters but 17 12 and 10 are going to be great for a while.
When I was in my 20's and singal I had my ham station setup in a apartment building. I used the drain gutters going accross the back of my building. Sheild side went to one down pipe and the center conductor went to the other downpipe. It was a darn good antenna with a tuner. The down spouts acted like open wire feeder and the antenna was about 300 ft long. That was in the middle eighties. Ten sucked but 15 was great for voice and 40 was great for CW.

I am a professional software engineer and a long time short wave listener.

I have developed a Windows program that allows you to filter audio in real time.

Connect the "Line Out" on your short wave radio to the "Line In" on your PC's sound card.

Use the Windows "Volume Control" program to assign inputs and outputs and set levels.

The program takes the digitized audio, filters it and plays it out through your PC's speakers!

No special hardware or modifications needed.

It does require a fast PC - 200 Mhz or better.

For more information and a free Shareware copy of the program visit my
web site:

http://www.winternet.com/~swezeyt/dsp.htm

I hope you will consider purchasing it.

Thanks a lot,

I did see one Palomar rx-amp with tr-switch using RG174. Not sure if it was exposed to high SWR or more than 100 Watt but the coax was totally melted....

I find using teflon-coax is so much simpler and reliable as the insulation on the 174 tends to melt very easy....

But then again, IF it works well stick to it! No need to change!

Cheers

G'Day and Thanks for reading this message..!

As the Subject suggests, I would like to know if someone could give me any constructive comments regarding the IC-207H. If another amateur has had personal use and has comment regarding the quality and performance with the radio it would be much appreciated . I have purchased a FT8100R and am very happy with it.. I am interested in looking to buy an IC-207H, to replace the radio in the car and put that FT-8100R in the shack.
I thank you in advance and look forward to hearing some comments from other amateurs.

Take care and many thanks..!!

the IC2at requires an adapter to be used with it in order to run 13.8v.. the

It is a fine, as in The FCC has levied a $20,000 fine on a Florida man for violations stemming from alleged operation on Amateur Radio frequencies. The FCC's Tampa Field Office has sent a Notice of Apparent Liability (NAL) to William Flippo of Jupiter. Flippo is accused of willful operation of an unlicensed radio station on 28.375 MHz, willful and malicious interference with ongoing Amateur Radio communications, and with failing to let FCC representatives inspect his radio equipment. Your CBRambo must love it! $20,000! Holy Frijoles!

I just sent a Kenwood 941 tribander to Kenwood for repair and got it back with two replaced diodes and a bill for $198,00. The two meter section was cutting back and actuating the protection circuit. I didn't even receive any explanation of what was done and had asked them to contact me if the repair would be costly, they couldn't even do this. I guess their customers are accepting this kind of treatment and I think this is very sad.. I am able to afford to pay this but I am sure not all hams can. I AM GOING TO DUMP THIS RIG AND WILL NEVER DO BUSINESS WITH THEM AGAIN. ANY THOUGHTS?

Did you set a dollar amount threshold specifically for them to use to contact you? I have had good results with Kenwood west coast repair. If you just said 'expensive' that is wide open to interpretation. Considering bench time is around $50-$65 per hour $198 does not seem 'expensive ' to me.
By the way...how is the rig now? Is it fixed to your satisfaction except for the bill? 73 / DX

Charles,

I would say $198. for a repair on a radio with a market value of $350. is quite high. I also think the customer should be entitled to an explanation as to what has been done. Kenwood could have given me a simple phone call or is that too much to expect? $198. to change two diodes is a bit much.

The cost of repair has NOTHING to do with the 'market price' of the radio.
It is based solely on parts price and labor. You are the one that decided to send it in. Why don't you call them and get an explanation of the costs incurred? Moaning in this newsgroup won't do that for you. Good luck and if you get a detailed parts and labor report please post it here for the rest of us to see. They can't stay in business by cheating people and I seriously doubt you have been cheated.

Charles,

I understand you completely and intend to do as you suggested. I just feel that their customer relations have a long way to go. Have been a ham for 50 years and have dealt with most of the ham companies quite often and with good results. I have a hard time dealing with the typical lack of service that I am seeing now though. Of course this seems to be a sign of the times, very sad! I do appreciate your comments and good wishes Charles.

Paul, I echo your disappointment. Newsgroupies may recall a "battle" I had recently with Kenwood about the silly way they make lithium batteries factory-serviceable only, and the fact that almost all of their rigs have them.

The level of "human contact" I received, or lack thereof, was truly appalling, and made me think twice about future purchases from Kenwood. But, is Yaesu any better? Or Icom for that matter?

Yes, we can expect and demand that the repair work is done right, but there's more to service than mere work.

The best service I get nowadays is from other hams.

Neil

P.S. On the flip side, I must disagree with one of your statements, something about it being wrong to charge $198 to replace two diodes. The cost of the work is clearly NOT in the parts, but in the labor. Although it seems unlikely that it really took them 3 hours to do this job, one never knows. I've spent days trying to fix elusive hardware failures. If I had to pay someone to do that same work by the hour, the cost would have been enormous.

That's "too". And "'til," being a contraction of until, requires an apostrophe to represent the missing letters. In any event, "'til" isn't considered good form. What a great school system you have.

Given that the subject is still being permitted to operate pending final disposition of his case, he is not "down," consequently "rising again" doesn't fit the situation.

I'll bet you put your best thought into this, didn't you?

By the way, I've searched this post for an original thought and there are none!

The "rising again" thing is from Lloyd the carpetbagger.

The "hail" thing is from Polly, who'll probably post another "who's Polly" question.

The really lame "tough talk" is at least 3 generations old, and sounds 6th grade no matter who says it.

And "basis and purpose" which is a non-sequitir to you has been used by at least 2 other posters.

You didn't even bother to de-emphasize "service" which was in the original poster's tagline.

And you're just a troll. Nothing to add to the conversation but wishful thinking on an issue about which you haven't a clue.

DXBase2000 is such a great program but I was becoming dismayed at the frequency of telnet sessions abruptly terminating. Almost every time after operating HF I would check the cluster and I would be disconnected from the dx cluster. Also 40M SSB operation would completely disconnect my modem from the ISP which terminated everything including the telnet session. My shack is well-grounded and I run only 100W. I began to think my HF operations were disconnecting me. I purchased a Radio Shack telephone RFI filter (made by K-Com) and installed right at the modem on the back on my computer.

Problem completely resolved on all bands. Telnet goes uninterrupted for hours till I want to disconnect. Hope this might help someone else out. I had begun to blame the software ..... but it was RFI instead.

Poor, poor, Polly. You left out the "is." And that's just the start. (You could have used a contraction there, but I don't want to tax your rudimentary skills.) Let's continue.

> I guarantee this gets his goat...

You couldn't get my goat with a $1,000,000 check. You see, you didn't understand this before, so I'll explain it. You were being tweaked. You wanted to play a little hard ball, but you brought a knife to a gun fight. And I tweaked you. And you fell for it, hook, line, and sinker.

Now, here's the kicker. Once you're tweaked like that, helplessly and completely, it's impossible to tweak back. Especially if you try to use the same technique. You're done. Toast.

Among the myriad problems you have, a principal one is a lack of credibility. Several times you've been asked to provide a callsign, and you always whimper something about "not required here," but you miss the point. In order to discuss amateur radio, one has to have some amateur radio bona fides. RD, PT, and RG have no bona fides, thus no credibility. Perhaps that's why you resort to name calling, because you have nothing credible to contribute.

> ...and he will answer this post.

Of course I will. And every other post to which I elect to respond. I respond based on content when I feel that the post has content worthy of my time and expertise. Or in your case, when you need some more tweaking.

The big difference here is I have something to offer the discussion, such as cogent analysis, incisive reasoning, professional rendering of the English language, and un-emotional, civil presentation of all points.

You fail on every count. All you can offer is school boy name calling in wretched English. Review your posts. They are full of invective and slurs; words and phrases such as:

"incompetant (sic)" on 14 July,
"reptilian creep," horses (sic) ass," "scardy (sic)cat. chicken shit," "screwball," "chicken shit coward" all in 1 post on 13 July;

"reptile," in another 13 July post;
"big bannana (sic) nose like yours" in yet another 13 July post;
"a little dweeb" in a (ho-hum) 13 July post;
"CRUDE WINDBAG ASS HOLE" in a (you guessed it) 13 July post;
"banana nosed fool" in a 12 July post;
"half baboon,half chink wife of your (sic)" on 30 June,
"your little pointed bannana nose brainless head" also on 30 June;
"IRIS the Gook" on 25 June;
"that schmuck" on 17 June...

Well, the list of your hateful spew goes on and on. Some of that is the most vicious, offensive, uncontrolled, misanthropic garbage I've ever seen. Even if you didn't mean it, you should be ashamed.

Perhaps if you had a ham license you could develop the discipline to learn when you are outgunned and how to use the language effectively. I doubt that would help your bigotry. But even ignorant anger can be controlled.

> ...tell him to stop that babbel, babbel.

You see? It's "babble." You do yourself a disservice by butchering our language when you are trying to make a point. Perhaps you were thinking of the biblical place from which "babble" derives, but you even misspelled that, as it's "Babel."

> Whats that?

"What's" is a contraction, and requires an apostrophe for the missing letter(s). That should be "what's that?"

Oh, Polly, Polly, Polly. We send you to school, buy you books, and all you do is eat the covers off of them.

Your posts really would be more convincing if you worked on your style and content. But really, all they are now is drivel. swl002's posts are more enlightening, and she's a one-trick pony.

Why don't you try to make one simple post with all spelling and grammar error free? It would help if it actually had some content, like trying to keep any vicious bigotry out of it, but, as that would be asking a lot, we'll settle for complete sentences with nouns, verbs, and subjects, and with accurate spelling. I'll be happy to grade it for you. As you see, I am quite good at it.

I too have been disappointed in Kenwoods repair.. I sent off my TS-850 with a problem which they repaired. But in doing so, another problem surfaced, which, I have no proof was caused by what they did but rather than notify me or fix the new problem, they sent it back to me saying that they fixed the original problem but would not work on it an further because there were two mods in the radio. This didn't seem to be related to the new problem and wasn't mentioned when they fixed the original problem.

I finally got fed up enough to send the radio to International Radio in Florida, who did a great job fixing the entire radio at a reasonable price. The only problem they had was getting parts from Kenwood, who after being asked to send parts by air, shipped them ground.

There may not be many choices out there for repairing radios but I for one will not deal with Kenwood again for any repair, which I'm sure is exactly what they want. They want to sell new radios, not repair old ones... That is why they outsource their repairs.

Of all the newsgroups (thousands) and all the posters to them (hundreds of thousands) what do think the odds are that 3 DIFFERENT people would post to both r.r.a.m. AND alt.music.harmonica?

Now factor in the posts all coming from the same ISP, and what do you think?

If one were trying to purport a different identity (why? is my question), I would think one would try to be careful of one's paper trail.

*Preface: This is not intended to be offensive, just factual.

Yes, a couple thoughts. One, if $198 was unreasonable then you should have specifically stated in your return that you wanted no work done without a written estimate or maximum charge, "costly" is a relative term. Two, your a radio amateur if it was only a matter of two diodes you should have spent the time to find it yourself or found someone with a good technical background to show you how to troubleshoot. This may sound a bit condescending, but there is more to amateur radio than keying the mic. Three, if you figure the cost of a good technician he probably spent an hour or more troubleshooting, repairing, and documenting your problem. It's a matter of time, not difficulty that your charged for. When I was a tech at Dentron Radio (soooo many moons ago) we would routinely get a Clipperton L or MLA amp in with a few blown diodes in the power supply. Anyone with a simple ohm meter could have found the problem, replaced the diodes, and put it back together. The boards (usually charred with conductive burns) needed to be removed from the amp, scrubbed clean, parts replaced, reassembled and tested this was NOT at 30 min job. The cost for such a job could be $125 or more, and if they blew capacitors in the process h even more. This was twenty years ago.

On the other hand, it's not uncommon to make a little 'extra' on the easy jobs, this usually compensates a bit for jobs that are under warranty and end up being more costly than expected. Bottom line, take the time to learn a bit more about what's going on inside that radio, you'll enjoy it so much more and when something simple goes wrong you wont find yourself spending big bucks on a problem you could have more than likely fixed yourself. While you may have been charged a bit more than you like, I'm not sure I'd consider it abuse. Remember, automated assembly makes for low cost rigs, probably 95% of the components in that rig were never touched by human hands but rather IC inserstion equipment and wave soldering machines. There is nothing automated about repair work, don't equate the cost of the radio to what you pay in repair charges they are completly separate.

Isn't that Herb Schoenbohm, KV4FZ you are talking about? I understand he is having trouble getting his license renewed, due to some misuse of the HF bands, and a fraud conviction for long distance phone 'phreaking.

What amazes me about this is that I was just reading today in "Morse Code: The Essential Language" an account of KV4FZ receiving a message in CW from a sinking cruise ship near St. Croix, and being responsible for alerting the Coast Guard, bringing aid, and saving lives. Is this the same KV4FZ? Sure looks like it, as they both have the same QTH. If so, I won't argue that a past valiant deed gives you immunity from prosecution or means you can later break all the rules you like, but it seems incongruous that someone who once acted so heroically, such a classic ham fairy-tale of the glory of ham radio, that that same person might later become a scam artist and trampler of Part 97.

Paul,
Charging $50-$60 an hour to repair a radio is a bargain in 1999 dollars. If I needed a radio repaired
I would expect the technician to spend 2, 4 and maybe 8 hours to complete and test the repair. A repair bill of $100, $200 and even $400 is reasonable in 1999. In 1999 most people don't get TV's or Clock Radio's repaired because the repair/labor charges would be more than the cost of the TV or Radio. The cost to repair a radio is based on time and labor rates not the cost of the radio. Repairing a Ham Radio in 1999 is very expensive when you take into account the actual cost of the radio when it was new. Up front a Ham needs to tell Kenwood, Yaesu, Icom, Ten-Tec what they are willing to pay to get a radio repaired. Too me $198 to repair a Kenwood radio is reasonable.

Personally, I have dealt with Yaesu and they have been fantastic. I have asked technical questions on the phone and they took the time to answer my questions. A year ago my FT-990 had no readings on the meter and my transmitting power was 10 watts. I trouble shot the radio and ordered some transistors and diodes from Yaesu. They promptly sent out the parts at a charge of $0.00 even though my warranty had expired 5 years ago. I got my transmitter back to 100 watts but still had a minor problem with my meter circuit. I then sent a detailed e-mail to Yaesu explaining my troubleshooting results and they took the time to analyze my results and offered some additional hints. The end result is I got my meter circuit back working correctly.

I have no personal experiences with Kenwood, Icom, or Ten-Tec but over the years Yaesu has gone out of their way to provide free and excellent technical support to me.

I heard Volz invade the Liberty Net too. The net was orderly and civil until KK7HO started his campaign of malicious jamming last Saturday night.

In addition to his "hiding behind his daughter's skirt" Volz said that he was "being dragged" back onto 3.950. So his jamming is/was justified. I haven't seen the area of part 97 that addresses KK7HOs 'justified jamming'.

Now he threatens to keep posting his messages here because he is being "dragged back" into the newsgroup.

But it's just another KK7HO lie.

If you check the dates of his posts here, you can see that as soon as he was done jamming the Liberty Net last Saturday night, he got on the newsgroups and posted several messages about the Liberty Net and it's participants.

How is this "dragging" him back onto the newsgroups?
Please enlighten us, Tim.

Thanks for digging the specs out for the RG174, didn't realize it would handle 1100 volts!!!

I wounder what ever happened to that rx-preamp with t/r swiohing I reparied.... the RG174 was turned in to a stiff black mess looking almost as if it had caught fire. One thing for sure it was not exposed to 24 kW hi hi. Likely a combination of power (kW) and high SWR.

Still, I try to grab teflon cable at flea-markets as I feel much more secure when soldering connerctors. Maybe I do something wrong but the insulation seems to melt awfully eaisy on the 174....

Back to the issue of how to get the cable trough, I guess the simplest way would be use a few inches of speaker cable. The jump in impedance would problably not be big enough to be noticed!

BTW, some years ago I saw an ad from the local ham-shop, promoting something called NINJA-Cable, a.k.a. flat coax. Especially developed for passing thru window frames. Price was horrendous so I guess the dropped the product!

Cheers

After a slightly bumpy start the H.F. Transceiver survey is off and running. A few individuals discovered the program was in test mode and voted for their favorite rigs several times. This has been corrected and graphics represent the survey accurately.

Some asked why transceivers of the 80's and past were not included. The reason: We wanted to get a better feel for how the market has led us in the 90's and perhaps gleam a little into the future.

If you have not voted on your favorite H.F. rig, feel free to do so. This survey will run through July. Also, check out the HR Showcase site. We think you will find some interesting links and original content as well.

OK, after consultation with some very helpful folks out there, I've determined that I need channel elements for the exciter and receiver, plus a service manual if there's one out there.

I think I'll need 443.975 for the RX and 448.975 for the exciter (have to check with a coordinator for the freq I'll eventually be on, but for now I'm using a locally unoccupied pair at low power..) I'll also need instructions for retuning the RF stages, hence a manual, since it's currently peaked up for the 451/456 band. If I can get a good kerchunk out of it, I'll be on my way .. ;-)

Since plaintruth, aka rilegotcha, aka realdeal never answered my previous post, maybe someone else can.

Is there any truth to the rumor that George Ashley, W4FQF, and alias Polly the Parrot, has been asked by the FCC to explain some recordings made of him QRMing and playing his harmonica on 20 and 75 meters last fall? I heard this on the air a couple of weeks ago, but don't know if it's true or not. It certainly is possible, even likely, that this is the case. It sure would explain why he is suddenly so active on this forum, since he would be unable to continue spewing his verbal fecal matter over the airwaves if he had been contacted by the authorities.

Anyone know the real deal?

That's at least partially true, though the earliest adopters of vacuum tube technology were the long distance telephone companies. Crowding amateurs into increasingly smaller slices of HF also forced the development of highly selective receivers. Prior to WWII, hams had better receivers than most commercial and military users. In fact, some ham designs were adopted whole cloth for military use when hostilities broke out.

Hams were also hired by the manufacturers of military gear to help them upgrade their designs. Not all hams were technically astute of course, but a few whose designs had been widely copied and proved out in practice by other amateurs were, enough to make a difference that has been documented in the literature.

(Historically, QST was a valuable resource for propagating and popularizing such concepts. QST, and the Handbook, were once widely found on engineer's desks, even if the engineers weren't hams themselves. With the de-emphasis on technology of the QST editorial direction in recent years (shoving technical articles off into the low circulation QEX), and with the heavy emphasis on techniques which can most charitably be termed quaint in today's world, that seems to have changed.)

After the war, crowding on the HF bands, brought on to a considerable extent by the elimination of spectrum allocations based on Morse code speed, also forced hams to be early adopters of SSB to replace AM. Hams didn't invent SSB, but they pioneered or first proved in large scale practice much of the technology which later found commercial and military application.

A major benefit of amateur radio is that it has served as a large scale self-funded and self-directed beta test laboratory for radio techniques. Much of that was driven by perceived congestion on what amateurs perceived as their most desirable bands. So packing more and more hams on those bands has historically been a technology driver which has benefitted the communications industry and all of its users. When that spur has been eased by regulatory fiat, technical advances have often stagnated. (The worst enemy of better is good enough.)

In another direction, during the late 70s and early 80s, it was the work of hams primarily which demonstrated the power of packet switched digital wireless communications. Hams didn't invent it, ARPA funded the initial work, and they haven't pursued it to the levels commercial and military users have today, but they were an important factor in first proving out the concepts in every day practice. As with WWII receiver technology, during Desert Storm, amateur proven TNCs were adopted whole cloth by the military to carry important military logistics communications in the theater of operations.

Once they saw the value of the techniques, the military pushed their vendors to far surpass the amateur efforts of course. But without that initial amateur field testing, it isn't very likely that wireless digital would be as dominant as it is today. This synergy between amateurs and the military is one with a long history. We share spectrum with them, face some of the same communications challenges, and we have adopted each other's techniques back and forth over the years.

Also in the 80s and early 90s, amateurs developed the litesat concept of LEO store and forward satellites which has spawned an entire industry which is becoming more and more important to telecommunications. Hams didn't invent satellite communications, of course, but they showed that it could be used in ways industry hadn't considered before. That's a pattern we see repeated again and again throughout the history of amateur radio.

While hams don't invent much really new technology, they can serve as a valuable test bed for it. No corporation can afford such a large field test capability as is offered for free by amateurs. It isn't yet feasible to simulate in the lab the conditions we find in real life every day on the HF amateur bands. Amateurs also find novel uses for technology. They don't have to meet rigid development schedules or budget targets, so they are free to try things industry wouldn't even consider because the results would be too uncertain to meet their constraints. This is an under-appreciated benefit of amateur radio.

I hear people say that amateurs can't develop new technology today, that ICs and surface mount techniques have rendered such work the province of only the great industrial corporations. But that misses the forest for the trees. Hams have never been in the forefront of device physics. Where hams have shined is in taking a new device or idea and running with it, seeing what applications they can find for it. VLSI has been an enormously enabling technology for amateurs. It has allowed us to do things we would never have even considered doing before.

The rapid approach of the modular software radio offers the promise of turning exploration of new radio techniques into a cottage industry, ideally suited to the technically curious amateur working on his kitchen table. The freedom from budget and schedule pressures we have allows us to try things the corporate drone in his cubicle wouldn't dare attempt. That sort of thinking outside of the box is the source of many novel applications of technology.

New concepts generally aren't found in well explored territory. We have to be willing to go out to the edges of the conceptual map to find them. To do that, the cost of failure has to be low because the path is not tried and true. The country marked, "Here there be Tygers" is an area with both opportunities for great rewards and great failures. For the amateur whose family doesn't depend on the results of his amateur activities to survive, the cost of failure is low. So we can prowl those edges in ways the corporate drone in his cubicle cannot. Of course if we're timid, and only do things the way grandpa did them, we won't find much that is new or revolutionary.

Based on the number of hits, it looks as if the original "TOO MANY GOYISHE HAMS HERE" made a hit. 19 responding at last count. And the e-mails too have been pouring in. For example, my Moselm friend Mustafa Kahleel wrote to say that these goyim were infidels. I agree my wise brother. For the unenlightened, Jews and Moslems are half brothers, We share the same father but Ishmael the Arab was born of Hagar while we Jews came from Sarah and Abraham. We both believe in the Almighty, not in Jesus. The Arabs call Him Allah while we call Him Jehovah. You know-that's the guy who planted a seed in Miriam whom the goyim call Mary and out came baby Jesus while Miriam's husband stood around and asked, "What the hell's going on here?" Do you blame the poor dope? I mean like that's a whopping shock for a nice Jewish boy to absorb. I also got an e from Sandkrit Jumbahwahlat, a Buddhist. I ignored the guy saying that I don't buy believing in a statue of a a guy with a fat belly. Some Hindu guy wrote from a city called Peshawar telling me that he's thinking of converting to Juadaism because he's sick of walking amid cows. I told him not to milk the idea and to do it right away. I simply don't know we hams in the UDSA don't make a concerted effort at trying to reconcile warring factions all over the world. Instead of certain hams getting on with one intention i.e to convert the Jews to Christianity by using the dumbest logic conceivable, why not direct transmissions to lets say Northern Ireland in order to help keep the peace? Or how about beaming to the Tootsies and Hutus in Central Africa to teach them that God doesn't like killing each other although I must admit, for being the Main Main, He's awfully quiet on the subject. When was the last time any of you heard God say anything? Now I'm not talking about these phony creeps like Brother Stair who sits down every morning for ham and eggs with Jesus and others who have the chutzpah to get on the air to proclaim that Jesus directed them into stealing money from gullible parishioners. After all, how can anyone throw money changers out of the temple one minute and then encourage dirtbags to steal in his name? By the way all the moneychangers went to Las Vegas

The Prophet Isaiah wrote:

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?
For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.
He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.
Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.
But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.
All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.
He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.
He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken.
And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death;
because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.
Yet it pleased the LORD to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.
Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death: and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.

Well, let's review; aside from the vernacular form of "sonovabitch," I see accurate structure, good punctuation, impeccable spelling. That puts him in the 99th percentile here at r.r.a.m.

This is a two forked thread. When we're dealing with form I'm happy to defend the good and skewer the bad. If you want to talk content, I need defend no one's but mine.

I didn't say all his writing was satirical. This post and the other may not be. But if you have a problem with his message, I'm not the one you should be talking to.

As I said before, his writing is effective, as it caused you to react. I told N0VFP before that AF2Y was a "hot button" for him, and apparently he is for you, too. You don't seem to be able to help yourself. Much like Polly, who laps at my every offering.

Watch Polly lunge after this tidbit. And by doing so, he will confirm to one and all that he is indeed Polly. The cloak of anonymity is gone.

Geez, that was fun seeing him go for the crosspost bait.

I listen to 14313 a lot. Have not heard polly much lately. On the other hand, you are not on there much either. What happened? You used to be there every morning interfering with K3QAM and others.
Did Riley Hollingsworth scare you? Did he write you a letter? If not, why did you quit the frequency? I have heard Polly , and he has cleaned not do. He is paying for that now. You could be next.

HERE WE GO AGAIN FOLKS. It seems as though these lids never tire of LYING. Make -Up LIES, Spin Doctor the truth, do what ever you can to tear at someones character when they are speaking the truth about YOU. That's your style all right.
The Fact REMAINS that The "SO Called" LIBERTYNET IS A LISTED HATE GROUP.
Check out
http://www.bcpl.lib.md.us/~rfrankli/hatedir.htm
You see it listed there. NOW as for what occured that they are claim is porno, WHICH IS ANOTHER DAMN LIE.
I recieved from some a e-mail that spoke of Budwieser having a campaign to support homos. Well being against that sort of thing I saved it and placed it in another e-mail program I have. Then I recieved a letter from ONE individual that objected. I told him what I thought had happened and NOW THEY LIE and SPIN the DEFAME.
Typical SHIT from the "So Called" libertynet. I said that I wouldn't post about them if they stopped. We NOW SEE theat they have no intention of doing so. What a bunch of misfits. Listed as a HATE GROUP, Racist, white supremist, separatists, some very active in organaizations such as the KKK, The national alliance and others, and they want to cast some defamatory remarks my way.
All of MY Statements can be checked out and verified by anyone.
Also read this. It was from a ham who had a run in with one of these libertynets

Yeah, one of those "Liberty Net" guys used to live in my area. I just happened to mention that this guy and his buddies were morons in the course of a conversation on Packet, and the next thing I know, this guy was calling my house making threats, and in generall being a nuisance.
Then his courageous "Liberty Net" buddies chipped in, sending me threatening mail and talking nasty about my teenage daughter. She got phone calls too, but just a few.

A few weeks later, my "Liberty Net" buddy was found all pumped full of nine-millimeter rounds. In a dark, lonely place at the motel he worked at, he ran his mouth one too many times. There was no help for him then.

They put the kid who sent my "Liberty Net" buddy to his reward in jail. I talked to the D.A., explaining that "Liberty Net" was human garbage, and that if it hadn't been the kid, it could just as easily been me. Still, "Liberty Net's" gun was still in it's holster when he bit the big one, so the forms and conventions had to be observed. The civic-minded teenager had to go to jail.

The moral: That's what a "throw down" is for.

Throw Down: Cheap pistol carried by Police officers for the express purpose of "throwing down" on the ground next to a police shooting victim who happened to be unarmed. - That way no cops have to put up with two weeks suspension with pay, additional paperwork, ect, for a simple murder.

I would have taken the time to unholster "Liberty Net"s" gun, and throw it down in front of him. Kids these days just don't seem to have any respect for the traditions which hold together this great nation, not understanding the fact that traditions like the "throw-down" are here to grease the wheels of society, and make everything go a lot smoother for everyone. It's a travesy that his young life is being wasted in prison, after risking that life to do the world a favor.

Remember: The "kid" is not in jail because he capped a scumbag... He's there because he failed to observe the forms and conventions of polite society, and did not "throw down" a good reason for the D.A. to let him go free.

I think there's a lesson there for us all.

Below is W1WCR's comments about ?
Wonder where the copy of his "reply" to Riley's "Certified" letter is? I notive that it's missing? JUST MORE SOUR GRAPES

W1WCR Comments about the Hollingsworth Letters

As net control operator of the "Liberty Net", which meets Saturday evenings at 10 PM ET on or near 3950 kHz, I and those I chat with have been subjected to malicious jamming for at least seven years. This jamming is prevalent because of a nearly total lack of enforcement of the Rules and Regulations by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). My initial complaints about jamming, sent to the FCC by registered mail and by telephone to the Watch Office, date back to 1994. The Watch Office refused action based, they said, on a policy of "self policing", an undefined policy under which they referred all amateurs with complaints to the ARRL. The ARRL, when approached, claimed they had no authority to take action. Thus it was that the jammers ran wild while the victims were ping-ponged between the FCC and the ARRL. We were treated to years of chaos, jamming and slander on the h-f bands.

In September, 1998 the FCC was re-organized to attack the jamming problem which had grown to colossal proportions. Mr. Riley Hollingsworth was placed in charge of the CIB. Much acclaim heralded his arrival because it was seen as a reversal of the longstanding and much lamented FCC policy of non-enforcement on the Amateur bands. Finally relief from the disastrous chaos was seen as a possibility. Hundreds of jamming complaints were consequently submitted to Hollingsworth and the CIB. Hollingsworth spoke before the Dayton Hamvention and received wild acclaim from an enthusiastic audience. Chilling statements were made proclaiming the ability of the FCC's vaunted computerized direction finding system which had a legendary ability to locate a jammer in milliseconds to within a few hundred feet.

In less than two months the "Re-organization" will celebrate its Anniversary. I find it impossible to celebrate, however, because the FCC has yet to apprehend and punish a single jammer within my own operating experience in spite of the submission of dozens and dozens of jamming complaints week after week, month after month. Hollingsworth claims in his letters (to which these comments are referenced) that "The Commission cannot tolerate deliberate jamming....." This claim is, from my own actual operating experience since the inception of "re-organization", the most misleading and deceptive of the false claims in these letters. Over the past ten-and-a-half months I and others have experienced repeated, multi-source jamming consisting of white noise, music, monologue, distorted voice, filthy language, slander and rebroadcast of FM stations. Night after night the white noise jammer lurks, waiting to pick off the weaker signals so that they can't be copied. The vaunted monitoring stations can't seem to find an elephant in a tea-cup. The general character of the jamming has now shifted almost, but not entirely, to anonymous white noise and music operations. The word is out in jammer circles to use white noise because it is harder to track down.

As if this weren't bad enough, Hollingsworth alleges that I started a net "on top of an existing communication" between un-named stations as monitored by an un-named monitor. I believe these charges to be totally without merit, since the persons in the existing communication "handed" the frequency over to me at the start of the 1 May net. Mr. Hollingsworth himself (as K4ZDH) checked onto the Liberty Net that evening and was promptly jammed and cursed by several hyper-active jammers. At that point Hollingsworth shrank away from the contact and I received the first of his letters a week later. I would like to remind Mr. Hollingsworth that this constituted willful and malicious jamming which makes his response surreal and bizarre.

As for his instructions about "broadcasting", if it exists why not crack down on it and stop it ?

Finally, I must indicate that the URL http://www.angelfire.com/ky/libertynet is not a website owned, controlled or operated by myself. To the best of my belief it is not owned by a person who has checked into the Liberty Net. Hollingsworth should have checked the owner out before making another preposterous claim. Hollingsworth's claim that a website can appropriate Amateur radio frequencies is truly a new break-through in innovative radio law, as is the concept that he can micro-manage private websites on the Internet.

I believe I need a public apology from Riley Hollingsworth.

Victor A. Misek
W1WCR

Also A copy of Vic's reply to Riley's certified letter will be put here soon if possible.

QUOGUE, N.Y. (AP) - Rep. Michael Forbes, a New Yorker with a strong independent streak, said today he is bolting the Republican party to join a more open Democratic Party. The Republican Party ``has become an angry, narrow-minded, intolerant and uncaring majority, incapable of governing at all, much less from the center, and tone-deaf to the concerns of a vast majority of Americans,'' he said in announcing his decision. Forbes, 47, defeated a Democrat in 1994. He held a seat on the Appropriations Committee, which has enormous influence over federal spending

IT's just more LIES Doc. They do that consistantly when the truth about them comes out they attack the character of the individual. Continuing along this line and especially concerning my daughter will land ther ass in court.
I have explained truthfully what I believe happened, the letter was in no way porno, but the LYING son of a Bitches want to keep it up.
the letter was sent to me by another ham, It was about some campaign that budwieser ghad supporting homos, being against that, I saved the letter in another e-mail program I had because it had a 1-800 number to call to "vote" for or "Against" this campaign. The e-mail program I saved it in has a mass mail feature. I am not positive but I believe that is what happened because it grabbed every e-mail address that I had - regardless of where the address was a it got sent.Again these Lying MF'rs take that to the limits of their imagination and come up with all sorts of LIES. I recieved one complaint and appologized - and I had not even known that it was sent out until then. There was absolutley nothing in it one would come close to classifying Porno. Well they would because they want to defame and slander me.

I said "your" SSN -- no reference to a weapon's SSN was made.

Mine (a 60s edition) forbids use of the card for identification purposes

No one asks to see the card, they only ask for the number. Surely you can understand the difference between the two.

You forgot to append an "IMO" again, for it's obvious you're guessing.
You apparently don't know state law for all such states which utilize SSNs on DLs.

Since the Liberty Net takes place on amateur radio, his post is just as relevant as an announcement of a television news item or newspaper article about field day or traffic nets would be -- that is, quite relevant indeed.

Would you and your friends please start abiding by this NG's charter?
I post the charter/FAQ monthly. Take the time to read and follow its recommendations so that this NG can go back to being an informative source of interesting amateur-related topics.

It would be quite easy for you to create an "alt" NG (many already exist) in which you and your "lively group" can carry on the back-and-forth bickering you all bring to here. You (plural) have essentially ruined the usefulness of this NG.

Well if you're giving away those nifty satellite to base/base to satelite transmittes NASA uses I'll happily take one... heck, I'll even give you the $10 I was planning on spending on a CW key when I got around to learning morse :)

I agree with you, however. The era in which morse was state of the art has passed. In modern times we've got packet, SSTV, fax, you name it. The thrill of morse, I believe, is pretty similar to the thrill of camping, or the thrill of riding in a 1930's clunker... it's not a bad thing, in fact it can be quite fun, but just because people enjoy it shouldn't mean that everyone has to enjoy it... radio societies should look into removing morse as a requirement from their license tests and maybe offering it as a separate course on the side for those interested.

I just sent a Kenwood 941 tribander to Kenwood for repair and got it back with two replaced diodes and a bill for $198,00. The two meter section was cutting back and actuating the protection circuit. I didn't even receive any explanation of what was done and had asked them to contact me if the repair would be costly, they couldn't even do this. I guess their customers are accepting this kind of treatment and I think this is very sad.. I am able to afford to pay this but I am sure not all hams can. You would never spring for a Kenwood transceiver and they know it .
Your cheapness is well known by now, therefore they will not waste time and money on a elcheapo like you. Why answer your request? You want a

The truth is out; mf_luder leads a secret life as donkboy99.

Look at the headers if you don't believe it. Despite all previous accusations of donkboy99 being a Mr. Porkbutt, we are the same.

Note we both run LINUX on a i 686 ! Mr. Porkbutt uses the AOL proxy and AOL software.

God it's fun confusing you people, heh heh.

Congratulations. You are probably the only dumb goy on this board who isn't. Did you say SATIRE? These dummies never heard of it. They are humourless dreck who are unread, unwashed and uneducated. You, on the other hand,know your onions and with your brains and personality, you should consider leaving the Jesus bunch in favor of the Shylocks. You know what these dummies don't know? The Jews have the copyright on the New Testament! That's right. $7 out of every sale of the N.T. goes to Moishe Pippick who is the legitimate publisher. The monies are used to fund Yeshivas here and abroad and to buy baseball bats for the Hasidim in Bed Sty, Brooklyn to fend off white and black and latino marauders. Some funds are also used to buy paint spray cans used in anti-Christian graffiti directed by Mordecai Sheyer of the Long Island Lubavitichers. He heads the company called Avotuchus which actually is way behind times. You sir are a pleasure to know and in due time I'd like to have communion with you. Tell me, do they ever put jelly on the cookie and instead of wine, try a bissell seltzer. You can pray and greptz at the same time. I'm going to shul tomorrow morning for Sabbath services. The rabbi's sermon will be on, "I Can Get it for You Wholesale." Lastly I'd like to tell you why Jews have big noses. Because the air is free.

Looks like we know who the 12 year old is. Bwahahaha.

Talk about obsessed. Take a look at how many rg responses in this thread alone. Oh, well, time for another one. And just remember, it only works in one direction. Your attempts at reversing the technique are the Usenet equivalent of "oh, yeah?"

I'll give you a hint; maybe this will help. When you tried to use the same technique I used, you lost. When you tried a variation of the 3 word tickler that I used, you lost. When you repeated back the words and phrases I used, you lost. When you started answering all my posts, you lost. When you started concentrating on me and quit badgering other users, they won, and you lost.

This is so easy. We have to get you on BGO's list. You should shoot right to the top.

Tick, tick, tick.

P.S. Your spelling and grammar are getting much better. Practice makes perfect. Your obsession gives you plenty of opportunity. Of course the spew content has dropped off considerably. But I'll let the other readers thank me for that.

This message describes the rec.radio.amateur.*, rec.radio.cb, rec.radio.info, and rec.radio.swap newsgroups, as well as their Internet mailing list counterparts and complements. It is intended to serve as a guide for the new reader on what to find where. Questions and comments may be directed to Jeffrey Herman, KH6O, jeffreyh@hawaii.edu, or Paul Schleck, K3FU, pschleck@novia.net.

This message was last changed on 14 March, 1998.

History

Way back when, before there was a Usenet, the Internet hosted a mailing list for hams, called (appropriately enough) INFO-HAMS. Ham radio discussions were held on the mailing list, and sent to the mailboxes of those who had signed up for it. When the Usenet software was created, and net news as we now know it was developed, a newsgroup was created for hams: net.ham-radio. The mailing list and the newsgroup were gatewayed together, eventually.

Over the years, as the net grew, the volume of discussion became progressively higher. First one by one, and then as part of two reorganizations, what was once one group became many. In the process, developments elsewhere on the net were reflected in the groups as they were created, most notably the change to place all of the ham radio groups in one hierarchy.

The collection of newsgroups continues to grow as more people join the net, and as more topics of discussion gain volume, I expect to see more groups be created as well. This follows what is happening on the rest of the net.

Nearly all of the radio newsgroups have corresponding mailing lists, the notable exception being rec.radio.swap. There are also a few mailing lists that don't have newsgroups.

The Current Groups

It's important to post messages to the group that's appropriate for them, and not to the groups that aren't. The whole idea of having different newsgroups is so that folks who aren't interested in, say, homebrewing, don't have to wade through messages about homebrewing on the way to read about Field Day. Posting appropriately is just good etiquette.

The rec.radio.amateur.misc group is the catchall. It is what rec.ham-radio was renamed to during the first major reorganization. Any message that's not more appropriate in one of the other groups belongs here, from contesting to DX to ragchewing on VHF to information on becoming a ham.

The group rec.radio.amateur.digital.misc is for discussions related to (surprise!) digital amateur radio. This doesn't have to be the common two-meter AX.25 variety of packet radio, either; some of the most knowledgeable folks in radio digital communications can be found here, and anything in the general area is welcome. The name was changed to emphasize this, and to encourage discussion not only of other text-based digital modes, such as AMTOR, RTTY, and Clover, but things like digital voice and video as well. The former group, rec.radio.amateur.packet, was removed on September 21st, 1993. It is obsolete, and you should use .digital.misc instead (or the appropriate new mailing list, mentioned below). The group has .misc as part of the name to allow further specialization if the users wish it, such as .digital.tcp-ip.

The swap group is rec.radio.swap. This recognizes a fact that became evident shortly after the original group was formed: Hams don't just swap ham radio gear, and other folks besides hams swap ham equipment. If you have radio equipment, or test gear, or computer stuff that hams would be interested in, here's the place. Equipment wanted postings belong here too. Discussions about the equipment generally don't; if you wish to discuss a particular posting with the buyer, email is a much better way to do it, and the other groups, especially .equipment and .homebrew, are the place for public discussions. There is now a regular posting with information on how to go about buying and selling items in rec.radio.swap; please refer to it before you post there. To answer a frequently asked question: No, there is no mailing list that goes along with this group. If you can't read Usenet news directly, you're out of luck.

The group rec.radio.amateur.policy was created as a place for all the discussions that seem to drag on interminably about the many rules, regulations, legalities, and policies that surround amateur radio, both existing and proposed. Recent changes to the Amateur Radio Rules (FCC Part 97) have finally laid to rest the Great Usenet Pizza Autopatch Debate - it's now legal to order a pizza on the autopatch, if you're not in the pizza business - as well as complaints about now-preempted local scanner laws hostile to amateurs, but plenty of discussion about what a bunch of rotten no-goodniks the local frequency coordinating body is, as well as the neverending no-code debate, may still be found here.

The group rec.radio.cb is the place for all discussion about the Citizens' Band radio service. Such discussions have been very inflammatory in rec.ham-radio in the past; please do not cross-post to both rec.radio.cb and rec.radio.amateur.* unless the topic is genuinely of interest to both hams and CBers - and very few topics are.

The rec.radio.info group is just what its name implies: it's the place where informational messages from across rec.radio.* may be found, regardless of where else they're posted. As of this writing, information posted to the group includes Cary Oler's daily solar progagation bulletins, ARRL bulletins, the Frequently Asked Questions files for the various groups, and radio modification instructions. This group is moderated, so you cannot post to it directly; if you try, even if your message is crossposted to one of the other groups, your message will be mailed to the moderator, who is currently David Dodell, WB7TPY. The email address for submissions to the group is rec.radio.info-moderator@primenet.com. Inquires and other adminis-trivia should be directed to rec.radio.info-request@primenet.com. For more information about rec.radio.info, consult the introduction and posting guidelines that are regularly posted to that newsgroup.

The groups r.r.amateur.antenna, .boatanchors, .dx, .equipment, .homebrew, and .space are for more specialized areas of ham radio: discussions about antennas, the older tube based amateur, military, and commercial gear, commercially-made equipment, homebrewing, and amateur radio space operations. The .equipment group is not the place for buying or selling equipment; that's what rec.radio.swap is for. Similarly, the .space group is specifically about amateur radio in space, such as the OSCAR program and SAREX, the Shuttle Amateur Radio EXperiment; other groups cover other aspects of satellites and space. Homebrewing isn't about making your own alcoholic beverages at home (that's rec.crafts.brewing), but rather construction of radio and electronic equipment by the amateur experimenter. The .dx group is devoted to long distance amateur communications. Each of these subgroups has its own charter and FAQ; please refer to the archives to find these documents.

Except for rec.radio.swap and rec.radio.cb, all of these newsgroups are available by Internet electronic mail in digest format; send a mail message containing "help" on a line by itself to listserv@ucsd.edu for instructions on how to use the mail server.

All of the groups can be posted to by electronic mail, though, by using a gateway at the University of Texas at Austin. To post a message this way, change the name of the group you wish to post to by replacing all of the '.'s with '-'s - for example, rec.radio.swap becomes rec-radio-swap - and send to that name@cs.utexas.edu (rec-radio-swap@cs.utexas.edu, for example). You may crosspost by including multiple addresses as Cc: entries (but see below). This gateway's continued availability is at the pleasure of the admins at UT-Austin, and is subject to going away at any time - and especially if forgeries and other net.abuses become a problem. You have been warned.

Mailing Lists

In addition to the mailing lists that mirror the Usenet newsgroups, there also are a few that stand alone. These cover specific areas of ham radio, and discussion is focused on just those areas. PLEASE BE SURE TO SAVE THE WELCOME MESSAGE YOU RECEIVE AFTER SUBSCRIBING -- IT WILL CONTAIN IMPORTANT INFO REGARDING UNSUBSCRIBING!

The cq-contest mailing list is for discussions of contesting in ham radio. To join, send an email to cq-contesting-request@contesting.com.

The DX mailing list covers the finer points of DXing. This one is also joined by mailing "subscribe" on a line by itself, this time to dx-request@unbc.edu.

There's also a VHF mailing list, for VHF operators of the weak signal persuasion. You can join this one be sending "subscribe vhf" on a line by itself to vhf-request@w6yx.stanford.edu.

The QRP-L list is devoted to building and operating gear at low-power outputs. To subscribe, send an email to listproc@lehigh.edu and only write: subscribe qrp-l Your Name.

The TopBand e-list is devoted to all areas of operation on 160m. To subscribe, send an email to majordomo@contesting.com and only write: subscribe topband and follow the instructions you'll be sent.
This site, contesting.com, also hosts a couple dozen other ham-related e-lists. Use the above address, and only write: lists to get the entire index.

The Boatanchors e-list is devoted to the older tube-based ham, military, and commercial communications gear. To subscribe, send an email to: listserv@listserv.tempe.gov and only write: subscribe boatanchors

For homebuilding transmitters and receivers using tube technology, there is the Glowbugs e-list; send an email to: majordomo@piobaire.mines.uidaho.edu and only write: subscribe glowbugs <your@address.here>

The VHF DX discussion list can be accessed by sending an email to: majordomo@blacksheep.org and only writing: subscribe VHF-DX-discuss.

We now have a list devoted to amateur radio history. To subscribe, send an email to: ham-radio-history-subscribe@egroups.com - leave the body of the message blank.

Qth.net hosts over 100 ham-related e-lists, including lists devoted to each state, manufacturer, mode, band - too many to state here. Send an email to majordomo@qth.net and only write: lists to get the complete index.

For one of the most complete indexes of email lists, see the excellent web site http://pw2.netcom.com/~ac6v/pageae.html

Please do NOT send subscription requests to the mailing lists themselves; that doesn't work very often, and is very annoying to those on the list. Also, please keep your electronic mail address current with any mailing lists you subscribe to, as dealing with returned email is a nuisance for the person maintaining the mailing list.

A Few Words on Crossposting

Please do not crosspost messages to two or more groups unless there is genuine interest in both groups in the topic being discussed, and when you do, please include a header line of the form "Followup-To: group.name" in your article's headers (before the first blank line). This will cause followups to your article to go to the group listed in the Followup-To: line. If you wish to have replies to go to you by email, rather than be posted, use the word "poster" instead of the name of a group. Such a line appears in the headers of this article.

One of the few examples of productive cross-posting is with the rec.radio.info newsgroup. To provide a filtered presentation of information articles, while still maintaining visibility in their home newsgroups, the moderator strongly encourages cross-posting. All information articles should be submitted to the rec.radio.info moderator so that he may simultaneously cross-post your information to the appropriate newsgroups. Most newsreaders will only present the article once, and network bandwidth is conserved since only one article is propagated. If you make regular informational postings, and have made arrangements with the moderator to post directly to the group, please cross-post as appropriate.

That's mixing your metaphors; very bad form, LRod.

You also, in previous posts, have used a plural pronoun when the singular form was called for.

> Why don't you try to make one simple post with all spelling and grammar

It's also bad form and against Netiquette, as long as a writer's meaning is clear, to engage in spelling or grammar flames, unless the person being critiqued poses as an authority on such matters.

As for myself, I claim no knowledge beyond what grammar school should teach everyone, and freely admit I make spelling and usage errors from time to time.

In your post, you pointed out nine specific spelling or grammar errors and made even more general assertions about those subjects, even going so far as to search for, read, and extract 11 separate "rileygotcha" posts from the last month so that you could offer us your wise corrections thereof.

It does seem to me that you've engaged in an oddly disproportionate amount of effort merely to refute Mr. Gotcha's latest taunts. So I think that, in the commonly understood meaning of the expression, he did indeed "get your goat."

To your credit, despite your errors and gratuitous insults against your perceived "enemies," you are a far better writer than most on this forum, and could certainly have achieved at least an A minus at my junior high school.

By the way, as long as you are mounting the stage in your critic's costume, I am wondering if you find any of AF2Y's posts, which are filled with death and murder fantasies to say nothing of poor writing, worthy of your -- as you put it -- "cogent analysis" and "incisive reasoning"?

Cheerio,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Greetings.... I am putting together, after several years of having it apart, a Clipperton-L amp. I had put some of the spare parts in an envelope with the drawing of how the bandswitch was wired to the tank (I left the wires connected to the tank itself, just unsoldered them from the switch). Well the parts were found but no drawing!! The schematic is somewhat ambiguous as to what wires go where...ie. L1 on the schematic has 2 wires coming from it but on the actual tank there are 3. It's also possible that I may have gotten the orientation of the rotary part of one or more of the wafers 180 degrees out. All this info was on that lousy scrap of paper that is gone, probably forever. If anyone has one of these amps and would be so kind as to pop the top of it and get me out of this pickle I would be very grateful.

Not when done for comic effect. "Mixed metaphors" is a description, not a proscription.

> You also, in previous posts, have used a plural pronoun when the > singular form was called for.

It's possible, but despite citing examples for each of your other points, you cited none here, rendering your assertion suspect. Or is accurate research an "oddly disproportionate amount of effort" to spend to make a point? Since I am retired, I have the time to spare. I needn't justify it.

> It's also bad form and against Netiquette,

"[B]ad form and against netiquette" is a false code claimed by people who are unable to render their thoughts in accurate and proper form.
Like it or not, I'm from the school that says, "you can't expect me to put much credence in your point if you can't deliver it in proper form."
You don't have to agree. However, I don't accept your "code."

> ...unless the person being critiqued poses as an authority on such

Had you followed the thread, and were it necessary for me to justify my posts, you would have noted that rg/pt/rd's alleged expertise in the creative process including form was the genesis of the exchanges.

> So I think that, in the commonly understood meaning of the expression, > he did indeed "get your goat."

You're welcome to think so, but if you are as clever as you purport to be, you will recogninze that one's "goat is gotten" only when one believes one's "goat is gotten." Therein is the gulf that separates me from rg/rd/pt. He thought his was, hence his responses; I couldn't care less.

> To your credit, despite your errors and gratuitous insults against > your perceived "enemies,"

Stupidity is my enemy. When I see it or hear it I gladly expose it. Your claims of my errors are a matter of style. Misspellings and fractured syntax are not.

> you are a far better writer than most on this forum, and could > certainly have achieved at least an A minus at my junior high school.

You may be aware that at this level of writing skill, neither attempted insults nor feigned (not faint) praise have any effect. At 53 years of age, I have long been aware of the quality of the weapons at my disposal, and have utter confidence in them. rg/pt/rd doesn't understand that, which is why he's still trying to wave a knife after the gunfight is already over.

Poor writing? Your analysis must be clouded by the reaction his writing apparently creates in you. That makes it effective. The key word, however, is "fantasies." As I said in another post, satire is utterly lost on most of those here. Apparently, you number among them.

Hello all!

Is there anyone who can give me more information about the Compact charger BC-10 from Kenwood?
The manual contains a table with charging times.

But there is a error in it I suspect:

it says the BC-10 should charge for 1 hour, while the BC-11 (there stated as the QUICK charger should need more time).

Does anyone have this thing or know more about it.
I use it for my battery packs for the TH-77.

Any comment would be welcomed!

Thanks a lot !

Will, good question. First, hams will have to stop modifying their vhf/uhf radios for police/fire frequency transmit and cellular telephone receive. Second, hams will have to stop modifying their HF radios for CB transmit.

The new HerbieServer software is almost ready for distribution. This Visual Basic application will allow anyone with a Icom radio to pass operation over to a internet connection via MP3 audio. To keep legal the control operator must click on "I have Identified" every ten minutes, keeping the connection alive. A log file is created that keeps a recored of the time and frequency of each transmission along with the IP address of the connected party. For an example of ham radio via streaming audio, try yp.shoutcast.com /talk. Look for the IJ repeater. The HerbieServer will allow a connection that can be controlled from the client IP machine. Out of town? Radio Stolen? No problem, use the HerbieServer!

I have a small business, and the main reason we've cut off contact with our customers, and made orders and customer service all automated, was because of the RUDENESS of the customers. The last incident was a threat of bodily harm to my son and myself, along with some racial slurs thrown in for good measure.

Doc just demonstrated another reason why we went automated: customers who want something for nothing. Why does Doc expect Kenwood to take up their valuable employee time to show him the step-by-step process to repair his receiver????

Then you have the people who feel because they've spent a buck or two with you(literally!), you owe them a lifetime of customer support.

The you have the "hand holders". You must take them step-by-step through the entire process of unpacking, assembling and operating the product....even if the instructions were written for TEN YEAR OLDS!

Then you have the catalog collectors and "window shoppers". Those people taking up your valuable time, but really won't purchase anything.

Why do I stay in business? Mainly for the many more who do write or call and give me that much needed pat on the back. But it's the assholes who can sure put a damper on my spirits. Going automated was the best thing for my mental health, and for the business.

This morning while in my treadmill, I had a wonderful QSO with Stan,K2SOP of South Carolina. One of the topics discussed was the impending resignation of the Major League Umpires on Sept.2. All are under contract throughout the '99 season therefore a work stoppage would land them in jail. Resignation is the only answer. They claim a Dangerfield,"They get no respect." Hell, watch any game and notice how many calls they blow. YOU RESPECT THEM! After my excercise concluded, I signed with Stan and guess what two dunces showed up on frequency, railing at AF2Y? KV4FZ and his sidekick, the guy who walks behind him carrying the toilet paper, KT4TR. I listened for 30 seconds and then activiated a knob on my rig that indicates ON, OFF. I simply went upstairs to take a shower. Let that be a lesson to all. Do not engage in arguments on ham radio. It's exactly what KV4FZ wants since he doesn't want to go out alone. Riley does NOT like on-the-air confrontation, feeling it's detrimental to the image of our hobby/service. Under different circumstances I would have taken on and and done away with those two lunkheads easily because of their low I.Q.s but why stir the pot? Keep in mind that when one is a pussycat like I and wants to maintain a peaceful demeanor on amateur radio, do not be goaded into an argument. Do as I did-walk away and take a shower if you feel dirty after excercising or just do anything elese to protect your ticket while leaving the instigators to blow their guts out endangering their ability to retain a ticket NOW while certainly murdering their chance for renewal at the time of expiration. Use digression. Stop your transgression. Here use expression and don't worry about suppression and keep the crap off the bands. Become as I've become-a model ham who used to have a bad temper on the air but no longer. Keep in mind the following:if the FCC is displeased with you NOW but doesn't do anything about it,what's to stop them in the future? Haven't they been pulling rabbits out of hats i.e. using what might be considered by hams as minutia to invoke their wrath? If they want you, they WILL GET YOU one way or the other and if it's not now,it'll be later. Get on the air; have a QSO and when someone tries to goad you into battle, WALK AWAY FROM IT. IT DOES NOT BELONG ON HAM RADIO. This public service announcement has been brought to you by the finest ham in North America and a loyal supporter of the FCC, FDR, FBI. ATF,AAA, ADL,NAACP, Pope John Paul II,Brother Elevator, the Three Wise Men a.k.a.KC3AU,WA8PBM and 6Y5GR and Mother Mangiotti's Mozzarella Sauce. AF2Y, Doc

Here's a bit of repartee between my dear friend and colleague LRod and that slimeball Kevin "Stromitler," WB4EIEIO. Now much of what I write has a satricial "lilt" to it. Before I comment further, taker a gander of these two going at it. I'm mentioned. Here goes.

Poor writing? Your analysis must be clouded by the reaction his writing apparently creates in you. That makes it effective. The key word, however, is "fantasies." As I said in another post, satire is utterly lost on most of those here. Apparently, you number among them.

The Quiet Gentleman

Now K4QG knows darn well that I am a satirist and finds no offense to it. But let me clarify something, sir. When it comes to that Nazi bastard from Rochester Minnesota, Strom, I am neither satirizing nor joking. I want him to end up facing to the sky with an FBI bullet bullet between his eyes. Why? Because he's no run-of-the-mail hatemonger as is for example N0VFP. Strom is for real. He poses a danger to this country as skillfully attested to by Raymond Franklin. Strom is an agent of very dangerous white extremist, government hating, anti-Semitic elements who want to DO IN this nation. The guy may look like a joke to anyone flushing down his home page, but he's real, he's dangerous and in time, his radicalism or he himself must be destroyed to keep America viable. AF2Y,Doc

I was in two different Pennys stores in the Detroit area last night (7/11) and both stores had the Freeplay AM/FM radio on sale. It is going for $59.95. Not a bad price I'd say since I paid $70.00 from Universal Radio in May.
BTW I do not work for Pennys, just thought that others would like to know about this.

Ya know Burt, I used to enjoy reading your responses and your wit. But it seems they have dried up and you have resorted to being predictable and a bore. Don't take it personally, I am only stating a fact here. And, you are very anti-social.

Due to the above I am using the BLOCK_SENDER feature on my newsreader client and will no longer see any of your dribble. Well I guess as you (because you think you're clever) change from "imfamous" to some of the other domains you use some of your stuff will get through. Unfortunately, since I am canceling my subscription I wouldn't feel it fair to read any more of your dribble but to add them to the kill file list also.

Tim,

The schematic will not show the actual number of turns on the tank coil.
The simplest way would be to set the bandswitch to either 10 or 160.
The entire coil will be on 160 and the smallest amount of coil/turns will be for 10 meters. Just line it up like that. Also you will find that on the LOWER FREQ. bands there will probably be a capacitor or two that is switched in/out on the low bands ONLY.

No I didn't. In the first place, we aren't required to register firearms. In the second place, if we were, the number which identifies the firearm is its serial number. It doesn't have a SSN.

Now registering those people who wish to concealed carry a firearm (any firearm) is a different matter. To get a concealed carry permit, we have to submit our fingerprints to the State Police, but they don't ask for our SSN either. They don't care what our federal retirement annuity situation is, and by law the SSA isn't supposed to tell them anyway. Nor do they care what makes and models of firearms we may decide to carry. They just run our prints to see if we have a felony criminal record that would disqualify us from being issued a concealed carry permit. (If you don't wish to carry concealed, no permit is required. And unless you're a stupid criminal, you won't apply for one, you'll just carry anyway. So the whole system is inane.)

Use of the SSN for identification purposes is forbidden by law, read the back of your SS card. However, that law seems to be widely ignored. The feds, the states, and even private agencies seem to think that it can be used as a federal identity card system. You aren't required to let them do that, however. The IRS will issue you a TIN different from your SSN if you request that they do so. States will also issue you a separate number for your drivers license if you request that they do so. They can't require you to use your SSN. The only agency that can require you to use your SSN is the SSA.

It is a nuisance to have to remember several different numbers, so lots of people just use their SSN for everything. But that isn't required, and if you dislike the idea of easing the job of snoopers who are trying to compile a dossier on you, you don't have to let your SSN be used for that purpose. (Not that it makes any practical difference today, computers can cross reference several numbers nearly as easily as they can one. It had more meaning in the old days of paper files and lists.)

The club station equipment and antenna status is currently unknown, but the FT-1000D and tri-band yagi are supposedly operational. The amplifier is said to be 'fried'. Bill will check the station status this trip, and if necessary, return with whatever is needed to operate the lowbands. It is believed that Bill will have NH6D/KH3 up and running on 160/80/40 meters before the September/October lowband season begins. Dick states that he will try to keep everyone informed of station status and progress. By the way, Bill prefers CW, but does operate some SSB. QSL to N6FF.

LIGHTHOUSE ACTIVITIES. There will be two upcoming events in August which involve lighthouse operations: The National Lighthouse Weekend (August 7-8th) and The International Lighthouse Weekend (August 21-22nd). Both are described on the "Ham Radio Lighthouse" Web page at:
http://www.waterw.com/~weidner/ld.htm
Also, check the listings on pages 71 and 93 of the August QST. If you are planning a lighthouse activity and wish to be listed on the Lighthouse Page, send details to Jim Weidner, K2JXW, USA Coordinator for National/ International Lighthouse Weekends, at : K2JXW@amsat.org
Please give location of lighthouse, frequencies, call, dates, and QSL info.

OTHER POSSIBLE NEW? Reports during the week indicate that Montenegro has been conducting talks with Serbia and they want independence from Yugoslavia. Check out the Web site:

QSL INFO AND NEWS.....
3B9R QSLS. The QSL cards for the recent 3B9R Rodrigues Island DXpedition are expected from the printers in Japan next week. Cards will begin to be processed at that time. QSL via Joyce Johnson N7LVD, 5627 West Hearn Road, Glendale, Arizona 85306.

Station 4U1UN which was activated on July 14th by Fritz, DL4TT, MUST (REPEAT MUST) be QSLed to the United Nations Headquarter: P.O. Box

3873, NY 10017, USA.

Sam, V63KU, will close his operation at the end of June, 1999, and the P.O. Box in V63 will also be closed. Please send any QSL claims after closing to JA6NL through JARL (JA's QSL Bureau).

Andy, SP6ECA, reports SN6F/1 (1998) QSL status is that all cards have been mailed, directs and via the DARC bureau. In case of problems, please E-mail Andy at: asadow@ita.pwr.wroc.pl
QSLs for SN6F/1 (1999 operation) are via SP6ECA, bureau or direct and will be 100% confirmed.

Peter, DL3APO, informs OPDX the QSL cards for FO0AWI and FO0XUU are ready and Gerd, DL5AWI, has started to answer the 5000 request. Also, Peter has sent OPDX a picture of the QSL and it can be seen on the Web at: http://www.en.com/users/k8yse/rurutu1.jpg

Olda, OK1YM, reports that he is not the QSL Manager for John, SV1DKR. Olda has operated from John's station from time to time and usually announces his activities via InterNet. However, he has been receiving some QSL cards addressed to his home address but has never been active as a QSL Manager for SV1DKR. Plese send all QSL via SV bureau or direct to SV1DKR: John Kyriakos, 4, El. Venizelou str., C.P. 173 43, ATHENS, GREECE.

Alan, VK8AV, reports that rumors that he will never answer QSL via the Bureau is not altogether true. Alan informs OPDX that he presently has 7 kilos of QSLs which have been built up over the past year while he has been away. Alan states, "I may get around to answering them - sometime.......eventually. However, a direct QSL with the appropriate SASE will get a response within 48 hours. Together with the special Alice Springs Telegraph Station postmark where possible. By the way, 'green stamps' are more negotiable than IRCs." Again, VK8AV's direct address is: Alan R. Viegas, P. O. Box 3718, Alice Springs NT, Australia 0871.

Karl, DL2FAG, reports the QSL cards for the S79YL, S79ZG and S79FAG activity have arrived from the printer, and the QSL Manager, DL7AFS, has started to answer all direct QSL requests. Please be patient and do not send a second QSL. Bureau cards will be answered later this year.

Charles, K4VUD, reports that the 9N7UD QSL cards for direct requests have been filled out and mailed. Charles states, "However, a few of the 15 meters CW QSL cards I sent have a minor error -- the freq. is mistakenly listed as 21.224 instead of 21.024 and the date and time is about six hours off. All these "errors" do not matter to the DXCC desk, as far as I can see, because the band is correct, the mode is correct, and the year is correct. So, I would advise, relax and enjoy the card."

Laurie, VK4BLE, WIAQ QSL Bureau Manager, reports QSL cards for VK4CEJ and VK4DZ are to be sent direct to John and Graeme only. They both do not wish to accept any QSL cards via the bureau.

VK4CEJ - John Caine, PO BOX 80, LAIDLEY, 4341, QLD, AUSTRALIA.
VK4DZ - Graeme Bracht, PO BOX 24, LAIDLEY, 4131, QLD, AUSTRALIA.

Doug, N6RT, reports that the 1997 and 1998 logs for VK9LX are now online at: http://dx.qsl.net/logs

Soni, PY1SL, states that he is not the QSL Manager for S0WW. This station is pirate.

SPECIAL EVENT. The Grumman Amateur Radio Club will operate WA2LQO on July 20th to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Landing on the Moon. The station will operate from the Bethpage, NY building where all the Lunar Modules were built by Grumman. Operation will be on 10/15/20 meters, propagation permitting. For a special QSL card, send a SASE to the CBA of WA2LQO which is: GRUMMAN AMATEUR RADIO CLUB, 70 DEWEY ST., HUNTINGTON, NY 11743 USA. SWL cards will gladly be honored. (No Buro cards can be accepted).

SPECIAL EVENT. Special event station VC6MP will operate July 24-25th, to commemorate the 125th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police March West (details at http://www.lis.ab.ca/march125/links.htm). There are no specific frequencies and times of operation at this time, but activity will be on HF bands as time and operators permit. QSLs for VC6MP can go direct to the VE6 QSL Bureau: VE6NRJ Neil Jensen, EPO Box 57205, Sherwood Park, Alberta T8A 5L7 (please note - this callsign has nothing to do with VE6MP, it is a special callsign just for this event. VE6NRJ who is also the VE6 incoming bureau manager will forward the cards to the FSARC. The usual assistance with postage would be appreciated). VC6MP is sponsored by the Fort Saskatchewan Amateur Radio Club (http://www.tgx.com/ftsask.arc/index.htm) and will operate from the contest station of VE6JY (some pictures are available at: http://139.142.37.100/~ve6jy http://www.av.bc.ca/ve6jy.html

T88, PALAU. Jim/JA3AJ/N7EIU and Kazu/JA3ART/N3JJ will be active from here September 15-19th. Callsigns to be used are T88MM (Jim) and T88JJ (Kazu). They will be active on HF (w/500 watts) all bands and 6 meters (Mainly on 10/6m). QSL to each home call address or via JARL QSL bureau.

V26, ANTIGUA. Darrell, AB2E, will again be active as V26E from the V26B supersite from August 11-17th. He will enter the WAE CW Contest August 14-15th, and would request that stateside not try to work him during that time. He will be on plenty before and after the contest, mostly on the WARC bands, and will try 160 since there are a pair of new fullwave beverages at the site. QSL this and all V26E operations to the home call, AB2E.

V7, MARSHALL ISLANDS. Dave, V73UX, has been active on 20 meters SSB between 1100 and 1400z. He has also been heard on RTTY around the same time. Also, there have been reports that he recently put up a 3 element Yagi for 40 meters. NO QSNs reported for this band. QSL via V73AX.

XW, LAOS. XW8INH was active over the past weekend on 17 meters (18135 kHz) between 1245 and 1330z. Reports indicate that Motoaki, JH1EDB, who is currently living in Vientiance, is the operator of this station. However, the callsign belongs to Mr. Inh, the Manager of the KPL (Khaosane Pathet Lao) the official news agency in Loas. Motoaki may be using this station because foreigners are not permit to receive their own licenses. QSL via JM1GYQ.

XX9, MACAO. Ed, K8EP, will be travelling to Macau over the period of August 18th through the 23rd. He will be operating as XX9TEP. His operation will be CW and SSB on 80-10 meters. There is some activity planned for the SEANET SSB Contest. QSL is via K8EP.

The next opetration should be July 28th. The callsigns to be used will be either ZC4ATC or ZC4RAF, and the operation will be either CW or SSB. The club also hopes to be operational for the CQWW SSB Contest. There will be more detailed news on this later. Additionally, there are or will be ZC4ATC operations (all night) on or around the last of Friday each month. More info will be sent out later.

ZM, NEW ZEALAND. "The 59(9) DXReport" states it has been reported that ZL stations may use the ZM prefix from October, 1999, through March, 2000, for the Millennium.

Calm down. No need to raise your voice. Guess I hit a nerve, eh?

There are literally hundreds of amateur radio nets concerning chess, gardening, guns, astronomy, cars, math, cooking, scuba, and on and on. But placing ads on here stating that such subjects or even that such nets will be discussed on some shortwave frequency is ridiculous.

>Stop trying to police the group, Herman!!!

That's too strong; "reminding" is more appropriate. Get used to it.

>It's NOT moderated!!!!

That's bloody obvious. A moderated group works like this: You submit an article for approval -- the net-news software directs that article to the moderator(s) via email; the proposed article's content is examined, and if it meets the NG's guidelines, it's allowed to posted and will then appear on the NG. Otherwise, it gets trashed and no one ever will see it.

ISPs know the importance of an unmoderated NG's charter, and how annoying off-topic articles can be to the majority of readers. You weren't around when the charter for this NG was voted upon. If you don't like the current charter, write your own and go through the proper channels to seek it's approval. Good luck, though -- you'll need it. You won't get past first base.

>If you want a moderated group, go put YOUR OWN together and see how many >show up!!!

I was here first, and I'm not leaving. I invite you to create your own group and see how many show up. (Seeing that the majority of the follows/ addicts of the Liberty Net [what ever it is] are SWLs, rec.radio.shortwave would be an alternative to the futile attempt of creating your own NG.)

Mario you summed it up quite well.......my feelings exactly. I have nothing against CW as a mode. I would feel badly if that mode was eliminated from those who choose to use it. It really is a silly licensing requirement and quite frankly I think 90% of the die-hard CW fans know it to but won't admit it. It is exactly the same as forcing someone to learn to drive a horse and buggy before qualifying for an automobile driver's license. The CW die-hards cannot refute this logic. I am all for CW as a mode but it is a stupid licensing requirement.

As a long time advocate of CW telegraphy, and a skilled operator of same, I must say it is time to retire Morse as a REQUIREMENT for a HF License.

Why would I say such? Not because so many want it. Not because so many are too lazy to learn it. Not because it would contribute to the dumbing down of the service. But because we need to move on. As a suggestion for possible discussion, may I elaborate a bit.

1. What is wrong with reducing the cw segements to 25 or 50 kc? (depending on the band of course).

2. What is wrong with requiring ONLY a familiarity with Morse? I.E. 5 WPM?

3. What is wrong with making CW a ENDORSEMENT to one's license?

ETC ETC

If anyone care's to carry this on, start up another segement.

You mean you'll leave me out of your lies, slander, and defaming?

That's the third funniest KK7HO quote I've ever heard. The funniest was when you stated a year ago last May that:

"NONE, I repeat None of their accusations or lies can be backed up with evidence, but mine can!"

The second funniest was your long and loud complaining that W1WCR was offering to send the "dangerous chemical" dihydrogen monoxide through the mails.

I think I will pass on your proffered "deal"; not only does it seem unlikely that you will change your habits and keep your word this time, but I prefer your continued public revelation of your true character.

It does seem odd for a person who repeatedly claims that he is exposing a terrible "evil" to offer to stop his exposure, if only the "evil" ones will leave him alone.

May I suggest that if you hadn't chosen to join the campaign of malicious and deliberate interference by K5BLB, the existence of which you've tried to justify but have never denied, the legitimate operators on 3950 would never have even heard of you?

Naturally, if you show up almost daily for months on end, egging on BLB's music and noise tape playing and other infractions, you are going to be a topic of discussion among the victims.

With good wishes to all,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Who do you blame for the ongoing 14.313 controversy?

Thanks,

Listen up you ignorant lying s.o.b. It's WHOM do you blame, not WHO ? Marty, why don't you take your troublemaking ass out of here. You've been nothing but a lying deceiving psycho ever since I knew you. Fabricating the most bizarre stories about persons using your credit cards and how you loathed KV4FZ and how much you cared for WB2OTK and all the rest of your rotten bullsnot. And remember when you wrote on behalf of Bill Irwin,K3CQR,a.k.a."Raincoat Charlie" in order to get his fine reduced? I have a copy of that letter in which you labeled KV4FZ and his loonie tunes characters nothing more than neo-Nazis dead set on baiting and antagonizing. What a treacherous louse you turned out to be. And how about the time you were supposedly dying from "heart and lung cancer" and had KC3AU pray for you, as if he had any influence with God? What bullcrap you toss, you Horrendous Hoosier! And you were the guy who came from Morgantown,WV and was the only Gentile who made Bar Mitzvah there? What a whopper that one was. Hell, I could go on and on with your garbage, including how you gave the name of Gil's vessel,Baltija, to the morons Ed Clark and Mike Galego. Only two persons knew the name of that vessel and you can bet the farm that I sold no one out. Marty, you are one mentally ill dude who can't distinguish fact from fiction.You're ill as I told Rich-YOU CAN'T BE TRUSTED. Hell, if he had taken your advice vis a vis Riley Hollingsworth, he'd be off the air for God knows how long. The advice you gave him would have exacerbated rather than ameliorated the problem thereby giving your mentor, Herbie Hitler, the last laugh. Well Fartin' Martin-the joke's on you because I convinced Rich to stay clear of you which he did and he'll probably be back on the air quicker than you anticipated. I'd shake Herbie's hand before I'd ever get remotely close to you because he's been a clear and distinct enemy for years. He does NOT slink around pretending to be this and that. On the other hand, you're a snake who deserves to be decapitated. Of all the loathsome creatures slithering around 14.313, you are number one!**

1765. Connecting Oscilloscope to HF Rig

I'm trying to find information on connecting my Oscilloscope (HP 1740A, 100Mhz) to my HF Rig (Kenwood TS-850SAT). I'd like to view the actual keying waveforms on the scope and see the waveforms of the received signal also.

Does anyone have any suggestions?

Hey Tony
I have the board out of a TS-930. I have heard that they are the same and or interchangeable. I have kept mine alive for a year just fixing holes after holes in the board. The baord is a 2 layer board that uses holes with solder filling them to make contact. Not a good Idea. Well mine is out of the rig and I have ordered a new board from a guy at PIEXX co. http://www.conknet.com/piexx
They might be able to help you out.

Hi Kevin. Thank you for the information. :) I'm assuming then that it looks like the following:

```
+-----+ +---------+
| RIG |-(coax)-+--| Antenna |
+-----+ | +---------+

<R>

<C>

Where <R> is the 47k 2w resistor and <C> is the capacitor

I agree. :) This is why I want to be able to do this. heh

The Kenwood TS-850 actually has an IF output interface on the back of the rig. I believe that I can perform what you did above through this interface. If so, that'll make things pretty easy :)

Thanks Kevin. :)

Well the FBI shooting him would make them Nazis as well as anyone trying to silence someone from speaking their mind.

I have never heard anything close to "Nazi" on the air.

The only place Ive heard blatent racism at all was on 3894.5. The No Black STump Dumblers deal with Phil.

I dont always agree with Valentine or with Liberty net.I see no reason why folks of a patriot mentatlity cant hold a net and speak their minds about the new world order,trilaterals,Federal Baby Incinerators, Bat Fags (batf) or whatever!

I intend to take this issue on the air with Mark Koernke on the Intelegence Report.

Mark likes to orchistrate telephone call ins across the country.

Take it from Jack, we can do anything. That's why that damn fool nephew of mine didn't file a flight plan and flew with a year's experience on a tip pilots with 12 years experience declined.

Heck, my brother displayed that can-do attitude when he, ah, declared wah on the moon.

My brother took us to the brink of world annihilation without actually doing us all in. You folks have to see what your country almost did for you.

Nevermind we were going to head into a bunker in West Vahginuh and leave you non-royals out to bake. The important thing is, because of a family history of testosterone imbalances, we scared the crap out of Khruschev. I ah, in fact, ah undrstand his son just became a U.S. serf- er, ah, citizen.

Doc, I heard the entire conversation on 14313 yesterday, and I must add a few facts to your ramblings. I did hear kt4tr break in to the freq after you had signed out and he was perfectly legal. He made a comment that was to correct your otherwise incorrect understanding of the baseball situation. As I recall you stated that the umpires resigned after their agreement was up with major league baseball, this statement that you made was incorrect and the comment that TR made was absolutely correct. The umpires are under contract through the entire season which includes the 1999 playoff schedule. Upon reading your ramblings I noted that he had a positive effect on your understanding of the baseball situation. You noted in your posting that the umpires are under the contract exactly as kt4tr had stated. Pay more attention to this guy Doc you will learn something. You are still upset that he has kicked your ass every which way that it could possibly be kicked. I have to commend kt4tr for his continued efforts to only tell the truth. He caught you in those lies of your education and he exposed the truth about the Medal of Honor that you falsely claimed with WB9BCC. Credit goes to KT4TR.

DON'T EVER think that the value of a piece of gear doesn't enter into the equation when figuring the repair costs. The repair station WOULD NOT charge $198 to replace 2 diodes in a 7950 2 m radio.....more than the value of the radio. A close friend sent his FT1000D to the repair station and the resulting bill was $650 to replace 4 diodes. When he raised hell,the bill was reduced to $275. There IS a relationship between "value" and "cost"! Regardless of what you've been led to believe, the "BIG THREE" have NO heart! Leon KE4GG

Chess games take place on amateur radio, but placing notices of regional chess tournaments on here would be off-topic. Field Day certainly interests and affects more hams nationally than the Liberty Net (what ever it is).

Some people seem predisposed, when they hear someone criticizing Jewish organizations or the Jewish establishment, to hear things that were never actually said. (I will add that some of the jammers do throw provocative catcalls onto the frequency sometimes, including crude racial insults and references to violence, apparently to stir things up and smear the legitimate participants.)

Did you know that several 3950 participants are Jews themselves?

When there is political disagreement, and especially when the media have demonized certain points of view, there is a tendency to make unwarranted assumptions about what the other fellow "actually means."

This was emphasized recently when the obsessed KK7HO posted a recording of AA8DP on his or his anonymous friend's web page, claiming that AA8DP was bragging about "running Blacks out" of his county.

Actually, anyone who listens carefully to the recording can tell very easily that AA8DP was talking about Communist "civil rights" agitators being run out of the county _by his rural Black neighbors_, who wanted nothing to do with them.

Similarly, I've called attention during on the air discussions to the actions of the Jewish establishment which, in my opinion, have harmed my nation and people, by pointing out statements made by Israel Shahak, Benjamin Freedman, Noam Chomsky, Alfred Lilienthal, David Ben-Gurion, and other Jewish authors and thinkers.

I've learned that even when Jewish sources are quoted on these matters, the accusations start. Apparently, to some, Jewish groups and Jewish power should be above criticism.

And it's natural, I suppose, that many unthinking people will have that attitude, regrettable as it is.

After all, if nearly half of all media executives in the United States were of Serbian descent, we might expect "anti-Serbianism" to be the sin that gets you shunned if not set upon by all "right-thinking" people, and the many wartime deaths of Serbs to be the subject of endless lawsuits, reparations, and Oscar-winning movies.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

Yes, field day does affect more hams than does any net.

But a radio program about any aspect of amateur radio is relevant here.

Your chess tournament example isn't analogous. What would be analogous is an article or broadcast about "Chess via Amateur Radio." Placing a notice about such an article or broadcast would be quite appropriate here.

With my best wishes,

Quite a good software requirments spec!

Heh, heh. . . .

Answer is . . .

Too much development work, market is too small!

There are a lot bigger fish to fry if you'r a good software developer!

Why not just develop your own? Why? Well. . . just because you are a radio amateur. It's a tradition!

And then . . . publish it in QST, CQ, 73 or maybe Dr. Dobb's Journal, just for the fame, and for all of us other amateurs to use for free!

There is a college dropout who hangs out in WA, and who happens to be the world's richest man [Net Worth ~ $100B!], who has figured out that there is no money and glory in developing software for radio amateurs, heh, heh.

What we need are more Phil Karn's in this world, God Bless KA9Q!

That's right Henry - surely with Riley on them about cleaning up their act they will cool their heels temporarily but we all know that some are members of the KKK, National Alliance, western Imperative netwerk, Ernst zundel, Holocaust Revision, etc. etc. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure this out. It may though take one to figure out WHY they are.

Kevin is called a LIAR in virtually every newsgroup he posts in. Just do a search of his name in deja and look around. SEE the Pattern. I will suggest this again to ALL lib NITS and their croanies. Leave me out of your LIES, SLANDER and DEFAMING remarks and I will do the same. Last offer.

The first time the wonderful self-cleaning oven appeared on this NG, it cost $2700. The second time it appeared, the cost had escalated to $3,100. Now, it's up to $8,300.

Damn!! This clown failed 'rithemtic as badly as he failed spelling.

I would correct the spelling in his post but to do so would take the rest of the day. Besides, my old granddaddy once told me:
"Son, stop going down to the barnyard and wrasslin' with the pigs. When you do that, everyone gets dirty, you don't solve anything, but the pigs just love it."

I know what you mean. I can't believe the non-stop news coverage of this thing. I mean, of course it's a tragedy when these things happen, but the news media is acting like the king just died! I almost puked when I saw Dan Rather's eyes tear up.

You can bet your arse that if it was a right-wing patriot that died, the news media would only give it a passing mention. The news media's obsessive coverage of this thing is VERY REVEALING about our so-called "free" press. The New-World-Order crown prince dies, and his loyal subjects in the news media hold a continuous tribute to him.

My appologies in advance for what may appear to be some ranting on my part, but attitudes like this are exactly why there's such a shortage of ham radio related software...

I'd suggest taking a look at MultiMode, http://www.blackcatsystems.com/software/multimode.html, but you're running the wrong OS. ;-)

Yep, sound input...

Of course, plus ACARS, FAX, several tone modes (DTMF, EIA, CCIR, etc), SITOR, FFT, Hell, PSK31, and more.

Since it's so simple to write, I presume you've already started work on it, and should be releasing it later this week? But to answer your question, it's only $45.

So people can download it, and use it forever, without compensating the author for his efforts? How long are you going to evaluate it for, 10 years? It's a proven fact that "pure shareware" doesn't work. I've tried it. As soon as I "crippled" my software (purely by adding a small nag and session timeout, although you can run it as many times as you want), my registration rates more than tripled. You do the math.

How do you go from ham radio being "non commercial" to the idea that those who write ham related software should be slaves, working for free? Or actually, at a loss. Now, if you'd care to buy the compilers and other programming packages, copies of all the programming books, supply the computers and other hardware necessary to write, debug, and test the software, as well as fund the internet sites that host the ftp download areas, and pay the bills for the ISP that provides dialup so said ham software can be uploaded for you to download, send me some email and we'll talk.

I guess you've also contacted Kenwood, Icom, and others, informing them that they too should stop making a profit from their business activities?

x&v:

Exactly how many UNIDENTIFIED jammers has Hollingsworth caught & prosecuted since CIB's much vaunted "ham radio clean-up" started almost a year ago?
It seems to us that Happy Hollingsworth has done a half-ass job of going after stations using a CALL SIGN, but what about those who conceal their identity by not using a call sign? Exactly how many UNIDENTIFIED entities has Happy caught AND prosecuted?

Answers please?

ME THINKS THE ANSWER IS Z E R O !!!!!! which means, don't wanna get caught? don't use a call sign. The CBers are years ahead, they came to that conclusion in the 70s when they stopped using their FCC assigned call signs.

It's not absurd, it's economics. The more copies you sell the less you have to charge to cover your costs plus a reasonable profit. Amateur radio is a limited market therefore you have to charge more per copy unless you're willing to work for free. Actually, amateur programs are extremely economical considering the limited sales potential. I doubt anyone has ever gotten rich writing software for ham radio (personally, I figure I have worked for about ten cents an hour). I've seen programs for other limited markets that sell for a thousand or more dollars per copy. I'm sure Norton Utilities took a lot more time to write than some of these but then Norton sells a lot more copies. The problem is that people who don't understand programming and software development perceive that the value of software is about the cost of the floppy disk it comes on.

Jeff,
Not only is it the extent of his ham experience, it also seems to be the extent of his life experience. If Loyd would just channel some of the energy he expends in this NG into positive things such as learning CW he would have more self esteem and quit his abhorrent behavior in this NG. I was wondering if the powers that be can remove trouble makers from this NG? This group needs to be cleaned up.

You need to do a little more homework, if you would bother to read a bit more and listen to the Liberty Net a bit less you might learn that:

The FCC issued an official Notice of Violation in June to General licensee Paul Edward Holcombe, K4TOF, and the same to Robert L. Myers, N5WLY for alleged willful and malicious interference and for allegedly failing to identify while operating on a 2-meter repeater. The FCC also levied a $20,000 fine to a Florida man for unlicenced operation on Amateur frequencies. An NAL was sent to William Flippo of Jupiter, FL

So you see, Mr. Hollingsworth is doing much more than meets the eye, although I'm sure whatever he does wont meet your expectations of what you think he is supposed to do.

I'm not suprised so much ham radio stuff is in DOS. I've worked in both, DOS and Windows professionally and for just banging out little programs for fun, DOS is hard to beat. So, if I don't expect to be paid, or like it's something for my own personal use, I usually go back to DOS, that is Watcom protected mode DOS.

Loading up Visual C and all that is such a hassle and pain, and it's so slow, I'd rather not touch the thing unless I'm getting proper American dollars up front. If you're dealing with weird hardware, Windows is doubly hard to work with because of the need for writing VXD's -- and learning that is, like serious, "do this stuff for a living" kind of code. Not something you're going to pick up on your spare time.

As an aside, I'm not sure what it is in Visual C that's so slow.
